

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

P R E F A C E.

THE preparation of the present volume of selections from the Private Orations of Demosthenes has, amidst many interruptions, extended over several years, and occupied much of the little leisure available after the discharge of other duties. It may be regarded as only a partial and imperfect result of a series of special studies on Greek and Roman Rhetoric, undertaken in several courses of College lectures on selections from Lysias, Isocrates and Demosthenes, and also on the Rhetoric of Aristotle and the Orator of Cicero. My earliest interest in the Private Orations may be said to date from the time when it was my privilege as an undergraduate to attend, about ten years ago, a course of lectures by my friend Mr Moss, then Fellow and Lecturer of St John's College, and now Head-Master of Shrewsbury School. His selections included two of the six speeches edited in the present volume, the Nicostratus and the Conon; but, as the notes taken down from his lectures were too scanty to form even the basis of any attempt at constructing a complete edition, my commentary on those speeches has been mainly the result of independent reading and research, though I gladly acknowledge the help that is due to his soundness of judgment on several points on which I have consulted him while revising my notes on the Conon. In the case of the Nicostratus, when my own commentary was nearly ready for the press, I had the further advantage of attending in the spring of 1874 some of Dr Kennedy's professorial lectures on the Private Orations. From the excellent translation of his brother Mr Charles Rann Kennedy I have here and there quoted a few extracts; and if I have now and then drawn attention to an apparently erroneous interpretation, I have done so with the consciousness that in each case it is only a trifling blemish in what is nearly perfect of its kind. Similarly, several questionable explanations, retained even in the latest edition of Liddell and Scott's Lexicon, have been duly pointed out in the course of my commentary, as it is only thus that a labourer in a limited field can offer any acknowledgement of his large indebtedness to their labours. The lexicography of Demosthenes cannot indeed be said to be at present in a completely satisfactory condition, as general lexicons have still to rely in a great measure on Reiske's Index Graecitatis, which, with the portion of his Opus magnum including his notes on the speeches in this volume, was posthumously published exactly a century ago.

The volume opens with a speech on behalf of Phormio, in bar of a claim on the part of Apollodorus for the recovery of capital alleged to have been transferred to Phormio by Pasion, the father of Apollodorus. This is followed by two on behalf of Phormio's opponent Apollodorus, charging with false witness one of the deponents called on Phormio's side in the previous trial. These three speeches, though not actually delivered in the same lawsuit, virtually represent the arguments of the two opposite sides, and a comparison of their conflicting statements has an interest similar in kind, though different in degree, to that derived from reading the longer and more important orations of Demosthenes, On the Embassy and On the Crown, in contrast with those of his great rival Aeschines. The orations of Antiphon, the earliest of the Attic Orators, include indeed four tetralogies, or quartettes, of ingenious speeches written for the prosecution and the defence in cases of homicide, but his cases are merely imaginary, and the orations are intended as rhetorical exercises alone. The first three selections in this volume supply us with the only instance in all the remains of Attic oratory, where the legal issues raised on both sides in a suit of purely private interest, lie before us as they were actually presented to an Athenian tribunal. Whether Demosthenes actually wrote for both sides is a vexed question, briefly discussed in the course of the Introductions; it is a question that has provoked a large number of dissertations, the titles of which I have recorded on a page devoted to a conspectus of the literature of the subject up to the present date. But the volume now published, while it happens to be the first English commentary on any of the selections included in it, is also the first attempt either in England or elsewhere to put together an edition of all the three speeches in question in their connexion with one another¹. As compared with the work demanded by the second half of this volume, where I have been conscious of moving more freely over ground familiarised by more frequent reading of that portion with private pupils more than five years ago, and for public lectures at a later date, the task of writing the first half has proved a somewhat tedious one, owing partly to the necessity of constantly keeping in view all the nine speeches in which Phormio's opponent, Apollodorus, is more or less directly concerned, and of forming an opinion on the numerous points of

Those who, after finishing the pro Phormione, do not care to study minutely the whole of the two speeches against Stephanus, ought, at the very least, to examine the vigorous attack on Phormio which extends from § 71 to § 82 of the first of those two speeches, and should also endeavour to obtain a connected view of the argument by reading consecutively the italicised abstracts inserted at suitable intervals in the course of the commentary. With the help of these abstracts the general reader, the barrister, for instance, who has not remembered all the Greek of his younger days, may perhaps, if tempted to dip into these pages, form some opinion of his own on the forensic oratory of Athens; but my more immediate object in this part of my work has been to obviate any occasion for unduly burdening the notes with those literal renderings which are always welcome to students of the less industrious sort, by supplying instead (as the occasion requires) either a free paraphrase or a condensed summary, which may legitimately lighten their labour without giving licence to their idleness.

The latter half of the volume includes the Nicostratus, which was delivered by the same speaker as the two orations against Stephanus, namely by Apollodorus, and also the Conon, which is certainly one of the most celebrated of the minor speeches of Demosthenes. To these selections, both of which throw much light on the social life of Athens, I have added the Callicles, which, though less well known than the others, will be found one of the pleasantest, while it happens to be the shortest, of all the Private Orations.

The first volume of selections from Demosthenes, published by the University Press in 1874, included the speeches contra Phormionem (Or. 34), Lacritum (35), Pantaenetum (37), Boeotum de nomine (39), Boeotum de dote (40), and Dionysodorum (56). In the preface to that volume it has been already explained that the two volumes are a joint edition on the part of Mr Paley and myself, and I may here repeat that while Mr Paley was mainly responsible for the previous part, I am similarly responsible for all the Introductions and for nearly all the notes of the present, though I have had the advantage of receiving from him a careful revision of all the proof-sheets of my commentary, and a large number of supplementary annotations, many of which have been incorporated with my own, and duly acknowledged by being placed in square brackets and followed by his initial.

INTRODUCTION TO

OR. XXXVI

ΥΠΕΡ ΦΟΡΜΙΩΝΟΣ.

IN the early part of the fourth century B.C. there was a noted man of business at Athens, named Pasion. Originally a slave in the employment of a firm of bankers, by his industry and integrity he won the confidence of his employers, Antisthenes and Archestratus, and was rewarded by receiving his liberty from the latter and by succeeding both of them in their business¹. In the Trapeziticus of Isocrates, he appears as defendant in a suit brought by the son of a trusted minister of Satyrus, prince of Pontus, and is charged, whether rightly or wrongly, with appropriating a sum of money deposited with him by the plaintiff, with destroying documents detrimental to his own interests, and with other sharp practice of a somewhat unscrupulous character. To examine the justice of these charges is no part of our present duty, nor indeed have we the data for arriving at any decisive result; suffice it to say that, in the language of his very opponent in that action, he is described as one of those bankers who enjoyed a wide connexion and had the management of large sums of money, and whose position as men of business had won them a general confidence².

§ 48; and Büchsenschütz, Besitz und Erwerb im Griechischen Alterthume pp. 500—510.

The speech composed by Isocrates probably belongs to the year B.C. 394, when Pasion, though no longer a slave, was only a resident alien (μέτοικος)¹; at a subsequent date, on rising to the privileged position of enjoying as a denizen (ισοτελής) such civic rights as were not of an expressly political nature, he acquired some property in land, and distinguished himself by his public spirit, on one occasion in particular presenting the State with a thousand shields from his own manufactory, and five triremes equipped at his own expense². In recognition of these services, Athens rewarded him with the rights of her citizenship³.

Among those who had business relations with him we find Athenians of high position like Timotheus, the celebrated general⁴, and Demosthenes the father of the orator⁵; his bank in the Peiraeus enjoyed, in the Euxine and elsewhere, a credit co-extensive with the commerce of Attica; even eight years after his death, Apollodorus, of whom we shall hear more anon, had only to declare himself as Pasion's son to be at once enabled to raise a loan in a foreign land⁶; and in later ages, in the imaginary letters of Alciphron, the Atticist who in the latter part of the second century of our era attempted to revive the memories of the times of Menander, we find the vulgar money-lender contrasted with a banker of blameless reputation, who bears the appropriate name of Pasion⁷.

Pasion, in his old age, finding his eyesight failing him, and being only able to walk with difficulty up to Athens from his bank in the Peiraeus¹, four or five miles distant, transferred his business, including not only his bank but also his shield-manufactory, on lease to his managing clerk Phormio², who, like his employer, was himself originally a slave³ and obtained his freedom as the reward of honest service⁴. We read of him as a generous and energetic man of business, and his skilful management is said to have been the very saving of the property of his former master⁵. From the nature of the case, and from certain chronological considerations besides, it may be concluded that the lease to Phormio belongs to a date before, but not long before, Pasion's death in B.C. 370⁶. In B.C. 372, we find the latter still managing his business on his own account⁷, and we may therefore fix on B.C. 371 as the probable date of the lease. Pasion left behind him a widow, Archippe by name⁸, and two sons by her, the elder, Apollodorus, who was four-and-twenty years old at his father's death⁹, and the younger, Pasicles, who came of age eight years after (namely, in B.C. 362)¹⁰. In his will he provided that his widow should be married to Phormio, with a dowry of two talents (about £486), a dwelling-house valued at one hundred minae (about £400), maid-servants, gold ornaments and all that formerly belonged to his wife¹¹. this will, Phormio also became one of the guardians to Pasion's younger son, Pasicles. He was to continue lessee of the bank and shield-manufactory until Pasicles came of age, and it was the father's wish that until that time the property should remain undivided. Owing, however, to the extravagance of the elder son, the guardians, acting in the interests of their ward, determined on a partition of all the property, with the exception of the bank and shield-manufactory leased to Phormio, half the rent of which was paid to Apollodorus, and half reserved for Pasicles, the minor¹.

Apollodorus was at Athens in B.C. 370 and appears to have been present at his father's death-bed², and some time after this, he was abroad in the public service as trierarch, probably in the year B.C. 368³. It was during his absence that, in accordance with his father's will, his mother was married to Phormio; the son, on his return home, resented this arrangement, and as the courts were not open at that time for private lawsuits, he took steps to bring a public indictment against Phormio, for criminal outrage on his mother (γραφὴ ὕβρεως). However, a reconciliation was brought about and the charge was not pressed⁴.

In B.C. 362, when Pasicles came of age, his guardians gave an account of their trust, which was acknowledged as correct, and Phormio's lease of the bank and manufactory terminated with a discharge given him on the part of Apollodorus from all liabilities under the lease. The elder brother then, having the prior choice, took the manufactory, leaving the banking business to his younger brother⁵. For a short time the brothers appear to have superintended their property in person; but not long after, possibly a year subsequent to the partition, a new lease of the bank was granted to certain persons, who jointly paid each of the two brothers a talent a year (£486 in all), a sum less by two-thirds of a talent (£163) than the rent paid by Phormio¹. This second lease was granted not by Pasicles alone, but by Apollodorus acting in conjunction with his younger brother, either to protect his inexperience, or (it is to be feared) to take advantage of it, since we observe that though the bank belonged to the younger brother, the elder had his reward in the receipt of half the rent paid by the new lessees².

Phormio, meanwhile, being quit of his trust as guardian, and of his lease of the bank and manufactory, established a banking business on his own account, and, like his former master, Pasion, obtained a recognition of the general esteem in which he was held, by being presented with the citizenship. The date of this event was B.C. 361³. In the year B.C. 360, after a protracted service as trierarch in the northern Aegean and the neighbouring waters, Apollodorus returned to Athens to find his mother at death's door; she died six days after; but not before she had seen and recognised her son, though according to his own account she was unable to make such provision for him as she had intended⁴.

The mother's death was the signal for a fresh outbreak of the differences between Apollodorus and his step-father Phormio. The step-son put in a claim for 3000 drachmae (about £120), which was submitted to arbitrators, who established the claim and induced Phormio for quietness' sake to pay it to Apollodorus. The latter then gave Phormio a second release from all claims⁵.

⁵ Or. 36 §§ 15—17.

Phormio, however, had not yet seen the last of his litigious step-son; the latter, after numerous lawsuits with his father's debtors, in which he succeeded in recovering no less than 20 talents (£4860)¹, was at last prompted, by pecuniary exigencies due to his extravagance, and by feelings of envy at Phormio's prosperity, to put in a claim about twenty years after the father's death for another sum of 20 talents, alleged to have been transferred to Phormio by the father as part of the working capital (ἀφορμῇ) of the business².

The defendant expected that Apollodorus' contention, that Phormio must have received such capital, would be supported by presumptive proofs alone. He would argue that, without such a fund, it was incredible that Phormio, who was merely a liberated slave, should have managed the business and risen to opulence, while he himself, a rich man's son, had been reduced to penury (§ 43). To give stronger proof than these a priori probabilities had been made impossible, he would assert, by Phormio's having induced his wife to destroy Pasion's papers (§ 18); he would also denounce the lease and the will as forgeries, and would make out that it was only while Phormio promised him a high rent, that he kept silence on his claim, but as he had not fulfilled these promises, he was compelled to bring the case before the court (§ 33).

The arguments here anticipated by the defendant appear again in the first speech against Stephanus (Or. 45), a speech arising out of the present lawsuit. The case

² Why twenty talents were claimed does not appear, but we may conjecture that that amount arose out of the eleven talents mentioned in Or. 36 § 11, with the addition of interest. Phormio's lease lasted for 8 years; 11 talents, at say 10 per cent. simple interest (not an uncommon rate at Athens), would with the interest amount to exactly 20 talents in 8 years (and a fraction of a year over, $\frac{1}{4}$).

came in the first instance before an arbitrator, Tisias¹ by name, but was left undecided by him, and was accordingly brought before a public tribunal. The writer of the Greek argument, generally supposed to be Libanius, calls the suit a δίκη ἀφορμῆς, though it has been doubted whether there is any ancient authority for the existence of such a suit under that designation². However, the phrase ἀφορμὴν ἐγκαλεῖν occurs in the speech itself (§ 12), referring to the plaintiff's claim to the capital of the bank.

To meet this claim, Phormio, instead of waiting for the plaintiff to bring his case before the court and then confronting his opponent with a direct denial and joining issue on the merits, preferred putting in a special plea in bar of action, a plea technically known in Greek law as a παραγραφή, shewing cause on the part of the defendant why the case should not be allowed to come on for trial at all. The two pleas urged on the defendant's behalf are (1) that the plaintiff had given him a discharge from the original lease of the bank and manufactory, and also a second discharge from a subsequent claim settled by arbitration (§§ 23—25); (2) that the plaintiff's suit contravened the statute of limitations, in which the term of five years was fixed as a sufficient time for injured parties to recover their dues, whereas the plaintiff was putting in a claim after the lapse of more than twenty years from the date of the lease (§ 26). To maintain these pleas is the object of the speech pro Phormione, though it is only a small portion of it that is directly concerned with them, such technical pleadings being naturally unpopular with juries, who regarded them as mere makeshifts, to gain time and evade the ends of justice. Hence a large part of the speech is devoted to arguing on the case itself, thus proving that the defendant's resort to special pleading was not due to any fear of meeting the plaintiff on the main issue. All this was of course irrelevant to the real question before the court, and counsel would hardly be permitted by any judge now-a-days to travel so widely out of the 'record.' In such a case, the defendant spoke first¹; thus, while he was under the slight disadvantage of the onus probandi, he had on the other hand the benefit of the first hearing, and might at once produce a favourable impression of the strength of his case, which would put a stop to further litigation.

Phormio, being of foreign extraction and unpractised in public speaking, does not address the court in person (§ 1); his friends speak in his stead, and the case is opened on his behalf in an oration composed but almost certainly not spoken by Demosthenes², which forms the first of the selections included in the present volume³.

¹ See note on Or. 36 Arg. line 25 ad fin. The writer of the life of Demosthenes in the Orations on the Crown published by the Clarendon Press appears to have overlooked this in stating: 'it is clear that in the speech to which Demosthenes, in behalf of Phormion, composed a reply, Apollodorus had dwelt much on the fact of Phormion having been his father's slave' (p. xxxiii). Apollodorus did not address the court at all; he could not speak before the case for the special plea had been opened on the side of the defendant, and the jury would not listen to him after.

² The contrary might be inferred from the language of Deinarchus contra Dem. § 111, (Δημοσθένους) λογογράφου καὶ μισθοῦ τὰς δίκας λέγοντος ὑπὲρ Κτησίππου καὶ Φορμίωνος (Cf. p. xxxviii). But the authority of Aeschines, in a speech delivered only seven years after the pro Phormione, supports the opinion expressed in the text, de fals. leg. § 185, ἔγραψας λόγον Φορμίωνι (cf. Or. 46 § 1 οἱ γράφοντες καὶ οἱ συμβουλευόντες ὑπὲρ Φορμίωνος). Lortzing, Apoll. p. 14, who agrees with A. Schaefer, Dem. u. s. Zeit. p. 169.

³ It is unnecessary in this place to give a detailed account of the speech itself, as its contents are analysed in the italicised abstracts printed at con-

The speech contains several notes of time which approximately determine the date of its delivery. In § 26 we are told that 'more than twenty years' have elapsed since the lease granted by Pasion; in § 19 we find that 'eighteen years' have passed since the partition of the property effected by the guardians in consequence of the extravagance of Apollodorus; and in § 38 the same period is described in general terms as 'about twenty years.' Pasion died in B.C. 370 and the above indications point to the year B.C. 350 as the probable date of the speech. As we have already observed, the lease would be granted to Phormio before B.C. 370, and probably after B.C. 372, i.e. in B.C. 371. Thus 21 years would have passed since the grant of the lease. At first sight the term of eighteen years above mentioned might seem to point to B.C. 352¹, but it appears certain that the partition of property was not effected immediately after the death of Pasion; as some allowance must be made for the time during which the extravagance of Apollodorus was running its course (§ 8), before the guardians came to the conclusion that a partition of the property was inevitable; and the term of eighteen years is reckoned, it will be observed, not from the death of Pasion but from the division of his estate.

Again, the speech of Apollodorus against Nicostratus, § 13, shews that after his return from his Sicilian trierarchy which on independent grounds may be placed in B.C. 368, he was not yet in possession of his share of the estate, as he was compelled to raise money on the security venient intervals in the course of the commentary. The reader who desires a general view of the drift of the argument may do well to read all the abstracts consecutively before settling down to the perusal of the

of his house and to pledge some of his plate; we may therefore conclude that the partition was not earlier than B.C. 368, and the 'eighteen years' bring us once more to B.C. 350 as the date of the speech.

Further, the lease of Phormio lasted eight, that of the subsequent lessees, ten years; but it would be far from correct to assume that this points to the lapse of only eighteen years from the death of Pasion to the delivery of the speech, and consequently to B.C. 352 for the date of the latter; for (1) the previous lease began before the death of Pasion, (2) the subsequent lease does not appear to have followed immediately on the expiration of the first lease¹, and (3) the second lease had terminated before the date of the speech². The date B.C. 352, besides being open to the objection that the phrase 'more than twenty years' has to be explained away as a round number, in other words as equivalent to less than twenty years, only just allows time for the two leases, with no margin over, either for the interval between the first and second, or for the further interval after the second; while B.C. 350 is consistent with both these data³.

The only difficulty in our accepting this date arises from the reference to Callippus in § 53, as then alive in Sicily. Now Callippus left that island for Rhegium in the spring of B.C. 350 at the latest, and was killed in the same year. This would reduce us to the alternative of either supposing that the news of these events had not yet reached Athens, or resorting to the heroic remedy of striking out the words as spurious¹. Otherwise, it may be worth while to suggest as the date the latter part of B.C. 351; this would involve our reckoning the term of 'more than twenty years' from the beginning of B.C. 371 to the end of B.C. 351 inclusive, and similarly the eighteen years from the partition would be counted inclusively from B.C. 368 to B.C. 351.

The speech is undoubtedly the genuine work of Demosthenes; this is proved not only by the testimony of Aeschines² but by the frequent quotations of ancient lexicographers and grammarians, and the internal evidence is equally conclusive. It holds a high place in his Private Orations; among the merits of its earlier portions may be noticed the closeness of its reasoning and the lucid arrangement of its argument, while its later portions are rendered interesting by the strong invective of the personal attack on the plaintiff and the dignified tone of the appeal to the court in favour of the defendant. All the points are supported by evidence, and except where the public services of the defendant are apparently unduly depreciated³, there is every evidence of fairness on the part of the speaker. It is a forcible oration, in which we clearly recognize the characteristic feature that gives Demosthenes the superiority over Lysias, the great master of clear narration, and over his own instructor Isaeus, the best lawyer of all the Attic orators, namely, the ethical warmth of colouring, by which the dullest details are lit up with a fresh life and interest¹.

The result was decisive; the court, according to the statement of Apollodorus himself, upheld the plea of the defendant, and refused to listen to any reply on the part of the plaintiff. More than four-fifths of the jury must have voted for the defendant, as we learn that the plaintiff was condemned to pay the ερωβελία, i.e. a sixth part of the twenty talents claimed, a fine amounting in this case to about £810. We are not surprised to learn that the plaintiff left the court in high dudgeon (Or. 45 § 6).

ΨΕΥΔΟΜΑΡΤΥΡΙΩΝ Α.

THE effect of the verdict given in support of Phormio's special plea in bar of the action brought by Apollodorus, was to prevent the latter from raising the same issue again, except in an indirect manner. It was still open to him to bring an action for false evidence against the witnesses on whose testimony Phormio had relied; such an action was known as a δίκη ψευδομαρτυριῶν, and if the plaintiff made good his case against the accessories, he could next proceed against the principal who produced them, by an action for subornation of false witness (*δίκη κακοτεχνιῶν*¹); and in the event of his succeeding in the latter, he might then bring forward afresh his original suit (in the present instance a δίκη ἀφορμῆς).

Apollodorus accordingly brought an action for false testimony against one Stephanus, who was called on Phormio's side in the previous trial. This witness deposed to neither of the points on which the special plea was raised; he was neither produced to prove the date of the original lease, shewing the lapse of the term fixed by the Athenian statute of limitations, nor did he give evidence to the release and quittance effected between

Apollodorus and Phormio; he simply attested a point which was, strictly speaking, irrelevant to the special plea and really belonged to the main issue. He was called, with others, to prove a legal challenge¹ given by Phormio to Apollodorus, demanding that, if the latter declined to admit that a document put in evidence by Phormio was a copy of Pasion's will, Apollodorus should himself open the original; he deposed that Apollodorus declined to open it, and further that the said copy was a counterpart of the original².

The plaintiff denies that any such challenge had been made and declares that his father left no will. He contends that (1) had the challenge been given, there could have been no reason for his refusing to open the document (§§ 9—14); (2) it was unnecessary to demand his acknowledgment of the correctness of a copy, when according to his opponents the original might have been readily produced (§§ 15—19); (3) the terms of the deposition were false because it assumed that Pasion made the will alleged, whereas he made no will at all; its terms ought to have run, not 'the will of Pasion,' but 'the will Phormio asserts to have been left by Pasion' (§§ 24—26). His argument on these points is a singular combination of shallowness and subtlety³, as may be seen in further detail by referring to the italicised abstract of the somewhat difficult sections here referred to.

He next argues that the terms of the 'will' prove it was forged by Phormio in his own interests (§§ 27—28), that the 'will' was inconsistent with the 'lease,' that the latter was also a fabrication (§§ 29—36), and that the discharge pleaded by Phormio was false (§§ 40—42). In anticipation of the defendant's probable reply, that his responsibility is limited to two points only, (1) Phormio's giving the challenge, and (2) the plaintiff's refusal of it, the plaintiff insists on binding the defendant to the exact terms of his testimony (§§ 43—46). He further submits that, if in the reply any attempt is made to denounce his original action as fraudulent, all such reference to the past must be suppressed by the court as irrelevant to the issue before it (§§ 47—50). If the defendant urged it was not his own evidence, bearing as it did on the main issue, but that of those who gave witness to the special plea, that was fatal to the plaintiff in the former trial; the answer was, that the evidence on the main issue crippled his case on the special plea (§§ 51—52).

At this point the speaker passes off into petty personalities of a curious description, denouncing the defendant for giving false evidence against him, regardless of the family tie of Apollodorus' marriage with a first cousin of Stephanus, and thus transgressing what he calls by a rhetorical flourish the unwritten laws of natural affection (§§ 53—56); he declares and very inadequately proves, that a legal document on which he had relied in the former trial had been stolen by Stephanus (§§ 57—62); denounces him for truckling to prosperity, for selfishly disregarding the rights of the poor and the claims of the public on his ample resources (§§ 63—67), for his sour and sullen unsociability, and for his merciless extortion as a miserable money-lender (§§ 68—70).

Turning then from the nominal defendant Stephanus to his principal, Phormio, who is the real opponent in the present as in the previous lawsuit, he launches out into a vigorous invective against him, for his gross ingratitude towards the speaker's family who were the very founders of his fortunes (§§ 71—76), contrasts his own orderly life and public services with his opponent's immorality (§§ 77—80), charges him with appropriating money that belonged to Pasion, from whom all his wealth had originally come. Born a barbarian and sold as a slave, he had yet had the audacity to criticize the antecedents of the plaintiff's family (§§ 80—82).

After an ungenerous and gratuitous insinuation, to account for his younger brother Pasicles taking Phormio's part (§§ 83—84), he turns to the jury, reminds them of his father's benefactions to the state, implores them to protect him from one who was once a slave to his family, and from that slave's creature Stephanus; and, while reminding them incidentally of some of the points on which he relied, concludes by claiming a verdict against the man who, by his false evidence for Phormio, had robbed him of his revenge in the previous trial (§§ 85—88).

The defendant Stephanus replied at considerable length¹. The purport of his defence appears to have been very much what the plaintiff had anticipated in §§ 43—46. In particular, he contended that he was responsible for attesting to the challenge alone and not for any further details incidentally included in his evidence. The existence of the will had been attested by other witnesses than himself, and the court's acceptance of Phormio's special plea was due to their evidence on the main issue, and also to the evidence given by others on the plea itself, proving the original lease and the subsequent discharge.

OR. XLVI

ΚΑΤΑ ΣΤΕΦΑΝΟΥ

ΨΕΥΔΟΜΑΡΤΥΡΙΩΝ B.

THE reply of Stephanus is followed by a second speech on the part of the plaintiff, Apollodorus, in which, in contrast to the presumptive proofs and the passionate declamation of his former effort, we find, in a far less lengthy and less ambitious form, little more than a series of technical arguments supported by quotations from such parts of the Athenian code as appeared to bear, however remotely, on the case in question.

He charges the defendant with having given 'hearsay evidence' and cites the law against it (§§ 6—8); declares that Phormio, under the mask of the defendant's deposition, has given evidence in his own cause, which is illegal (9—10); he even deduces the falsehood of the deposition from the material on which it was inscribed; instead of being written hurriedly on an ordinary wax-tablet to attest on the spot a bona fide challenge, it was drawn up in a more permanent form implying a deliberately fraudulent design (11). He attempts to prove that his father made no will at all, and quotes a law forbidding a man's making a will if he had male issue lawfully begotten (14), and further urges that his father was disabled from disposing of his property by his 'adoption' as an Athenian citizen—a legal quibble arising from the ambiguity of the term relating to adoption, which really refers to the family and not to the state, as the plaintiff disingenuously implies; he also insinuates that his father was debarred from making a will by being under undue influence and of unsound mind (15—17); he further contends that his mother was technically an 'heiress,' and by law held in ward by her nearest relative, namely himself; that her marriage was therefore invalid, being made in his absence, without his consent and without any legal adjudication, and that Pasion's disposal of his wife by will was thus illegal (18—23); that the father's 'will,' if ever made, was vitiated by the fact that there were sons of full age now surviving (24); and that the defendant and Phormio had conspired to defeat the ends of justice (25—26). After a parting sally on Phormio for his disregard of the laws, and a final thrust at the defendant, defying him to shew how he could possibly have known that the document attached to his challenge was a copy of Pasion's will, which he had never seen, and after also asserting that no one ever had a copy made of his own will¹, but kept it by him till his death, he concludes by asking the court to grant him the redress demanded by the claims of justice and the laws of Athens (27—29).

Thus the plaintiff assigns four legal reasons in support of the plea that Pasion's will was a forgery: (1) he was a citizen by 'adoption'; (2) his widow was an 'heiress' legally at the disposal of her son and not her deceased husband; (3) he had legitimate sons, both of whom were now grown up and their coming of age would invalidate any will on the part of the father; (4) he was of unsound mind. On these four points we have only to remark that the first rests on a verbal quibble². (2) There is no indication elsewhere in other speeches of Apollodorus that his mother was technically an 'heiress,' indeed there is reason to suspect that she was not even a native of Athens at all (§ 23); besides, as regards the alleged invalidity of his mother's second marriage, the plaintiff had already in his former speech expressed his acquiescence (Or. 45 § 4). (3) The intention of the law was that if a father, having legitimate male issue, made a will independent of their interests, the terms of the will as affecting other persons were to become valid in the event of the male children dying before they came of age. Thus a father could not disinherit his lawful heir, but he was not prevented from making a will in which the rights of the heir were duly regarded¹; and indeed, we find that Apollodorus and his younger brother had divided their father's estate between them, and that the former in particular had succeeded to a dwelling-house which was once his father's property. (4) The suggestion of lunacy is inconsistent with Apollodorus' own description of his father's last illness in another speech, by which it appears that he was then clear-headed enough to give his son a particular account of all the sums due to him from his numerous creditors².

On the whole it is obvious that the plaintiff must have been conscious of having a very bad case indeed, and that to maintain it he was compelled to resort to the most contemptible subterfuges³.

The date of the two speeches must be placed shortly after that of the speech in the suit between Apollodorus and Phormio, i. e. very soon after B. C. 351 or 350.

On the authorship of the Two Speeches against Stephanus.

We have seen that the authorship of the speech pro Phormione is undisputed; it is doubtless the genuine work of the great orator himself. Whether he is also the writer of both, or at any rate the first, of the two speeches against Stephanus, and of the others delivered by Apollodorus, which have come down to us among the works of Demosthenes¹, is a vexed question, an exhaustive treatment of which would demand an elaborate treatise beyond the compass of the present introduction. All that can here be offered is a brief discussion keeping in view, and where necessary correcting and supplementing, the arguments suggested by previous writers on the subject, and tested by the results of an independent investigation.

In the speech pro Phormione the case is supported by two important documents; (1) the lease granted to Phormio, (2) the Will left by Pasion. In both the speeches against Stephanus (a witness, it will be remembered, in the former trial), the lease and the will are denounced as a fabrication and a fraud; more than this, while in the previous oration a warm eulogy is passed on the career of Phormio as a blameless man of business and as a generous citizen of irreproachable character, in the two latter the speaker avails himself of all the artifices of subtle insinuation, all the vehemence of unscrupulous invective, to paint his opponent's character in the darkest colours. The question arises whether the two latter speeches, or either of them, could have been written by the same person as the former.

Narrowing the enquiry for our present purpose to those speeches alone which Apollodorus delivered against Stephanus, we may in the first instance examine the external evidence (whether contemporary with Demosthenes or not) which may be adduced in support of the genuineness of the two speeches in question. In Schaefer) are Or. 52 πρὸς Κάλλιππον, B.C. 369—8; Or. 53 πρὸς Νικόστρατον, after B.C. 368; Or. 49 πρὸς Τιμόθεον ὑπὲρ χρέους, B.C. 362; Or. 50, πρὸς Πολυκλέα περὶ τοῦ ἐπὶ τριηραρχήματος, about B.C. 357; Or. 45 and 46, κατὰ Στεφάνου ψευδομαρτυριῶν α' and β', about B.C. 351; Or. 59 κατὰ Νεαίπας, after B.C. 343;—Or. 47, κατ' Εὐέργου καὶ Μνησιβοῦλου was delivered after B.C. 356, but not by Apollodorus, though it was probably written by the same orator as most, if not all of the above-mentioned speeches, and possibly by Apollodorus himself.

the first place we must set a passage in Aeschines in which he denounces the orator as a traitor, charges him with writing for a pecuniary consideration a speech for Phormio the banker and with shewing this speech to Apollodorus, who was then prosecuting Phormio on a charge imperilling his status as a free man¹. Here it will be remarked that the description of the trial is vague, and the penalty, to which Phormio would have been liable, much exaggerated; but it is more important to notice that Aeschines says nothing of Demosthenes writing a speech for Apollodorus either in the lawsuit with Phormio, or in his subsequent suit against Stephanus; if Aeschines is speaking the truth, then at the worst all that he says is, that, in his opinion, Demosthenes acted in bad faith by betraying his client's interests and allowing his opponent to become informed of the arguments which would be brought against him. But it may be noticed that this course is not necessarily inconsistent with good faith on the part of Phormio's friend, as the orator may have seen no reason for concealing his client's case from his opponent,—especially as the speech on that client's behalf would be the opening speech, and the case would be in no danger of being damaged by any previous attack on the part of the plaintiff. Demosthenes may have been anxious to reconcile the parties and, if possible, to put an end to a quarrel which was threatening the disruption of Pasion's family; and so strong was his client's position, that to inform Apollodorus of the case against him and even to shew him the very manuscript itself with the friendly advice to drop the lawsuit, would have been no detriment to Phormio's interests².

Considering all the calumnies raked up by Aeschines against his great rival in the two orations de falsa legatione and contra

² A. Schaefer, u. s., III. 2 p. 178, and Rehdantz there referred to.

Ctesiphontem, we venture to think that, if he had had any ground whatever for asserting that Demosthenes actually wrote a speech for Apollodorus, and virtually against Phormio, though nominally against one of his witnesses only, he would certainly have seized his opportunity and made the very most of so damaging a fact. But he says no such thing; and even Deinarchus, another strong opponent of Demosthenes, makes no such charge against him, though he has an opening for so doing in a passage in which he refers to the orator's 'delivering' a speech for Phormio¹.

Later writers, however, though less likely to be familiar with the facts, are bolder in their denunciations; in Plutarch's life of Demosthenes, we read that the orator 'is said to have written for Apollodorus his speeches against Phormio and Stephanus, for which he justly fell into disrepute, as he also wrote a speech for Phormio in his lawsuit against Apollodorus.' He adds, with a reminiscence perhaps of the trade of the orator's father, 'it was as bad as selling swords to both sides from the same manufactory'².

The insertion of the speeches against Stephanus among the works of Demosthenes may perhaps be accounted for by the conjecture that Callimachus, who, as head of the Alexandrine library, undertook the prodigious task of settling the canon

The bare addition ὑπὲρ Κτησίππου καὶ Φορμίωνος καὶ ἐτέρων πολλῶν is, he says, exactly what a grammarian would insert to remind his pupils of the speeches they

of the Attic Orators¹, may have been misled either by the passage of Aeschines above quoted, or by the partial resemblance of the first speech to the style of the orator, into supposing that Demosthenes himself was the writer; or again may have included them among his orations as illustrative of his genuine works. That there was once a time when Apollodorus himself was regarded as the writer of the orations spoken by him which have been handed down to us among the works of Demosthenes, may perhaps be fairly concluded from a scholium on the passage of Aeschines above referred to, noting 'from this it is clear that the speeches referring to the estate of Apollodorus are not written by him, but by Demosthenes²'. Thus, Plutarch's story of the duplicity of Demosthenes, which with slight variations is repeated by still later writers³, may have originated in a misunderstanding of the language of his enemy's accusation; the phraseology used by one of them in particular (Zosimus by name, a grammarian who, if we credit the conjecture attributing to him part of the scholia on Aeschines, may have actually written the scholium in question,) shews how easily, even before his time, Callimachus and Plutarch may have been misled by a careless expansion of the language of the orator's rival—language which we have little hesitation in regarding as the original source of the subsequent tradition⁴.

The argument from internal evidence is more intricate, and the style of all the orations delivered by Apollodorus has been discussed with much minuteness by several modern critics. Without entering, however, into undue detail on those speeches which are not included in the present volume, we may briefly state certain peculiarities of diction to which Arnold Schaefer, who, in his admirable work on the Life and Times of Demosthenes, was the first to treat the subject systematically, has specially drawn attention, as running through all the speeches delivered by Apollodorus, and distinguishing them from the genuine writings of Demosthenes¹.

We find, then, a feebleness of expression shewing itself in repetitions of the same word within short intervals from one another²; this clumsiness is most noticeable in the case of the pronouns οὗτος and αὐτός³. Again, clause after clause begins with the same relative pronoun, or the same hypothetical particle⁴. Such carelessness of expression is naturally attended by looseness of rhythm; thus, tested by the frequency of hiatus, the speeches delivered by Apollodorus are inferior in composition to the certainly genuine speeches of Demosthenes, though an exception must be made in favour of the first speech against Stephanus⁵. Even this speech supplies instances of unrhythmical construction⁶, and examples of anacoluthon or bad writing; and in particular an awkward combination of participles may be noticed in the first as well as in the second oration⁷.

⁷ Or. 45 § 83, Or. 46 § 13 (Lortzing p. 88, 89).

On passing to the question of the degree of mastery over the subject-matter and the general argument displayed in the various speeches, a distinction may be drawn between the earlier speeches on the one hand (e.g. those against Polycles and Timotheus) where the narrative is monotonous and tedious, and the conclusion somewhat lame and feeble; and the two speeches against Stephanus, which shew signs of an improvement which Schaefer ascribes to the prolonged experience in litigation which the speaker had enjoyed since his earlier efforts. The general style of all these orations, differing as it does from that of Demosthenes, and bearing marks of a kind of consistency of its own, points (so Schaefer suggests) to one person as the writer of them all, and that person in all probability Apollodorus himself. He often appeared before the law-courts not only in private suits on his own account, but also in public causes; and, when he was a member of the Council, he made important proposals, and brought them before the general assembly of the people. Even assuming that he resorted to others for assistance in his private lawsuits, yet, as soon as he appeared in a more public character, he would find it necessary to speak for himself, and without some oratorical ability he could hardly have undertaken so many public causes. In the second speech against Stephanus we find him pluming himself on his cleverness¹; and in that against Neaera he is called upon to address the court on behalf of a younger and less experienced speaker². Apollodorus obviously laid himself out for attempting to play a prominent part at Athens; in the pro Phormione the jury are specially warned against his loud and impudent self-assertion³, and elsewhere we even find him apologising for his loudness of voice (as well as his hurried gait and ill-favoured countenance), as his misfortune and not his fault⁴.

³ Or. 36 § 61, κραυγὴ καὶ ἀναλδεια.

⁴ Or. 45 § 77. A. Schaefer understands the passage differently; after referring to the loudness of voice attributed to Apoll. in Or. 36, he continues: 'Wenn dagegen Apollodor erklärt: Ich rechne mich selber, was Gesichtsbildung, raschen Gang und laute Rede betrifft, nicht unter die von der Natur glücklich begabten..., so will er damit nur ein selbstgefälliges prunken und stolzieren, von sich ablehnen ohne andeuten zu wollen, er sei Missgestalt

Such then is the general drift of the arguments, to which a brief sketch can only do imperfect justice, which lead Schaefer to the conclusion that the speeches against Callippus, Nicostratus, Timotheus, Polycles, Euergus and Mnesibulus; both of those in prosecution of Stephanus; and lastly, that in accusation of Neaera; which were delivered in the above chronological order between the years B.C. 369 and 343, were all composed by one person, who had a distinctive style of his own, and that person probably Apollodorus himself, with whose transactions no less than seven of these speeches are concerned.

The above conclusion is however open to criticism on the ground that it gives no adequate account of the incomparable superiority of the first speech against Stephanus, not only to the others delivered by Apollodorus, but in particular to the second speech in the very same trial. It is marked by a closeness of argument, and a forcibleness of invective, worthy of a far abler writer than the composer of the other speeches. It seems futile to explain this superiority by ascribing it to a gradual improvement in the speaker's rhetorical ability brought about by time and experience¹, when the second speech is so meagre and lifeless, and when the last of the series, namely that in Neaeram, instead of shewing any advance as compared with the first speech against Stephanus is certainly inferior to it, and is characterized by a diffuseness and laxity of style, and by other faults besides. And again, the explanation that the second speech is only a δευτερολογία, and therefore inferior to the first, is hardly adequate. Hence, while we would ascribe the second to Apollodorus himself, and find in its constant quotations from the Athenian code of law a characteristic touch, reminding us of his legal learning as attested in the oration in *Neaeram*², we are driven to the conclusion that in the first he had recourse to the assistance träges Schrittes und schwachstimmig.' This misses the sense; the words when taken correctly as in the text, confirm the quotation from Or. 36, and do not appear even remotely to contradict it. Cf. Lysias Or. 16 §§ 18, 19.

account for the greater polish of style shewn in Or. 45 by the fact that Apollodorus had the strongest motives for doing his very best in his opening speech.

of an abler rhetorician than himself. There is scarcely sufficient proof that that rhetorician was Demosthenes, though it must be candidly admitted that of all the speeches delivered by Apollodorus, the one that on personal grounds is least likely to have been written by the composer of the oration for Apollodorus' opponent Phormio, is less far removed from the style of Demosthenes than any of the remainder, though again and again we have words never used by the orator himself in his undisputed writings¹. In one passage indeed (§ 77) we have a close parallel with the Pantaenetus (§ 55)², which seems to point to a common authorship, and if the latter speech is rightly assigned to the year 346 or thereabout, in other words, is placed after the speeches now under consideration, we can hardly explain the parallel except by the hypothesis of a common source, or else by the less probable assumption that Demosthenes, who was almost certainly the writer of the Pantaenetus, having heard or read the first speech against Stephanus, a speech directed virtually against his own client Phormio, borrowed from the phraseology of the latter oration, with which he was thus familiar. The Attic Orator, Hyperides, is known to have written one speech at least against Pasicles³, who, though a brother of Apollodorus, took the side of his opponent Phormio, and a conjecture has been half hazarded that it was for Apollodorus that those speeches were composed⁴; but there is no adequate reason for assigning the first speech against Stephanus to that orator, and a comparison with his four extant orations has led me to notice only one important coincidence of expression⁵.

On the whole, then, we may conclude that the second speech was not only delivered by Apollodorus, but probably composed by him, that the first was written for him, probably not by Demosthenes, but by some rhetorician unknown to us, whose assistance he was led to secure either by the pressure of his other engagements, or by a consciousness of the difficulty of the task that was before him, and a mistrust of his own unaided ability to compose more than the legal rejoinder to the defendant's reply.

Those who attribute the speeches against Stephanus, or at least the first of them, to the authorship of Demosthenes, are bound to supply some reasonable motive for his changing sides after taking the part of Phormio against Apollodorus. If such a desertion to the enemy's camp was due to his discovery that the documents relied on in the first trial were forgeries, and that the deponents called to prove them were guilty of false witness, we cannot but think that Demosthenes, if he had been the writer of a speech immediately arising out of the former trial, would have been prompted to stronger expressions of indignation against the fraud practised on the jury on the previous occasion.

While we dismiss as irrelevant any attempt to try the alleged duplicity of Demosthenes by the standard of the professional etiquette of the English bar, and refrain from entangling our discussion with parallels suggested by questions of modern forensic casuistry, we may at any rate remark that, though we have no sufficient warrant for assuming that the orator was above pecuniary considerations, a certain sense of honour would probably have kept him from accepting a fee to write down the very side which he had but lately written up; and we may fairly conclude that such conduct was held dishonourable from the fact that even for divulging Phormio's case to his opponent, Demosthenes is, whether truly or falsely, charged by Aeschines with playing a traitor's part.

Again, it is urged that the first speech against Stephanus was written for a different trial to that on behalf of Phormio. This can hardly be regarded as an extenuating fact in favour of Demosthenes as the writer of the leading speech in both trials, since the second cause arose immediately out of the first, and there can be no question about the irreconcilable difference between the facts of the case as stated in the two orations, and the terms used in the one and the other in describing the character of Phormio. Even apart from motives of honour, the lower ground of expediency would, we presume, have sufficed to prevent Demosthenes from writing to defame the character of one who, by his opponent himself, was admitted to be a wealthy and prosperous man of business, and from supporting by preference the failing fortunes of an impoverished pettifogger.

Such, then, at the very strongest, are the principal arguments that may be adduced against the genuineness of the two speeches against Stephanus. In conclusion, it is only fair to submit the only hypothesis on which it is not impossible that Demosthenes may after all be the real author of, at any rate, the first oration.

We have already seen that it is highly probable that the speech against Phormio belongs to the latter part of the year B. C. 351 (p. xxvii) and that the speeches against Stephanus may be fairly placed in the year B. C. 350¹. It was a year in which the efforts of Athens to recover Euboea and to protect Olynthus placed her in a position of grave financial embarrassment. To meet this, Apollodorus, as a member of the senate, moved a decree that it should be submitted to the vote of the public assembly whether the surplus of the revenue should be paid to the Theoric fund for religious festivals, or applied to the expenses of the war. The proposal was approved by the senate and accepted by the public assembly; and the latter passed a decree appropriating the surplus to military purposes. Hereupon one Stephanus, who is not to be identified with the defendant in the speeches before us, impeached Apollodorus on the ground of his having brought forward an illegal decree; and he obtained a verdict, which led to the fine of one talent (£248) being inflicted on Apollodorus². In this impeachment, Stephanus was probably the tool of Eubulus and the peace-party, and although there is no proof that Apollodorus acted at the suggestion of Demosthenes and the opposite party, the proposal of Apollodorus would doubtless meet with the orator's approval, as is clear from the financial policy cautiously propounded by the latter in the Olynthiac orations³, and, when it was too late, carried to a successful issue twelve years afterwards in the autumn of 339, only one year before the catastrophe of Chaeroneia.

It may therefore be questioned whether political motives may not have induced Demosthenes to throw Phormio overboard and to support Apollodorus by writing the first speech against Stephanus. On this hypothesis it may be presumed that Apollodorus, having lost his lawsuit against Phormio owing to the powerful advocacy of Demosthenes, and being almost crushed by the consequences of his defeat, resorted to Demosthenes in the hope of recovering part at least of his resources, and proposed to run the risk of bringing forward his motion on the Theoric fund, on condition that the orator wrote him a speech against the obnoxious witness Stephanus.

³ Olynth. iii. §§ 10—13.

A suggestive letter from Dr F. Blass of Königsberg (the author of several important works on Greek Oratory) has recently reached me, supporting this hypothesis and also shewing that the style of the first speech against Stephanus, apart from its general resemblance to that of Demosthenes¹, coincides with it in a hitherto unnoticed peculiarity, that under certain limitations the orator generally avoids the juxtaposition of three or more short syllables, the exceptions being for the most part cases where the three syllables fall within the compass of a single word². To examine the minute criterion here proposed is beyond my present purpose; it is sufficient to state (as my learned correspondent would obviously acknowledge), that while its absence may suggest the spuriousness of any given oration, its presence does not prove its genuineness; and it is enough to admit that the testimony of Harpocration is in favour of the Demosthenic authorship of the first speech³ (though the value of that testimony is impaired by his attributing the second speech⁴ to the same author); and that the parallelism of § 77 to a passage in the Pantaenetus already noticed is on the whole more easily explained by ascribing the first speech to Demosthenes than by any other hypothesis.

OR. LIII

ΠΡΟΣ ΝΙΚΟΣΤΡΑΤΟΝ ΠΕΡΙ ΑΝΔΡΑΠΟΔΩΝ ΑΠΟΓΡΑΦΗΣ ΑΡΕΘΟΥΣΙΟΥ.

IN this speech Apollodorus, the litigious son of Pasion, appears in support of a lawsuit arising out of an information laid against one Arethusius, for refusing to pay a fine due to the public chest. According to Athenian law, if a state-debtor concealed his effects, any citizen who discovered the fact was at liberty to draw up, and lay before the proper magistrate, a written statement containing an inventory or specification of the goods in question. The schedule thus drawn up was called an apographê, and this name was also given to the legal process in support of it. The informant, in the event of his making good his case, was entitled to the reward of three-fourths of the valuation (§ 2); if he failed, he was fined a thousand drachmae (about £40), and suffered a partial disfranchisement which prevented his appearing again as a prosecutor in a public cause (§ 1).

In the present instance, Apollodorus has handed in a specification in which two slaves are stated to be the property of Arethusius, and therefore liable to confiscation as a partial payment of his debt to the public treasury. Hereupon, a brother of Arethusius, named Nicostratus, puts in a claim to the slaves, and in the speech before us Apollodorus has to shew that the claim is false and that the slaves are really the property of Arethusius. To prove this he calls evidence in §§ 19—21, and this is the only portion of the speech which is really relevant to the issue before the court, while the greater part up to this point is devoted to a narrative of the relations between Apollodorus and the two brothers, the object of which is to shew that the former had been most ungratefully treated by the latter, especially by Nicostratus, and that he was therefore, according to the Athenian notion, fully justified in revenging himself for his private wrongs by supporting a public information against his opponent. To prove the purity of his motives and to ingratiate himself with the court, he waives at the very outset his claim to the reward to which the informant in such cases is legally entitled.

In three of the speeches of Lysias, the promoter of an ἀπογραφή appears as a plaintiff; in the present speech we should probably consider Apollodorus as defendant and Nicostratus as plaintiff. In the three former cases, the speaker was not in possession of the effects disputed; in the latter he apparently was; his opponent Nicostratus puts in a claim against him, and the speech before us will, in that case, be a speech for the defence¹.

Apollodorus states that Nicostratus was his neighbour in the country and formerly his trusted friend, that they had done kindly services for one another, and that in particular he had lent to Nicostratus, free of interest, a sum which he was himself compelled to raise on the security of part of his property. So far from being grateful, the borrower at once laid a plot to escape payment of his debt, made common cause with the opponents of Apollodorus, and induced a third party (one Lycidas) to bring against him a suit demanding that certain property should be produced in court. Among those who were entered as witnesses to the delivery of the summons requiring him to appear in court, was Arethusius, a brother of Nicostratus, as above mentioned. The summons, it is alleged, was never served, consequently Apollodorus did not appear, and judgment went against him by default. Subsequently, Apollodorus prosecuted Arethusius for fraudulent citation (ψευδοκλητείας γραφή), which was regarded by Athenian law as a criminal offence, while on the contrary a witness in the cause itself as distinguished from one who attested a summons, was, if he gave false evidence, only liable to a civil action¹. Before the case came on, Arethusius committed several acts of outrage against Apollodorus, laid waste his orchard and violently assaulted him, and when the case for fraudulent citation, and apparently for the other criminal acts, was brought before the jury, Apollodorus, under these aggravating circumstances, obtained a verdict against Arethusius with the greatest ease. Indeed, it was only owing to the entreaties of his brothers, with the acquiescence of the prosecutor, who was unwilling to face the odium which would ensue, that Arethusius escaped the penalty of death², and had inflicted on him a fine of one talent (£243), for the payment of which his brothers became jointly responsible. Arethusius pleaded poverty and refused to pay; thereupon Apollodorus took the legal steps required (as above described) for the confiscation of his property, and in his specification claimed for the state, among other effects, two slaves as a partial security for the payment of the fine. Nicostratus resists this claim as

² Boeckh, Public Economy, ed. 2, i. p. 502, note g, while noticing that other criminal acts are involved, considers that the present passage proves that the punishment of death might be inflicted in a case of ψευδοκλητεία, but this seems scarcely probable.

regards the slaves in question and claims them as his own property, though even in that case, as the speaker points out, they should be confiscated, since Nicostratus had guaranteed the payment of the fine and had failed to make good his guarantee. In §§ 22—25 Apollodorus describes the unsuccessful attempt of his opponents to entrap him into accepting a legal challenge, which would have committed him to a virtual admission that the slaves were private property; and in §§ 19—21 calls evidence to prove, that the person recognized as the responsible owner of the slaves was Arethusius, and not the present claimant Nicostratus.

Passing from the general contents of the speech as above sketched, we may turn to a brief consideration of its literary style and special peculiarities. We are at once struck by the disproportionate space of twenty sections devoted to purely preliminary details, as contrasted with the short compass within which lies the real gist of the case. The long account of the reasons prompting the speaker to seek for revenge, is unlike the manner of Demosthenes, and a certain feebleness and diffuseness may be noted in the narrative immediately following the exordium. Among minor details may be observed a tendency to add unnecessary and superfluous clauses, defining more clearly what has just gone before¹. Again, we find needless repetitions within the compass of a single sentence²; further, we have a certain clumsiness in the ἐμπροσθεν χρόνῳ ἦν περὶ αὐτὸν ἀληθινὸς φίλος, are partially repeated in § 8 and § 12. Again in § 24, τὰς βασάνους is unnecessarily followed by the closer definition, ὅτι ἐκποιεῖν οἱ ἀνθρώποι. (Cf. A. Schaefer, u. s., p. 187—190; Lortzing, Apoll. p. 30 etc.)

repetition of pronouns such as οὗτος and αὐτός¹; we observe a disproportionate number of harah constructions², and it is curious to notice that a phrase occurring in this speech, which is unexampled in the undisputed writings of Demosthenes, finds its nearest parallels in speeches delivered like the present by Apollodorus³. We may also trace a general resemblance to the style of that against Neaera, the greater part of which was delivered by the same person, a speech which it is impossible to attribute to the authorship of Demosthenes⁴; and, lastly, there is a certain want of warmth in the peroration, unlike the vigorous style of the great orator himself.

On the whole, without entering into minuter detail, we may consider the internal evidence is such as to throw grave doubts on this speech being the genuine work of Demosthenes, and we are not surprised to find its genuineness called in question by the lexicographer of the Attic Orators, Harpocration⁵, though Plutarch refers it without suspicion to the authorship of Demosthenes, and fancifully contrasts the literary fame of the orator with general style, may be quoted Or. 59 § 16 αὐτὸν ἡδικημένον, ὡς ἄνδρες Ἀθηναῖοι, ὑπὸ Στεφάνου... ὡς δ' ἐστὶ...τούτο ὑμῖν βούλομαι σαφῶς ἐπιδείξαι compared with Or. 53 (Nicostr.) § 19 αὐτὸν τὸν ἀδικούμενον, ὡς ἄνδρες δικασταί, ὑπ' αὐτῶν...ὡς δ' ἐστὶν... ἐπιδείξω ὑμῖν (noticed by Rehdantz, *vit. the military reputation of the general of that name in the Peloponnesian War¹.

We have now to consider the data for arriving at the time when the speech was delivered. In § 9, Apollodorus describes himself as short of money, owing to differences between himself and Phormio, who was keeping him out of the property left him by his father Pasion, who, it will be remembered, died in B.C. 370. Again, in § 14 we are told, that at the time of the events there related, Apollodorus had not yet brought to a preliminary hearing the suits he had instituted against his relatives (Phormio and others). The suit against Phormio respecting the banking capital (Or. 36) was brought on about B.C. 350. But a much more direct indication is given by a reference in § 5, to a trierarchy involving the speaker's absence from Athens; and it was shortly after his return that the events described in the context occurred. He had to sail round the south of the Peloponnesus, and after touching there to take certain ambassadors to Sicily. It seems probable that we should identify this trierarchy with that mentioned in Or. 45 § 3, which belongs either to B.C. 369 or B.C. 368². The latter date is more pro-

² Droysen (Zeitschrift für d. Alterthumswissenschaft 1839 p. 929) places the speech in Ol. 107, 1 [= B.C. 352—1], and Böhnecke (Forschungen p. 675) in Ol. 107, 2 [= B.C. 351—350]. They connect the Sicilian trierarchy of Apollodorus (1) with the despatch sent to Athens in Ol. 106, 3 [= B.C. 354—3] by a leading man in Syracuse, Callippus by name; and (2) with a request for assistance on the part of the Messenians, recorded by Pausanias (iv. 28. 2). Arnold Schaefer, however, points out that we have no authority for stating that the Athenians sent any reply to the overtures of Callippus by sending a special embassy to Sicily, and Apollodorus would have been the last man in the world to have anything to do with Callippus, who was his personal enemy (see note on Or. 36 § 53). Besides, Apollodorus would then be in the 40th year of his age, and would have had considerable experience of business, whereas when he undertook this trierarchy, and when he shortly after assisted Nicostratus, he was quite a young man and inexperienced bable, not only for the reason given in the note on that passage, but also because at this period no one was required to be trierarch oftener than once in three years, and we know that Apollodorus was so employed in B.C. 362; hence he may have been trierarch in B.C. 365 and B.C. 368, and probably not in B.C. 369¹. Thus if we allow a fair interval of time, for the events mentioned in the speech subsequent to the trierarchy, we may fix on B.C. 366 as the probable date of its delivery. Now, if Demosthenes was born in B.C. 381, he was still a minor in B.C. 366 and too young to have been the writer of the speech; if, as is more probable, his birth was in B.C. 384, he was only just of age when the speech was delivered, and had enough to do in looking after his own affairs, and preparing, under the guidance of Isaeus, to join issue with his guardians, without writing speeches for other people. Consequently, the probable date of the speech, coinciding as it does with the internal evidence and with the doubts in the ways of the world (§§ 12—13). As Rehdantz, who places the speech in B.C. 368, has seen (Jahn's Neue Jahrbücher lxx. 505), we must not refer the allusions in §§ 9 and 14 to the lawsuit of Apollodorus against Phormio which was met by the latter's special plea (Or. 36), but to the threatened litigation of the first few years after his father's death. Now, after the summer of 369 the Athenians, in consequence of help sent by Dionysius I. to his allies the Spartans, were engaged in negotiations with that tyrant which led to the conclusion of a peace and alliance. With these negotiations we may connect the Sicilian trierarchy of Apollodorus. The ambassadors whom he had on board could not confer with the Spartans without landing at Gytheion, as the Peloponnesus was for the most part in arms on the side of the Thebans. (Abridged from A. Schaefer, u. s., p. 145—6.)

of Harpocraton, makes it almost impossible to ascribe it to the authorship of Demosthenes.

But whether written by Demosthenes, or, as is much more probable, by another, most likely by Apollodorus himself, there can be no reasonable doubt that the speech was actually delivered before an Athenian tribunal. As a study of character, the narrative of the relations between the speaker and his opponents is not without an interest of its own; and the moralist may there find a fresh exemplification of the wise saw of Polonius,

Never a borrower or a lender be,
For loan oft loses both itself and friend.

The speech includes several passages of peculiar intricacy, in which the language of Athenian lawcourts and the vocabulary of Attic horticulture will demand special illustration in the course of the commentary¹. The knotty points of legal terminology, which may embarrass the beginner, may prove attractive to experts, qui iuris nodos et legum aenigmata solvunt;

though others perhaps will be better pleased to dwell on the details of the speaker's country-home, and will not be sorry to leave for a while the lawcourts of Athens, for the vineyards and orchards, the olives and roses of Attica.

OR. LIV

KATA KONΩNOS AIKIAS.

THIS is a speech for the plaintiff in an action for assault and battery, which arose as follows. One evening the plaintiff, a young Athenian named Ariston, accompanied by a friend, was taking his usual stroll in the market-place of Athens, when he was attacked by the defendant Conon, and his son Ctesias and four others. One of these last fell upon Ariston's friend and held him fast, while Conon and the rest made an onslaught on Ariston, stripped him of his cloak which they carried off with them, threw him violently into the mud, and assaulted him with such brutality that he was for some time confined to his bed and his life despaired of (§§ 7—12).

Ariston, on his recovery, had more than one legal course open to him (§§ 1 and 24). Conon had, in the first instance, rendered himself liable to summary arrest for stripping off his cloak, and he was still amenable either to a public indictment for criminal outrage (ὑβρεως γραφή) or to a private suit for assault and battery (αικίας δίκη). To take the former of these last two courses would have proved a task too arduous for so youthful a prosecutor as Ariston, and he accordingly followed the advice of his friends and adopted the safer and less ambitious plan of bringing an action for assault. The case was submitted in this form to a public arbitrator, and as his award, whatever it may have been, was not final, the plaintiff brought his suit before one of the legal tribunals, possibly that known as the Forty, state-officers chosen by lot who went on circuit through the demes of Attica, and under whose cognisance, besides some minor matters, all private lawsuits for assault were placed¹. Two points were essential to the proof of the case, (1) that the defendant struck the plaintiff who was a free-man, with intent to insult him; and (2) that the defendant struck the first blow and was not acting in self-defence under the provocation of a previous assault.

The plaintiff, after a brief statement of the reasons which led him to prefer bringing a private suit instead of a public indictment against his assailant, and after the usual request for a favourable hearing, gives a graphic account of the origin of the feud between Conon's sons and himself (§§ 3—6); he then passes on to a vivid description of the scene in the market-place and the brutal assault there committed by Conon and one of his sons (§§ 7—9), and calls medical and other evidence to prove the serious nature of that assault and its nearly fatal result (§§ 10—12).

He next anticipates the defence which is likely to be set up by Conon, who, he understands, will make light of his son's misconduct and try to pass it off as a mere freak of youthful pleasantry; he contrasts the flippancy of the proposed defence with the more serious spirit of the laws of Athens, which provide penalties for even minor offences to preclude the perpetration of graver crimes (§§ 13—20); and he submits that the plea of youth can only be urged in mitigation of punishment and is at any rate inapplicable to Conon himself, a man of more than fifty years of age, who, so far from restraining his sons and the other assailants, was actually the ringleader of them all (§§ 21—23). The defendant was amenable to the laws against highway robbery and brutal outrage and, had death ensued, would have been chargeable with murder (§§ 24, 25).

He further describes the evasive conduct of the defendant during the preliminary arbitration (§§ 25—29); denounces the falsehood of the evidence put in by persons who were boon-companions of the defendant, deposing that they found the plaintiff fighting with the defendant's son, and that the defendant did not strike the plaintiff; contrasts it with the evidence of impartial persons on his own side attesting to his having been assaulted by the defendant (§§ 30—33); and comments severely on the bad character of the witnesses for the defence (§§ 34—37).

He then warns the court not to allow themselves to be imposed upon by the hard swearing and the sensational imprecations which, he is informed, will be resorted to by the defendant, whose antecedents prove his reckless disregard of things sacred; while he himself, averse though he was to taking even a lawful oath, had for the truth's sake offered to take such a pledge; and, as that offer had been declined by the defendant, he would now for the satisfaction of the court swear solemnly that in very truth he had been brutally assaulted by his opponents (§§ 38—41).

After pointing out that even in this private suit public interests were at stake, he very briefly refers to the way in which his family and himself had done their duty towards their country, while his opponents had done nothing of the kind. 'Even supposing,' he says in conclusion, 'we are of less service to the state than our opponents, that is no reason why we should be assaulted and brutally outraged.'

The only clue to the date of the speech is to be found in a passage in § 3, whence we conclude that it was delivered two years after orders were given at Athens for a military force to go out on garrison duty to Panactum, a fort on the Boeotian frontier. We read of such an expedition in B.C. 343¹; and this would bring us to B.C. 341 as the year of the trial. It has been suggested, however, though no reason is assigned, that this is too late a year, and that there is warrant for believing there was regular military service, as opposed to a special expedition, on the Boeotian frontier in B.C. 357, to protect Attica from a diversion on the part of the Boeotians shortly before the Phocian war, during which there was no occasion for such precautions, as the Phocians kept the Boeotians occupied in another direction². Thus, the military movements referred to in § 3 belong either to the time shortly before or that shortly after the Phocian war, in other words, either to B.C. 357 or 343, the speech being thus placed in B.C. 355 or 341 respectively. In the course of an Excursus on p. 215, I have pointed out that the reference to the Triballi in the days of Conon's youth supplies us with a hitherto unnoticed coincidence in favour of the later date.

The speech has deservedly won the admiration of

ancient and modern critics alike. The orator Deinarchus is reported to have plagiarized from it¹, the old grammarians often refer to it, the Greek writers on Rhetoric quote it more frequently than any of the other private orations, and in particular Dionysius of Halicarnassus, in his treatise on the eloquence of Demosthenes, after quoting a vivid description from the orator Lysias, one of the highest merits of whose style was the power of clear and graphic narration, selects for comparison the equally vivid passage in the present speech where the plaintiff describes the disorderly doings of his opponents in the camp at Panactum and in the market-place of Athens (§§ 3—9). His criticism is to the effect that the extract from Demosthenes is fully equal to that from Lysias in clearness, correctness, and perspicuity of style, in conciseness and terseness, in unadorned simplicity and in truthfulness of detail. He also commends the skill with which the language of the speaker is kept true to character, and appropriate to the subject, and finds in the narrative much of the winning persuasiveness, the charming grace, and the other merits of style that mark his quotation from Lysias². A modern writer on the literature of the speeches of Demosthenes has well remarked that no selection from the Private Orations can be considered complete which does not include the *Conon*¹; and many years after that remark was made, it was excellently edited for school-reading with a brief German commentary by Westermann.

To the general reader the main interest of the speech is to be found perhaps in the lifelike pictures of Athenian manners incidentally sketched in its pages; and several scenes have accordingly been borrowed from it and interwoven with the narrative of Becker's Charicles in illustration of the private life of the ancient Greeks². In particular, we here read of the disorderly clubs formed by young men about town, who, after holding a carouse, would sally forth into the streets to assault quiet people and play practical jokes at the expense of inoffensive citizens. To these indecorous societies the defendant's sons belonged, and the defendant himself in his youth was a member of a club called after a lawless tribe of Thrace, an association that finds its modern parallel in the fraternity, which in the days of Addison took its name from the wild Mohocks of North America, and was for some time the terror of the streets of London. The practical jokes of young Athens in the days of Demosthenes re-appear, some seven centuries later, in a less objectionable, not to say harmless form, in the pleasant-ries practised by students at the University of Athens at the expense of the 'freshmen' (οἱ νεγλῦδες), who, at the first moment of their arrival, were struggled for by the young allies of the rival lecturers, good-humouredly chaffed by them, and escorted with mock gravity through the market-place to the public bath, where, after a feint of frightening them, their tormentors considered the act of initiation completed, and were very good friends to the freshmen ever after¹.

The pages of the Greek orators abound in references to house-breaking and highway robbery, to street-brawls and other disorderly acts imperilling the public security²; and in the present speech we find that the plaintiff could not take a quiet walk along the market-place of Athens, beneath the rock of the Acropolis, past the temple erected as a memorial of the patriotic self-sacrifice of the daughters of an ancient king of Attica, and by the very scene where the tyrant Hipparchus was slain, without finding himself the victim of a brutal and outrageous assault. In times such as these at Athens, one who was tempted to take an evening stroll with a friend, if invited in language like that of Sebastian in Twelfth Night,

I pray you, let us satisfy our eyes
With the memorials and the things of fame
That do renown this city, might have replied, with Antonio,

Would you'd pardon me,
I do not without danger walk these streets.

OR. LV

ΠΡΟΣ ΚΑΛΛΙΚΛΕΑ ΠΕΡΙ ΧΩΡΙΟΥ¹.

THIS is a speech on the side of the defence in an action for damages alleged to have been incurred by the plaintiff, Callicles, by reason of a wall having been built on the defendant's property to the obstruction of a water-course carrying off the drainage of the surrounding hills. The farms of the plaintiff and defendant lay in a hilly district of Attica, separated from one another by a public road; and the defendant's father, Tisias, on coming into possession of his farm and finding that the water which flowed from the high ground had made an inroad into his property and was cutting itself a regular channel, built a stone-wall round it to prevent the water from making any further encroachment. No protest was raised on the part of the plaintiff's family either at the time or for many years subsequently; Tisias lived fifteen years after building the enclosure, and, after his death, a mountain-torrent caused by a heavy shower of rain overthrew an old wall on the plaintiff's land, flooded his property and damaged some of his stores. Thereupon the plaintiff brought an action for damages, alleging that the flood was due to the stream being diverted to his own side of the road by the proper water-course having been blocked up by the building of the wall on the defendant's property.

The speech for the defence opens by casting on the plaintiff the imputation of bringing the action with a view to getting possession of the defendant's property (§ 1). The speaker, a son of Tisias, whose name is not given, pleads that the wall was built by his father fifteen years before his death, without any objection on the part of the plaintiff's family, and challenges the other side to prove the existence of the water-course alleged to be obstructed by the wall (§§ 3—7); he had offered to refer the dispute to the arbitration of impartial persons familiar with the neighbourhood, but the plaintiff had refused the offer (§§ 8, 9); he then describes carefully the position of the two properties on the opposite sides of the public way, and accounts for the building of the wall (§§ 10, 11). He next calls evidence to prove that the alleged water-course was part of his private ground, as it contained an old burial-place, and an orchard besides (§§ 12—15); he further shews that, as the water would naturally flow down the public way, there was no occasion for such a water-course (§§ 16—18), and that there was no such channel immediately above or below his own property (§ 19). The plaintiff's loss was due to his own carelessness and he was most inconsistent in bringing this action (§ 20); the other neighbours who had suffered severely made no complaint, whereas the plaintiff had lost nothing worth mentioning (§§ 21, 23—25). Again, his opponents had themselves advanced their wall (and thus encroached on public property); they had also raised the level of the road (and thus led to the water being liable to be diverted from the road itself to the lands adjacent). After once more referring to the plaintiff's interested motive in bringing the action, he states in conclusion that, though the plaintiff had refused his offer, he had been ready to take the legally recognised oath and to swear that he had not caused the damage alleged, feeling that that would be the strongest argument with a jury who were themselves on their solemn oath.

The general style of the Callicles, as indeed that of the Conon, is not unlike that of Lysias, and speeches on similar subjects, one on a water-conduit and another on a disputed boundary, are known to have been composed by the orator Hyperides¹, but the genuineness of the speech before us can hardly be seriously contested², though it has been suggested that it was written by Demosthenes in his younger days³. It is quoted without hesitation by Harpocration and the rhetoricians alike, as the work of Demosthenes himself. The narrow limits of the speech and the somewhat trivial nature of the subject will account for the exordium not being succeeded, as elsewhere, by any formal narrative or statement of the case; instead of this, the narrative of the facts is only incidentally included in the course of the speech, and is blended and interwoven with the thread of the argument. Here and there the argument is brightened by a touch of quiet humour, as in the passage where the speaker, arguing on the supposition of his allowing the rain-water to make an inroad into his property, after exhausting several alternatives of dealing with the stream when once it was there, exclaims in conclusion, 'What am I to do with it? for I presume the plaintiff won't compel me to drink it up!'

² A. Bekker however in his Leipsig ed. 1855 considers it doubtful, (cf. Sigg, Apoll. p. 401 note).

³ A. Schaefer, u. s., III. 2. 256.

In the course of the speech we have also several indications of the provisions of Athenian law respecting those rights of water, with the Roman law of which we are far better acquainted. We gather that the inferior tenant held his land subject to the limiting obligation, or servitus as Roman lawyers would have called it, of giving free passage into his own land for the water, in particular the rain-water, flowing from the superior tenement; and in a passage of Plato's Laws we find provisions suggested for regulating the relations between neighbours in rights of this description and requiring the superior proprietor to do everything in his power to relieve the inferior proprietor from unnecessary inconvenience¹. Again, the law did not allow the diversion of the natural and regular channel of the water by the building of a wall or by any similar construction. Callicles appears to have had no case, as his property did not immediately adjoin that of the defendant but was separated from it by a public way which provided sufficiently for carrying off the water. In some instances, but (as the defendant contends) not in the present, a regularly recognised water-course, or ditch, traversed several successive properties, and it is clear that no individual proprietor could intercept this. It also appears that the proprietor of any land bordering on a public way generally turned his drainage on to the road (§ 26)².

The legal issue in the Callicles appears to turn in a great measure on the nature of the water-course, the existence of which is maintained by the plaintiff and denied by the defendant. The encroachment made by the floods, before the defendant's father became the proprietor, led to a stream of intermittent rain-water gradually forming a channel for itself (μᾶλλον ὥδοποιεῖ § 11) through a burial-ground¹ planted with fruit-trees. The plaintiff appears to have contended that the channel thus formed was a water-course within the terms of the law; the defendant relies on the existence of the trees and the tombs to prove that it was not a recognised channel, but part of his private ground, accidentally inundated, and repeatedly traversed by water, more than fifteen years before. It was this damage, he contends, that led to his father building the wall for the protection of his property.

Lastly, we have several points that are curiously suggestive on the state of the country-roads in the hilly districts of Attica; the road itself is assumed to be the natural channel for the drainage of the neighbouring hills, and a proper water-course beside the road is declared a thing unheard of. In fact, like some of the present roads of Attica, as described in a modern writer's amusing sketches of Greek brigandage, the road and the stream were one and the same thing, and, except in dry weather, the former hardly existed².

¹ For purposes of irrigation, Plato would allow the tenant to divert water from streams that were common property by cutting himself a channel anywhere except through a private house or through temples or tombs. Legg. p. 844 A, τῶν ὑδάτων πέρι γεωργοῖσι παλαιοί

EXPLANATION OF THE SYMBOLS USED IN THIS EDITION IN RECORDING VARIOUS READINGS.

As a general rule, wherever our text (that of W. Dindorf's third Edition) agrees with that of the Zurich editors, we have not thought it necessary to notice any variations in the mss. Where Dindorf differs from the Zurich editors, the difference is in most cases due to the greater weight given by the latter to the readings of the Paris ms Z.

Z stands for the Zurich text of Demosthenes as printed by J. G. Baiter and H. Sauppe in their admirable edition of the Oratores Attici, in one volume (1850).

Bekk. Bekker's Berlin edition of 1824. Bekker's stereotyped edition (Bekker st.) was published at Leipzig in 1854, including a list of all the variations between the two editions, and this list is incorporated in the notes to the present volume, except in the case of Or. 36, where the only variations are the following: § 6, line 2, αὐτὴν (Bekk. st.) for ταύτην τὴν: § 8 τούτους... ἀντιμοίπας (st.) for τούτοις... τὰς ἀντιμοίπας: § 24 ἰδῆθ' (st.) for εἰδῆθ': § 36 ὀδύπεραι (st.) for ὀδυπέτραι and § 60 αὐτὸν (st.) for αὐτὸν ὑμῶν. When Dindorf differs from the Zurich editors, he generally agrees with Bekker. When a note begins with Bekk., it is meant that Dindorf's text is supported by Bekker's Berlin and Leipzig editions; then, after a slight space, follows the reading of the Zurich editors (Z) with the mss supporting it, introduced by the word cum. The mss thus quoted by the Zurich editors are as follows:

Z. [Cited by some editors as S.] in the Public Library of Paris (No. 2934), on parchment; century X. This is admitted on all hands to be the best ms, and its readings are very often accepted by Bekker and still more frequently by the Zurich editors. For a protest against excessive deference to its authority, see the Preface of Mr Shilleto's fourth edition of the De falsa legatione, pp. vii, viii, xiv.

F. Codex Marcianus, in the Library of St Mark's, Venice (No. 416), on parchment; century XI. This ms generally agrees with the Codex Bavaricus (B).

Φ. In the same Library (No. 418), on parchment; century XI.

k. In the Public Library of Paris (No. 2998) on cotton paper (bombycinus), forma quadrata; century XIV. Contains Or. 54 (κατὰ Κόρινθος).

r. In [the same Library (No. 2936), on parchment forma maxima; century XIII.

A¹. Augustanus primus, formerly at Augsburg (Augusta Vindelicorum), now at Munich (No. 485), on parchment, paene quadratus; century XI (according to Dindorf), or XII (according to Z).

B. Bavaricus, now at Munich (No. 85), on cotton-paper ('bombycinus') forma maxima; century XIII.

γρ. A contraction for γρδφερα, used in the mss themselves to introduce the marginal citation of a various reading.

In the Fitzwilliam Museum at Cambridge there is a ms of Demosthenes bequeathed to the University by Mr Kerrich, an account of which has been given by Mr Paley in the Journal of Philology, vol. v. p. 28, and in a collation of the de falsa legatione published by the Philological Society of Cambridge. The readings of the ms appear to correspond to the vulgate before the time of Bekker, and it seems therefore of no great value. It contains the arguments only to the Private Orations to the present volume, and its variations from Dindorf's text are duly recorded under the abbreviation Kerrich ms.

22. δίκην ἀφορμῆς.] 'A suit referring to Capital,' 'a suit for the recovery of banking stock.' § 12 ἐγκαλοῦντ' ἀφορμῇ.

23. ἐνθήκην.] Harpocrations. v. ἀφορμῇ· ὅταν τις ἀργύριον δῶ ἐνθήκην, ἀφορμὴ καλεῖται ἰδίως παρὰ τοῖς Ἀττικοῖς. And similarly Hesychius. For this late Greek equivalent to ἀφορμῇ references are given in Sophocles' Lex. of Rom. and Byzantine Greek to Phrynichus 223 (fl. A.D. 180) and Basiliius of Caesarea III. 320 (fl. c. A.D. 379).

παραγράφεται κ.τ.λ.] 'Phormio raises a special plea in bar of action, by appealing to a statute enacting that, on matters on which a release and quit-tance has once been granted, no subsequent litigation shall be lawful.' See note on § 25 ἀφείλς καὶ ἀπαλλάξας. Pollux: παρα-γραφῇ· ὅταν τις μὴ εἰσαγώγιμον λέγῃ εἶναι τὴν δίκην, ἥ ὡς κεκρι-μένος, ἥ διαίτης γεγενημένης, ἥ παραχόμενος.] 'adducing,' προϊσχύμενος. A use of the participle analogous to παρέχσθαι μάρτυρας (Aphob. Or. 27 § 8), said of one who is pleading his own cause, and so, inf. § 54, and often elsewhere. P.]

25. ἄπτεται τῆς εὐθείας.] So. δίκης. 'Touches on, handles, grapples with, the general issue,' εὐθυδικία being the direct course of an action argued on the merits of the case, as opposed to παρα-γραφῇ. Or. 34 ὑπόθ. I. 32, and ib. § 4, εὐθυδικίαν εἰσιόντα; Or. 45 κατὰ Στεφάνου § 6 (where Apollodorus is speaking of the defendant in the present case) προλαβὼν μου ὥστε πρότερον λέγειν διὰ τὸ παραγραφὴν εἶναι καὶ μὴ εὐθυδικίαν (ἡμ. -αν) εἰσιέναι. 27. τοῦτο δὲ πεποίηκεν κ.τ.λ.] 'He has done (or 'does') this to give greater force to the special plea, by proving that, even on its own merits, the case of the plaintiff is quite untenable.' (σαθρᾶς, thoroughly rotten, unsound.) Cf. ὑπόθεσις of Or. 32, Zenoth. δεικνυσιν ὅτι θαρρεῖ μὲν τῇ εὐθείᾳ, ἐκ περιστάσεως δὲ αὐτῷ καὶ παραγραφῇ ὁ νόμος δίδωσιν.

1. τὴν ἀπειρίαν τοῦ λέγειν.] Like all slaves at Athens, Phormio (once the slave of the banker Pasion) was of barbarian birth; and though subsequently rewarded with the rights of freedom and citizenship, remained unable to speak good Greek. In a later speech arising out of the present action, Apollodorus, himself the son of one who was once a slave, taunts him with his foreign extraction and his indifferent pronunciation. Or. 45 κατὰ Στεφάνου Α, § 81 βάρβαρος ἐωνήθησιν and § 30, ὥς αὐτὸν ὑπεκλήφατε, ὅτι σολοικίζει τῇ φωνῇ, βάρβαρον καὶ εὐκαταφρόνητον εἶναι, ἔστι δὲ βάρβαρος οὗτος τῷ μισεῖν οὗς αὐτῷ προσήκε τιμᾶν, τῷ δὲ κακουργῆσαι καὶ διορύξαι πράγματα οὐδενὸς λείπεται. In § 77, Apollodorus himself apologizes for his broad brogue or loud voice (λαλεῖν μέγα); the speaker of πρὸς Πανταίητον makes similar excuses for his διδλεκτος (Or. 37-§§ 52, 55); and a like tribute to the sensitiveness of an Attic audience is paid by the Mytilenaeans in Antiphon's de Caede Herodis (Or. v. § 5) δέομαι ὑμῶν... ἐάν τι τῇ γλώσσει ἀμάρτω, συγγνώμην ἔχειν μοι καὶ ἡγείσθαι ἀπειρία αὐτὸ μᾶλλον ἢ ἀδικία ἡμαρτῆσθαι.

ἀδυνάτως ἔχει.] 'Is quite incapable,' referring mainly to his inexperience and want of facility in speaking. Thus in Antiphon u. s. v. § 2 ἡ τοῦ λέγειν ἀδυναμία is contrasted with ἡ ἐμπειρία τῶν πραγμάτων.

ὁρᾶτε.] In a general sense, 'you all of yourselves observe.'

ἃ ἂν ᾖ δίκαια κ.τ.λ.] The relative clause to ταῦτα ψηφίσῃσθε is placed before it partly for increased emphasis, partly to bring δίκαια closer to τὰ δίκαια in the previous context.

2. ἵν' ἐκκρούοντες χρόνους ἐμποιῶμεν.] 'With the evasive object of wasting time,' or (with Kennedy) 'for the sake of evasion and delay.' The phrase χρόνους ἐμποιεῖν occurs in Or. 9 § 71, 23 § 93. Cf. Or. 47 § 63, διατριβὰς ἐμποιῶν.....τεχνάων τοῦ χρόνον ἐγγενέσθαι. For ἐκκρούοντες, cf. Or. 54 κατὰ Κόνων. § 30, and for the general sense, Thuc. III. 38, χρόνου διατριβὴν ἐμποιεῖν and κατὰ Στεφ. Α, § 4, p. 1102, χρόνου γιγνομένου καὶ τῆς γραφῆς ἐκκρουομένης. Liddell and Scott give a phrase ἐκκρούειν χρόνον, 'to waste time,' and, to prove it, inadvertently refer to the last passage and to the words of the text, where χρόνους clearly comes after ἐμποιῶμεν.

ἀπαλλαγὴ κυρία.] A legal and valid (or final) acquittal from all future actions, πραγμάτων.

ἄνευ τοῦ παρ' ὑμῖν ἀγωνίσασθαι.] 'Without standing a trial in your court.'

πεποιηκῶς....εὖ πεποιηκῶς..... διαλίσας... παραδοὺς... ἀφελείας.] Although all these participles refer to Phormio, who is the subject of the first part of the sentence, the principal verb συκοφαντεῖ refers to Apollodorus. To obviate the harshness of this anacoluthon it has been proposed (by G. H. Schaefer) to follow one of the MSS., the Augustanus primus, in reading πεποίηκε for πεποιηκῶς, and also to strike out καὶ before πολλὰ, and place a full stop at ἐγκλημάτων. [But we should still expect ὅμως δ', or ἀλλ' ὅμως. Perhaps it is better to regard this as an instance of the 'nominativus pendens.' P.] (Funkhaenel, quaest. Dem. p. 75 sq.)

3. τούτου.] Apollodorus. διαλίσας κ. παραδοὺς κ.τ.λ.] 'Having duly paid and delivered up everything—and having thereafter received a discharge from all further claims.'

4 Πρῶτον μὲν οὖν ὑμῖν ἀναγνώσεται τὰς συνθήκας, ἐπειδὴ φέρειν τοῦτον οὐχ οἷός τ' ἐστὶ.] i. e. since (or, at a time when) Phormio cannot submit any longer to the unconscionable claims of Apollodorus (and therefore declines to make any further concessions), the latter has vexatiously instituted the present action. The subject of the subordinate clause appears to be Phormio. For the sense, compare the language ascribed to Apollodorus in § 33, μισθωσιν ἤθελεν αὐτῷ φέρειν Φορμίων πολλήν... ἐπεὶ δ' οὐ ποιεῖ ταῦτα, τηρῖκαῦτα, φησί, δικάζομαι, and especially κατὰ Στεφ. Α, § 5, ἐπειδὴ ποιεῖν τε οὐδὲν φετο δεῖν ὧν τότε ὠμολόγησε, καὶ τὰ χρήματα ἀποστέρειν ἐνεχείρησεν ἃ τῆς τραπέζης εἶχεν ἀφορμήν, δίκην ἡραγκάσθην λαχεῖν.—For δίκην λαχὼν, cf. Or. 54 § 1, ἐλαχον δίκην π.

συκοφαντεῖ.] Cf. Or. 55 § 1 n. —πραχθέντα τούτῳ, Or. 34 § 36 n.

Πασίωνα.] Pasion, originally the slave of Archestratus (§ 48), and accountant to the banking-firm of Archestratus and Antisthenes, was set free by his masters and succeeded them in their business (§§ 43—48). The Trapeziticus of Isocrates, which belongs to B.C. 394, while Pasion was probably still a μέτοικος, and not yet rewarded with the citizenship of Athens, purports to be a speech written in prosecution of Pasion for defrauding a subject of Satyrus, king of Bosphorus. The father of Demosthenes had some money in Pasion's bank (Or. 27 § 11). Pasion, according to his son, Apollodorus, had conferred many benefits on the state, e.g. by presenting five triremes and a thousand shields (Or. 45 § 85), and his credit was good throughout all Greece (Or. 50 § 56). He died in B.C. 370 (Or. 46 § 13).

οὐκ εἰσαγωγίμος.] Or. 45 § 5 (of this very trial), παρεγράψατο τὴν δίκην ἣν ἐφευγε Φορμίων οὐκ εἰσαγωγίμον εἶναι. See ὑπόθεσις l. 23, παραγράφεται, π.

§§ 4—11. Statement of the transactions of Phormio with Pasion and Apollodorus. After Phormio had become his own master, but before he had received the rights of Athenian citizenship, Pasion gave him a lease of the Bank and the Shield-Manufactory. Subsequently Pasion became ill and died, leaving a will whereby Phormio married his former master's widow (Archippe), and became guardian to his younger son (Pasicles). The elder son (Apollodorus) proceeded to appropriate to his private use large sums out of the common estate, and the guardians accordingly deemed it prudent on behalf of their ward to determine on a partition of all the effects except the Bank and Shield-Manufactory, leased to the defendant, who was one of the guardians. The defendant paid a moiety of the rent of that property to the elder son, Apollodorus, who when Pasicles came of age discharged the defendant from his liability under the lease and from all further claims. The said property was thereupon divided between the two brothers, the elder exercising his option in favour of the Shield-Manufactory, as the safer though less remunerative business, and leaving the Bank, with its higher but more hazardous revenue, to his younger brother.

4. συνθήκας.] The terms are given in Or. 45, § 32, μίσθωσιν φέρειν τούτον ἀνευ τῆς καθ' ἡμέραν διοικήσεως δύο τάλαντα καὶ τετταράκοντα μνᾶς τοῦ ἐναυτοῦ ἐκάστου...προσέγραπται δὲ τελευταῖον 'ὀφείλει δὲ Πασίων ἐνδεκα τάλαντα εἰς τὰς παρακαταθήκας.'

ἀσπιδοπηγεῖον.] Or. 45 § 85, ὁ ἐμὸς ὑμῖν πατὴρ (Pasion) χίλ' ἔδωκεν ἀσπίδας.

τὴν πρόκλησιν.] Probably a challenge to Apollodorus for the production of the articles of agreement between Pasion and Phormio. On the term in general, see Or. 54 § 27, προκαλοῦνται, n. and infr. § 7 n.

ἤδη καθ' ἑαυτὸν.] 'His own master,' no longer subject, as a slave, to the control of another, though still a μέτοικος.

[Below, § 6, it is said that Phormio saw a difficulty in getting in money due to the bank, if he did not possess the citizenship. He saw this when he was thinking of hiring (μισθοῦμενος) the bank of which Pasion is here said to have given him a lease. Hence there seems a difficulty in rendering ἤδη καθ' ἑαυτὸν ὄντι, 'when he was now his own master.' May it not mean, 'While he, Phormio, was at the time in his (Pasion's) service'? P.]

προσώφειλε κ.τ.λ.] The defendant has to explain how it comes to pass that Pasion is entered in the articles of agreement as owing eleven talents to the bank. He shows that this sum had been lent by Pasion on the security of certain lands and houses on which Pasion as the creditor, being an Athenian citizen, would have a claim, in the event of the loan not being refunded or the interest regularly paid. As Phormio the lessee of the banking business had not yet acquired the rights of citizenship, it was therefore arranged that Pasion should not transfer these securities to Phormio but keep them in his own hands, and credit Phormio with their value: in other words, enter himself in the articles of agreement as debtor to the bank to the amount of eleven talents.

For προσώφειλε, the compound verb followed by the simple ᾤφειλε where the repetition of the preposition is not necessary, cf. Cic. Catil. iv. 1, perferrem...feram.

5. ἀπορίαν...φιλεργίαν.] Not 'want' but 'thrift,' or (with Kennedy) 'Not on account of poverty, but on account of his industry in business.' In Or. 45 § 33 Apollodorus insinuates that the debt arose from Phormio's mismanagement.

ἔγγειος οὐσία.] 'Property in land,' 'real property,' also called φανερὰ οὐσία. Harpoer. ἀφανῆς οὐσία καὶ φανερὰ ἀφανῆς μὲν ἡ ἐν χρήμασι καὶ σώμασι καὶ σκεύεσι, φανερὰ δὲ ἡ ἔγγειος.

ἀργύριον πρὸς ταύτῃ.] In addition to this he had money of his own (personal property) lent out on interest to the amount of more than fifty talents. The larger amount so employed shows that he was a usurer by practice or profession. P.]

ἐν οὖν τοῖς πεντήκοντα...ἔνδεκα.] We have just been told that Pasion had more than 50 talents of his own money (ἀργύριον ἴδιον) lent out at interest, and we now find that ἐν τοῖς πεντήκοντα ταλάντοις there were 11 talents from the bank-deposits, profitably invested. The latter could hardly be called ἴδιον ἀργύριον, unless the words are used loosely in the general sense of 'personal property' as opposed to ἔγγειος οὐσία or 'real property.' But we should perhaps strike out ἴδιον and attribute its insertion to an accidental repetition of πλέον, as ἴδιον and ΠΛΕΟΝ are not very unlike one another. Or again, keeping ἴδιον we might alter ἐν οὖν into ἐπ' οὖν 'in addition to,' 'over and above' the 50 talents. Heraldus proposed σὺν οὖν, and G. H. Schaefer unsuccessfully attempts to show that ἐν may mean 'besides,' by quoting the quasi-adverbial use of ἐν δὲ in Soph. Ai. 675, O. C. 55, and O. T. 27.

[In the sense of 'in addition to' he should rather have said πρὸς than ἐπὶ. Perhaps ἐν means 'mixed up with,' i.e. out at loan to the same borrowers as his own money was. A man may borrow of me, as a banker, privately παρακαταθήκη.] Plato defin. p. 415 δόμα μετὰ πίστεως. Claims for the repayment of such banking deposits form the subject of two of the forensic orations of Isocrates, the Trapeziticus and the ἀμάρτυρος πρὸς Εὐθύνοιν.

Or. 27 § 7 τὰ τ' ἐνεργὰ αὐτῶν καὶ ὅσα ἦν ἀργά, § 10 ταῦτα μὲν ἐνεργὰ κατέλειπεν ... τὸ δ' ἔργον αὐτῶν πενήτηκοντα μυαῖ.

6. μήπω τῆς πολιτείας κ.τ.λ.] No one could lend money on the security of land unless in default of payment (Or. 35 § 12) he had the right to take possession of such land, and this right of possession was confined to citizens to the exclusion of μέτοικοι (or resident aliens) like Phormio. A special exception is recorded in the case of the Byzantines, in Aristotle. Oeconom. II. 4 μετοίκων τι-νῶν ἐπιδεδανεικόντων ἐπὶ κτήμασιν οὐκ οὔσης αὐτοῖς ἐγκτήσεως, ἐψη-φίσαντο τὸ τρίτον μέρος εἰσφέροντα τὸν βουλόμενον κυρίως ἔχειν τὸ κτῆμα (Büchschenschütz, Besitz und Erwerb im Griechischen Alterthume, pp. 492, 3).

[Of course μήπω οὔσης, 'si nondum esset,' is very different from οὐπω οὔσης, 'cum nondum esset.' On the insecurity of lending money on houses or lands, except for citizens, see Boeckh, P. E. pp. 140 and 654 (ed. 2), who observes on this passage that "no resident alien could safely lend money upon houses or other landed property, a privilege which was confined to the citizens." P.]

ἐπὶ γῇ...δεδανεικῶς.] Cf. ἐγ-γύον, or ἐγγεῖον, δάνεισμα and Or. 34 § 23 ἐγγεῖοι τόκοι. (K. F. Hermann, Privatalterthümer § 49, 9 and Büchschenschütz u. s. p. 490.)

συνοικίαις.] See n. on Or. 53 § 13 τίθημι τὴν συνοικίαν ἑκα-δεκα μυῶν. Houses built in blocks and let out to families were commonly so called. [This is οἰκεῖν μετ' ἄλλων opposed to μονόρρυθμοι δόμοι in Aesch. Suppl. 960. The συνοικίαι were chiefly let as lodgings for the denizens, μέτοικοι. (See C. R. Kennedy, Dem. I. p. 252.) Boeckh, P. οἷς προειμένος ἦν.] In the medial sense. Liddell and Scott s. v. προῖμι B. iii. refer to this passage for the sense 'to give away,' 'to give freely.' But it here means 'to lend' as in Plato Demod. 384. [It is a very common term, and seems to involve the notion of 'risk in letting go without full security.' P.] Cf. Or. 56 §§ 2, 48, 50.

ἐγράφη... προσοφείλων ἔνδεκα ταλ.] Or. 45 § 29 προσγέγραπται ἔνδεκα τάλαντα ὁ πατήρ (Pasion) ὀφείλων εἰς τὰς παρακαταθήκας τούτῳ, and § 34 ἐὼ τᾷλλ' ὅς' ἂν περὶ τῶν ἔνδεκα ταλ. ἔχοιμι εἰπεῖν, ὡς οὐκ ὀφείλειεν ὁ πατήρ, ἀλλ' οὗτος ὑφῆρξεν.

7. τοῦ ἐπικαθημένου.] 'The manager, the clerk, of the bank. Elsewhere Phormio himself is described by Apoll. as τὸν ἐπικαθημένον ἐπὶ τῆς τραπέζης (Or. 49 § 17) and καθήμενον καὶ διωκούντα ἐπὶ τῇ τραπέζῃ (Or. 45 § 33). (K. F. Hermann, Privat-

ἀρρωστίας] Pasion's failing health is touched upon in Or. 52 § 13 ἀδυνάτως ἥδη ἔχοντα καὶ μόγῃς εἰς ἅστυ ἀναβαίνοντα καὶ τὸν ὀφθαλμὸν αὐτὸν προδιδόντα and in Or. 49 § 42 ἔλεγεν ἀρρωστῶν ὅ τι ὀφείλοιτο αὐτῷ ἕκαστον.

μαρτυρίας... παρ' οἷς.] = μ. τούτων τῶν μαρτύρων παρ' οἷς, 'the depositions of the persons to whose keeping the will has been entrusted.' (Cf. Or. 34 § 6). In times when there were no probate courts, and wills were not officially kept, it is obvious that the greatest precautions had to be taken to prevent forgeries by interested parties. In Or. 45 § 19 one Cephisophon deposes that his father had left behind him at his death, a document endorsed 'Pasion's Will,' which Apollodorus (ib. §§ 5, 22) denounces as a forgery (οὐδεπώποτε γενομένη... κατεσκευασμένη). The alleged terms are given ib. § 28, quoted in part in ὑπόθεσις l. 6 n. πρόκλησις.] To establish Pasion's will, Stephanus and two others deposed that they were present when Phormio challenged Apollodorus to open the will, and that the latter refused. In Or. 45 Apollodorus sues Stephanus for having given false evidence in the present case and discusses this challenge in §§ 8—19, denying that any such challenge ever took place or that his father left such a will.

8. Πασίων ἐτετελευτήκει.] Or. 46 § 13 ἐτελεῦθησεν ἐπὶ Δυσικήτου ἀρχοντος (B.C. 370).

τὴν γυναῖκα λαμβάνει κ.τ.λ.] Similarly the father of Dem. left Aphobus guardian of his children, and gave him his widow with a marriage-portion and the use of his house and furniture (Or. 27 § 5). The object of such legacies was to secure a faithful performance of the guardian's trust by connecting him more closely with the family of his ward (cf. 58 § 31). Diogenes Laertius, i. 59, quotes a law, perhaps wrongly ascribed to Solon, τὸν ἐπίτροπον τῇ ὀφανῶν μητρὶ μὴ συνοικεῖν. (K. F. Hermann, Privatalt. § 57, 16).

τὸν παῖδα.] i. e. Pasicles, who was a minor for 8 years (B.C. 370—362), as appears by comparing § 10 with § 37. He was probably 8 or 10 years old when his father died; his elder brother was 24 (inf. § 22).

τούτου.] The claimant Apollodorus, whom the orator purposely represents as thriftless and unscrupulous at the very first.

λογιζόμενοι.] 'The guardians, calculating among themselves, that if, by the terms of the will, it proved necessary to subtract from the common fund all that the plaintiff should have spent, and then divide the remainder equally, there would be no surplus whatever, decided in behalf of their ward on an immediate division of the property.' [Or, 'that they (the brothers) should share the property.' P.]

κοινῶν τῶν χρημάτων.] κοινῶν, predicative and emphatic.—τούτους, sc. τοὺς ἐπίτροπους.

ἀντιμοιρεῖ.] 'Share for share,' cf. § 32 τὰ μητρῶα πρὸς μέρος ἡξίους νέμεσθαι. The adverb does not appear to occur elsewhere, and its form is suspiciously like the late Greek words ἀωνυμεῖ, αὐτολεξεῖ, αὐτοψηεῖ, παμπληθεῖ, παρεθνεῖ. In earlier Greek almost the only instances found are αὐτοβοεῖ (Thuc.) and πανδημεῖ (Thuc. Andoc. Lys. Isocr.).

[A more probable reading would be τοῖτοις ἐξελόντας ἀντιμοιρίας, 'taking out (and laying

9. ἀπεδίδουσαν.] The guardians paid Apollodorus the share due to him, viz. half the rent of the bank and shield manufactory.

ἄχρι μὲν οὖν κ.τ.λ.] 'Down to this date, then, there is not the slightest claim against Phormio in respect of the lease.' For the rather rare construction of ἐγκαλεῖν c. gen. cf. Or. 54, § 2 and Plut. Arist. 10, 9 τῆς βραδυτήτος αὐτοῖς ἐνεκαλεῖ. In § 12 we have ἐγκαλοῦντ' ἀφορμήν.

10. δοκιμασθέντος.] The δοκιμασία (see Dict. Antiq.) took place on 'coming of age,' usually at 18, but in the case of orphans it might be accelerated a year or two. (A. Schaefer, Dem. u. s. Zeit, III. 2. 19—38 Der Eintritt der Mündigkeit nach Attischen Rechte.)

ἀφήκαν τῆς μισθώσεως κ.τ.λ.] Or. 45 § 5 μάρτυρας ὡς ἀφήκα αὐτὸν τῶν ἐγκλημάτων παρέσχετο ψευδεῖς, καὶ μισθώσεώς τινας ἐσκευωρημένης καὶ διαθήκης οὐδεπώποτε γενομένης.

[The forms ἀφήκατε and ἀφήκαν and παρέδωκαν § 14 are rather unusual. The Attics prefer in the plural the inflexion of the second aorist, ἀφείμεν, ἀφείτε, ἀφείσαν. Cf. §§ 11, 14, and see Veitch's Greek Verbs.—The two brothers Apollodorus and Pasicles are directly addressed in ἀφήκατε, not the jury, as is shewn by ἀπηγείτε following.—For this sense of προσώφειλεν cf. Ar. Ran. 1134. P.]

11. αἴρεσιν.] The choice lay with him by virtue of being the elder brother.

καίτοι κ.τ.λ.] Phormio argues that if the plaintiff had had any private capital of his own in the bank, he would have chosen the banking-business in preference to the manufactory. He did not, and therefore he contends there was no such fund.—ἰδία ἀφορμή is private banking-stock, as opposed to deposits, παρακατάθηκαι (cf. § 11).—τάλαντον=60 minae.

ἥδιον.] The labour and trouble and other disagreeable incidents of manufacturing shields made such a property less desirable in itself than a banking business. But the bank business was speculative, and involved the risk of losing the deposits, and therefore the manufactory, with all its drawbacks, was preferred by Apollodorus, as being at least

τὸ μὲν γὰρ—ἀλλοτριῶν.] 'For the manufactory is a property free from risk, whereas the bank is a business yielding a hazardous (speculative, precarious) revenue from other people's money.' The bank was not a κτῆμα, but only an ἐργασία, not a secure property, but a precarious trading with other people's money. For χρημάτων ἀλλοτριῶν cf. Teles ap. Stobae. 97, 31. καὶ πῶς σπανίζουσιν (οἱ πλούσιοι) τούτων ἃ ἔχουσι; πῶς δὲ οἱ τραπέζῃται, φησὶν ὁ Βίων, χρημάτων ἔχοντες αὐτά; οὐ γὰρ αὐτῶν ὄντα ἔχουσιν.

§§ 12—17. The plaintiff's claim to a sum of banking-stock alleged to have been held by the defendant may be proved groundless by many arguments: (1) Plaintiff's father is entered in the lease, not as creditor on account of banking-stock assigned to defendant, but actually as debtor to the bank. (2) On the partition of the property, plaintiff put in no claim to such stock. (3) After the termination of defendant's lease of the bank, plaintiff let it to others for the same sum and no less; and did not specially transfer to them any banking-stock besides. (4) The plaintiff during the life of his mother, who was perfectly familiar with all these details, made no demand on the defendant; it was only when she died that he set up a fraudulent claim, not for any banking-stock as now, but for a sum of 3000 dr. The claim was submitted to the arbitration of some relatives of the plaintiff, and upon their award the defendant for peace and quietness' sake paid the money and a second time received from the plaintiff a release of all his claims.

12. συκοφαντεῖν κ.τ.λ.] Kennedy: 'This claim of the plaintiff's to a sum of banking-stock is false and fraudulent.'—ἐγκαλοῦντ' ἀφορμὴν, the first distinct reference in the speech to the nature of the plaintiff's case. He alleges that the defendant had a grant of capital from Pasion and had appropriated it.

τουτονὶ...τούτῳ...τοῦτον.] The first two refer to the defendant, the third to the plaintiff, Apollodorus. The ambiguity arising from the same pronoun being applied to two different persons, would be readily dispelled by the orator's delivery. Cf. § 42 n.

μισθῶν ἑτέροις κ.τ.λ.] i.e. to Xenon and the others in § 13. The argument is: assume the defendant defrauded the plaintiff of bank-stock amounting to 20 talents. Then the stock in question could not have formed part of the business when the plaintiff let it to the later lessees. The plaintiff then should either have let it to them at lower terms than to the defendant, or have handed over to the bank an equivalent to the stock alleged to be missing. He did neither; he made no fresh transfer and he charged them the same rent. Therefore the property must have been in the same condition as when the defendant originally leased it from the plaintiff's father.—The context compels us to make Apollodorus the subject of the sentence μισθῶν—φανήσεται, but the bank, it will be remembered, became the property not of Apollodorus, but of Pasicles, when the latter came of age and Phormio's lease expired; we must therefore conclude that the elder brother acted as agent on behalf of his less experienced younger brother.

14. ἐμισθωσαν ... παρέδωκεν.] The plurals refer to the two ἐλευθέρους ἀφείσαν.] Xenon, Euphraeus and the other lessees appear (like Phormio) to have been slaves originally. The family shew their gratitude for their services by giving them freedom (ὥς μεγάλα εὖ πεπονθότες). G. H. Schaefer less satisfactorily understands the words 'set free from all further claims:' a sense which is at first sight partly supported by καὶ οὐκ ἐδικάζοντο below.

his plots against Phormio. Her death is described by Apollodorus in Or. 50 § 60, 'While I was abroad my mother lay ill and was at death's door, and therefore little able to help in retrieving my affairs. It was just six days after my return that, when she had seen me and spoken to me, she breathed her last, when she no longer had such control over her property as to be able to give me all that she desired.' The death took place in Feb. B.C. 360.

πρὸς αἷς.] She had left Phormio's children 2000 drachmas, but Apollodorus claims more than that sum also as his own. His avaricious and mean character is shown by his claim to a χιτωνίσκος, a chemise, or 'slave's frock,' perhaps. A man who would make such demands was little likely to omit his present claims, if he had then believed in the justice of them. P.]

15. ἐπιτρέψας, κ.τ.λ.] The plaintiff submitted the claims to the arbitration of Deinias and Nicias (§ 17), his own father-in-law and brother-in-law respectively. Pollux: ἔλεγον δὲ ἐπιτρέ-

δοῦναι δωρεὰν.] By 'making a present' of the 3000 drachmae, Phormio satisfies Apollodorus without admitting his legal claim to the sum.

τὸ προσὸν.] Not the 2000 drachmae of § 14; for they were already given by the mother (ἔδωκεν ἐκεῖνη), but the 'additional articles' χιτωνίσκος καὶ θεράπαινα. [τὸ προσὸν may however refer to πρὸς αἷς κ.τ.λ. supra. He got the 3000 and the 2000 also that had been left to Phormio's boys. He got from him 5000 in all, and gave him a full release from all further claims; and yet now again he says Phormio has kept back some of Pasion's money! But (he argues) the discharge then given justifies the παραγραφή now put in. P.]

τὰ γράμματα.] Not Pasion's will, but his private papers and ledgers or banking-books, τὰ γράμματα τὰ τραπεζιτικά (Or. 49 §§ 43, 59 quoted below in note on § 21, ἐκ ποίων γραμμάτων). Cf. Or. 49 § 5, οἱ τραπεζίται εἰσθῆναι ὡς τε διδάσκει χρημάτων, κ.τ.λ. and Or. 52 § 4.

19. ἐνείματο.] 'Who would have taken his share of his father's property, if he had not the books from which alone he could know the amount of property left?' He refers to the division of the patrimony decided on by the guardians in consequence of the elder brother spending largely out of the common fund, § 8 fin. This event took place eighteen years before the date of the speech; which, if we could assume that the partition was in the same year as the father's death, viz. 370, would belong to B.C. 352. This however we cannot assume, indeed the language of § 8, πολλὰ ἀναλίσκειν, κ.τ.λ., implies that the elder brother's course of extravagance lasted some time before the partition was decided on. We may therefore perhaps place the partition in B.C. 368, and the speech in B.C. 350. See Introduction.

The sense is: 'Assuming Apollodorus hesitated with his own lips to accuse his mother of destroying the documents; at any rate, when Pasicles same of age and was in course of receiving the report of his guardians' administration, is there any one who, under the circumstances, would not have stated the fact to his younger brother, and by his instrumentality had the matter

'Say no more, pray, of Pasicles; no! let him be called your son, Phormio, not your master; and my opponent (he is bent upon it)—not my brother.'

§§ 23—25. The speaker now passes from the arguments in support of the main issue (or the case upon its merits) to those on which the defendant raises a special plea in bar of action.

The plaintiff's case cannot come before the court because he has given the defendant a discharge from the original lease of the Bank and Manufactory, and a second discharge from a subsequent claim which was settled by arbitration; and the laws allow no right of action where a release and discharge have been given or received.

ὧν μὴ εἶναι δίκας.] Infin. in relative clause influenced by λέγοντος. 'Among other cases in which an action cannot be maintained, those especially in which a discharge and release have been given or received.'

εἰ γὰρ κ.τ.λ.] The sense is, 'If it is just that, when once a case has been tried, it should not be tried again, even although the defeated litigant might fairly plead that the court had been imposed upon, a fortiori there is no ground for re-opening the question when a man has judged his own case and has palpably decided against himself by giving and receiving a discharge.' Cf. Or. 37, § 20.

αὐτοῦ...καταγνοὺς.] The two subsequent participles are subordinate in construction to καταγνοὺς. 'He who has clearly condemned (given a verdict against) himself by both granting and getting a release and discharge.' Madvig Gr. Synt. § 176, d.

ἀφείς καὶ ἀπαλλάξας.] It is clear the words do not mean the same thing, for below we have γέγονεν ἀμφοτέρω· καὶ γὰρ ἀφῆκε καὶ ἀπήλλαξε. ἀφίειναι is used of the lender, or the landlord, who, on settlement of his claims, releases the borrower or the tenant from all further liability (§§ 10, 15, 16, 17, 24). ἀπαλλάττειν refers to the debtor or tenant getting quit of his creditor or landlord by discharging or compromising the debt (34 § 22 τοὺς δανείσαν-

ΝΟΜΟΣ.

Ὁ μὲν τοίνυν νόμος, ὦ ἄνδρες Ἀθηναῖοι, σαφῶς οὕτως τὸν χρόνον ὥρισεν· Ἀπολλόδωρος δ' οὕτως παρεληλυθότων ἐτῶν πλέον ἢ εἴκοσι τὴν ἑαυτοῦ συκοφαντίαν ἀξιοῖ περὶ πλείονος ὑμᾶς ποιήσασθαι τῶν τας ἀπήλλαξεν). Settling a cross account between lessor and lessee (e.g. Apoll. and Phormio) would involve a double release and quittance on either side.

The present passage is the subject of the following article in Harpocration. ἀφείς καὶ ἀπαλλάξας· τὸ μὲν ἀφείς ὅταν ἀπολύσῃ τις τινα τῶν ἐγκλημάτων ὧν ἐνεκάλει αὐτῷ, τὸ δὲ ἀπαλλάξας, ὅταν πείσῃ τὸν ἐγκαλοῦντα ἀποστήναι καὶ μηκέτι ἐγκαλεῖν (recte). Δημοσθένης ἐν τῇ ὑπὲρ Φορμίωνος παραγραφῇ. ἔστι δὲ καὶ οὕτως εἰπεῖν, ὅτι ἀφίησι μὲν τις αὐτῶν μόνον ὧν ἀνέγκαλῃ, ἀπαλλάττει δὲ, ὅταν μὴδὲ ἄλλον τινα λόγον ὑπολίπηται ἑαυτῷ πρὸς τὸν ἐγκαλούμενον. Δημοσθένης ἐν τῇ ὑπὲρ Φορμίωνος παραγραφῇ “ὡς ἀπαλλαγὴ τις αὐτῷ γένηται παρ’ ὑμῶν κυρία.” Cf. Or. 37 §§ 1, 16, 19; Or. 38 § 5; Or. 38 § 3. Bekk. Anecd. pp. 202, 469.

that it had passed into a technical expression, and that practically they became synonyms. The grammarians were fond of ‘hair-splitting.’ P.]

§ 26. The plaintiff’s suit is also inadmissible for another reason; it contravenes the statute of limitations, in which the term of five years is fixed as a sufficient time for injured parties to recover their dues, whereas the plaintiff puts forward his claim after a lapse of more than twenty years.

προθεσμίας νόμον.] (See Dict. Antiq. s.v.)—Harpocr. Δημοσθένους ὑπὲρ Φορμίωνος· τὴν τῶν ἐτῶν ἀν’ λέγοι προθεσμίαν ὁ ῥήτωρ, ὡς ἐν τῷ λόγῳ ὑποσημαίνει. See Or. 38 §§ 17, 27, and cf. πλέον ἢ εἴκοσι.] The speaker apparently goes back to the time of Pasion’s lease of the banking business to Phormio, which cannot well have been later than B.C. 371, when Pasion was so infirm that he died a year after.

 of five years would be quite sufficient for injured parties to recover their rights if their claim were an honest one, whereas those who set up false claims, (a pointed thrust at the present plaintiff,) would be convicted by the fact that they had allowed the statutable period to elapse without taking action.
 ("Ἐλεγχον ἔσεσθαι sc. si per tot times wrongly supposed to imply that as in Roman law

there was no statute of li-subreptum erit, eius rei aeterna auctoritas esto*), so in Attic law there was none in case of falsehood, i.e. that even after five years a claim based on a false assertion might be disputed.

 (Telfy, Corpus iuris Attici § 1587, and K. F. Hermann, Privatalt.
 § 71, 6.) Here therefore it merely means κατὰ τῶν συκοmong bankers, there are many precedents for such an arrangement, and on grounds of expediency, as the only means of keeping up the business, Pasion acted prudently in directing that Phormio should marry his widow and thereby binding him more closely to his own household.

As to the point of honour, 'you may turn up your nose at Phormio's marrying into your family, but remember that in high character, he is more like your father than you are.'

That the marriage was directed by Pasion is not only expressly proved by the will, but is inferentially concluded from the plaintiff's own admission; for on his mother's death he permitted her two children by Phormio to share her property equally with himself and Pasicles, her two children by Pasion, and thus allowed the legality of this second marriage.

παρὰ τῶν κυρίων ἀπαλλαγείς ὥσπερ ὁ τούτου πατήρ.] A very close parallel. The banker referred to, like the plaintiff's father, had himself been a slave once, had been set free by his masters, and had given his wife in marriage to one who was formerly his slave. the latter then gave his daughter in marriage to his former servant. The first ἔδωκε therefore must mean, 'directed in his will that, after his own death, his widow should marry Hermæus.'

30. ὕμιν...τοῖς γένει πολίταις κ.τ.λ.] A compliment to the audience, designed to smooth the way for what might otherwise prove an invidious reference to the money-making of bankers in general and to the wealth of Pasion in particular. 'For you gentlemen of Athens, you who are citizens by birth, it is discreditable to prize any amount of money, however large, more highly than that honourable birth (lit. 'no amount of wealth is honourable for you to accept in place of your free birth;') but those who (like Pasion) have received the rights of citizenship as a free gift either from yourselves or from others, and who, thanks in the first instance to their good fortune, were deemed worthy of the selfsame privileges, by reason of having prospered in money-making and acquired more wealth than their neighbours, must do their best to preserve their pecuniary advantages.'

The sense is, 'though it would be wrong to prefer wealth to citizenship, it would also be unreasonable to be careless of the wealth which has gained you that very honour and privilege.'

αὐτὸν ὑβρίζων κ.τ.λ.] Disgracing, outraging, casting contumely on, himself and his family. σὲ ταῦτα λέγειν.] Notice the emphatic pronoun.

[ποῖον—πότερον. In Greek, the difference between the direct and the indirect question (qualem putas, and qualem putes) cannot be expressed from the want of 'subjunctivity.' It is doubtful whether πότερον is here masculine, in which case a comma should be placed at Πασίωνι. P.]

τὸ τέταρτον μέρος.] The property is divided into four parts, one of which is taken by Apollodorus, another by his brother Pasicles. The other two go to the children of the second marriage, who must have been two in number.

§§ 33—35. Anticipation of plaintiff's arguments, continued. He will impudently assert (1) that his father made no will and that the document produced was a forgery; and (2) that the reason why he forbore to press the charge at the proper time was that defendant promised to pay him a high rent.

In answer to (1), if there was no will, how came the plaintiff to succeed to the lodging-house which he holds in accordance with the terms of the will? In answer to (2), it is in evidence that after the termination of the defendant's lease, the plaintiff let the business to others; had the plaintiff any lawful claim on the defendant, he ought certainly to have brought it forward at the time of the subsequent lease.

33. εἰπεῖν...λέγειν.] Almost identical in meaning and used, as often, for variety of expression. Phil. II. § 11, ταῦθ' ἃ πάντες μὲν δει γλίσχονται λέγειν, ἀξίως δ' οὐδεὶς εἰπεῖν δεδύνηται. Isocr. ad Dem. § 41 and Paneg. § 11 n.

In Or. 45 § 42 Apollodorus himself, in criticising the διαθήκη, concludes with the words πάντα πεπλάσμενα καὶ κατεσκευασμένα ἐλέγχεται. Cf. Or. 41 § 24 σκευώρημα.

τὸν πρὸ τοῦ χρόνον.] 'During the former period.' πρὸ τοῦ sometimes spelt as one word προτοῦ. οὐχὶ δικάζεσθαι.] See Shilleto on Thuc. I. p. 153.

μίσθωσιν φέρειν.] We have frequently had μίσθωσιν in the sense of 'lease;' we here find it used like μίσθωμα for 'rent.' Or. 28 § 12 ἀποδέδωκε τὴν μίσθωσιν followed by λαβὼν τὴν πρόσδοον.

34. πρεσβεῖα.] By right of primogeniture.

τὴν συνοικίαν.] "It should be observed that the Attic language distinguishes between dwelling-houses (οἰκίαι) and lodging-houses (συνοικίαι); accidentally indeed a dwelling-house might be let out for lodgings, and a lodging-house have been inhabited by the proprietor himself" (Boeckh, Publ. Econ. i. 90). Apoll. may have already had a household of his own and his father may therefore have assigned him a συνοικία. (A. Schaefer Dem. u. s. Zeit, iii. 2. 133.) Cf. § 6 ἐπὶ συνοικίαις, n.

35. ὑποσχέσεων.] He will tell you, perhaps, that Phormio promised to pay a good rent (ὅπια χρεῖτο § 33), and so for a long time he withheld further action.

χρόνον πολὺν.] 'For a long time' (ten years as appears by § 37), acc. of duration of time, to be taken with μισθωταὶ ἐγίνοντο. Kennedy seems to be mistaken in taking it with τοῦδ' ἀπηλλαγμένου and translating 'who, long after the defendant's retirement, took a lease.' On the contrary, the new lease must have been granted very shortly after the defendant's connexion with the business ended, as eighteen years elapsed from the division of the property to the date of the speech, and the first eight belong to Phormio's lease and the last ten to the later lease of Xenon, &c. (cf. §§ 37, 19, 12). The general sense is this:

We have proved that, after Phormio had given up the bank, others became and long remained lessees (§ 13) of it. Apollodorus ought, the moment they took it, to have looked after his dues, and seen that all his money was in the business. But he made no claim at all, nay even thanked Phormio for his good services in the management.

§§ 36—42. The plaintiff will complain that he is utterly destitute and ruined. You must know then that, from the debts due to his father and the rents due to himself, he has received more than forty talents (about £9750).

Oh, but he has lavishly spent his money in the public service on trierarchal and choragic charges! On the contrary, all that he gave on his own account after the property was divided, barely amounted to twenty minae (£81). Even assuming his boasted liberality to be true, that is no reason for giving the defendant's property to the plaintiff, and thus reducing the former to poverty, while we see the latter squandering his money in his

smallest fraction of his income, not to say (I needn't say) of his capital.' This explains τοσαῦτ', tantilla.

ἀλαζονεύσεται τριηραρχίας ἐρεῖ.] 'Will in bragging terms talk of his trierarchal (and choragic) expenses.' Of such ἀλαζονεία there are instances again and again in Dem. and the other orators, e.g. Midias p. 566 seqq. In Or. 45 § 85, Apollodorus appeals to his father's trierarchies, and in § 66 taunts one of Phormio's witnesses, Stephanus, with having never done the smallest service to the state by τριηραρχία or χορηγία or any other λειτουργία whatever.

The plaintiff had really some good reason for being proud of his trierarchal services. Among the orations of Dem. a speech has come down to us (Or. 50, πρὸς Πολυκλέα) in which Apollodorus states that being appointed trierarch (in B.C. 362) he gave his vessel a splendid equipment and liberal wages to the crew; and for more than seventeen months traversed the Hellespont and other waters, often encountering perilous storms, in the public service.

42. τόνδε ἀπὸ τῶν αὐτοῦ.] 'That he should continue to serve you from his own resources,' &c. Pointing to Phormio, who is also referred to in τόνδε μὲν two lines further on. —τοῦτ' ὄντας τὰ τούτου, i.e. handing over to the plaintiff (Ap.) the property of the defendant (Phorm.). For a similarly ambiguous use of demonstrative pronouns, see above, § 12 n.

τόνδε μὲν... τοῦτον δ'.] Defendant and plaintiff respectively.

εἰς ἅπερ εἴωθεν ἀναλ.] A deliberately vague innuendo, which is partly justified by the details of a subsequent section (§ 45). In Or. 45 § 77, Apollodorus says with some self-complacency: τῷ μέτριος κατὰ πάσας τὰς εἰς ἐμαυτὸν δαπάνας εἶναι πολὺ τούτου καὶ τοιούτων ἐτέρων εὐτακτότερον ζῶν ἂν φαίην.

§§ 43—48. As to the defendant's wealth, and his having got it from your father's estate, you should be the last man in all the world to use such language. The defendant, like your own father, made his money by faithful and honest service, by personal integrity of character, and by that good credit and fair fame which in the commercial world is the best kind of capital.

Again, if you claim the defendant's property on the ground that he was once your father's slave, then Antimachus, a surviving son of your father's former master, might go still further, and claim your own estate and the defendant's too; yet, though now in a humble position far below his merits and his proper rank, he does not go to law with them, because they have money to spend while he is in destitution.

Instead of making the most of the good fortune by which your father and the defendant alike received the rights of freedom and citizenship, you are heartless enough to cast contumely on yourself and your parents, and on Athens too, for granting her privileges to people like yourself; you are senseless enough to forget that, by insisting that the defendant's former servitude should not be brought up against him, we are really speaking on your side and defending your own position. The rule, that you lay down to the detriment of the defendant, can as easily be advanced against yourself by the house to which your father was once a slave.'

43. πόθεν—κέκτηται Φ.] In Or. 45 § 80, Apollodorus unfairly says of Phormio, εἴη δίκαιος, πένης δὲ ἦν τὰ τοῦ δεσπότου διοικήσας. ... Had I dragged you off to prison as a thief caught in the act, with your present property clapped upon your back, ... and had I, supposing you denied the theft, demanded the name of the person from whom you received it, to whose name would you have appealed? οὐτε γὰρ σοὶ πατὴρ παρέδωκεν, οὐδ' εἶδες.

ἐκτήσαθ' εὐρῶν.] 'Got it by good luck' as a 'godsend,' a 'windfall,' a εὖρημα or Ἐρμαῖον. Passages like the present and the parallel from Or. 45 § 81 (given above) should be quoted in Liddell and Scott (s. v. εὐρίσκω, 4).

Ἀρχεστράτῳ.] Isocr. Trapez. § 43, Πασίων δὲ Ἀρχεστράτον μοι ἀπὸ τῆς τραπεζῆς ἑπτὰ ταλάντων ἐγγυητὴν παρέσχεν. (A. Schaefer Dem. u. s. Zeit III. 2. 131.)

δίκαιος.] 'Honest.'

ἐπιστεύθη.] 'Won his master's confidence,' 'was trusted.' So in Or. 50 § 56, Apollodorus describes the wide extent of his father's connexion and good credit (ἐπεξεῖνῶσθαι πολλοῖς καὶ πιστευθῆναι ἐν τῇ Ἑλλάδι).

44. ἐν ἐμπορίῳ καὶ χρήμασι ἐργαζομένοις.] Kennedy: 'In χρήμασιν ἐργαζομένοις ἀνθρώποις φιλεργὸν δόξαι καὶ χρηστὸν εἶναι τὸν αὐτὸν θαυμαστὸν ἡλίκον. οὐτ' οὖν ἐκείνῳ τοῦθ' οἱ κύριοι παρέδωκαν, ἀλλ' αὐτὸς ἔφυν χρηστὸς, οὔτε τῷδε ὁ σὸς πατήρ· σὲ γὰρ ἂν πρότερον 958 τοῦδε χρηστὸν ἐποίησεν, εἰ ἦν ἐπ' ἐκείνῳ. εἰ δὲ τοῦτο ἀγνοεῖς, ὅτι πίστις ἀφορμὴ πασῶν ἐστὶ μεγίστη πρὸς χρηματισμὸν, πᾶν ἂν ἀγνοήσεις. χωρὶς δὲ τούτων

the commercial world and the money-market it is thought a wonderful thing, when the same person shows himself to be both honest and diligent.' The order is: θαυμαστὸν ἡλίκον ἐστὶν ἀνθρώποις ἐργαζομένοις ἐν ἐμπορίῳ καὶ (ἐργαζομένοις) χρήμασι, τὸν αὐτὸν δόξαι φιλεργὸν καὶ εἶναι χρηστὸν, i. e. a reputation for business-like habits and a really honest character, when combined in the same person, have a striking influence in the money-market and the commercial world.

ἐν should be taken with ἐμπορίῳ only, the construction being (as G. H. Schaefer notices) ἐργάζεσθαι ἐν ἐμπορίῳ with the preposition, and ἐργάζεσθαι χρήμασιν without. Cf. Or. 57 § 31, ἐν τῇ ἀγορᾷ ἐργάζεσθαι with Or. 33 § 4, where τῆς ἐργασίας τῆς κατὰ θάλατταν is followed by τούτους (sc. τοῖς χρήμασι) πειρώμαι ναυτικοῖς ἐργάζεσθαι. [ἐν ἐμπορίῳ may also be taken by itself, 'in trade it is thought a great matter,' &c. P.]

δόξαι is slightly contrasted with εἶναι, the outward reputation for business habits with the inward and inherent honesty (cf. ἔφυν χρηστὸς below). G. H. Schaefer says, 'dativus regitur a verbo δόξαι. Deinde τὸ ἐξῆς est: τὸν αὐτὸν δόξαι εἶναι φιλεργὸν καὶ χρηστὸν:' but the position of δόξαι and εἶναι makes against this construction. Cf. Aesch. Theb. 592, οὐ γὰρ δοκεῖν δίκαιος ἀλλ' εἶναι θέλει.

It is the combination of δόξαι φιλεργὸν and εἶναι χρηστὸν that is insisted on, because a forger, for instance, might have all the air of a painstaking man of business without being really χρηστὸς; and vice versa, a man of unblemished morale might never get a name for financial skill, or even ordinary business-like habits.

οὔτε—οὔτε.] 'As then his masters did not bequeath to Pasion this virtue, but his honesty was natural, so neither did Pasion bequeath it to Phormio; for he would have made you honest rather than him, had it been in his power.' The philosophic questions, εἰ διδασκὸς ἀρετῇ, and τὸ φύσει ἅπαν κράτιστον, are perhaps held in view, though it is seldom that Demosthenes enters on the region of philosophy. P.]

Translate: 'And now we, in requiring that, as Phormio has left Pasion's service, it should not be remembered against him that he was once Pasion's property, are in fact speaking in your behalf; while you, in demanding that Phormio shall not be put on the same footing as yourself, are speaking against yourself.' §§ 49—53. The defendant's management of the family property was the very saving of the business, and in this and many other respects he has been a great benefactor to the plaintiff's father and to the plaintiff himself; and yet the latter is now demanding a verdict, which, if granted, will turn the defendant out of house and home, a ruined bankrupt, like those whom we remember. The plaintiff's father, esteeming the defendant more highly than his own son, wisely and prudently left him manager of his leases when he died, besides showing his esteem for him during his lifetime. And that esteem was well deserved, for while the other bankers, to whose losses allusion has just been made, did business on their own account, and therefore had to pay no rent to another, and were never- theless ruined; the defendant not only paid a rent for the bank but kept up the business for the family of the plaintiff, who, so far from being grateful, takes no account of all this, but even persecutes and calumniates him. Our friend, if for a moment we may call him so, little thinks that honesty is the best policy (as is proved by the defendant's prosperity). The plaintiff at any rate is a case in point; he has (if we are to believe him) lost all his money; had he been a man of sound sense he would not have thrown it away.

49. ἐκβαλεῖν.] In Or. 45 κατὰ Στεφάνου A § 70, Apollodorus taunts Stephanus (one of Phormio's witnesses in the present trial) with turning his own uncle out of his patrimony, for arrears of debt: τοκίζων...ἐξέβαλες ἐκ τῆς πατρῴας οὐσίας.

οὐ γὰρ ἄλλο γ'.] i.e. If heavy damages are granted the plaintiff, the penalty will prove none other than (will not fall short of) turning the defendant out of house and home. 'Examine the nature of his property closely and you will soon see whose it really is (cf. Teles quoted in § 11 n.) and into whose hands it will fall, if (which heaven forbid) the court is misled into condemning him.' The property consists largely of deposits at the bank, invested in different speculations, and incapable of being realised at a moment's notice. If Phormio has to pay damages, there will at once be a run upon his bank; his customers, to secure their property before it is paid away in damages, will claim their deposits, and Phormio, like others before him, will be bankrupt.

ἔχοις οὐδὲν ἂν.] Notice the strong affinity or attraction that ἂν has to the negative; which is the reason of the common hyperthesis οὐκ ἂν οἶμαι σε ποιεῖν, &c. Goodwin's Moods and Tenses, § 42. 2, n., and Short's Order of Words in Attic Greek Prose, p. xciv. (3) (b).

50. Ἀριστόλοχον.] In 45 § 64 Stephanus is described as cringing to Aristolochus the banker in his prosperity, and deserting his son when in great distress after Aristolochus was ruined and had lost all his property.

ποτ' εἶχεν ἀγρὸν κ.τ.λ.] 'He had a farm once,'—'he owned some land in his day; that land has passed to many owners now.' ποτὲ (olim) is seldom found in so emphatic a position. —πολλοί (sc. ἔχουσι τὸν ἀγρὸν).

there is much to be said for the old order retained by Bek-ker: ἐλαύνεις, διώκεις, συκοφαν-τεῖς. The latter is to some extent confirmed by the Rhetorician Tiberius (περὶ σχημάτων,
c. 31), who refers to this passage as an instance of a

συκοφαντεῖς, διώκεις^{cc}. ὦ βέλτιστε, εἰ οἶόν τε σέ τοῦτ' εἰπεῖν, οὐ παύσειⁱ, καὶ γνώσει^b τοῦθ', ὅτι πολλῶν χρημάτων τὸ χρηστὸν εἶναι λυσιτελέστερόν ἐστι; σοὶ γοῦν, εἴπερ ἀληθῇ λέγεις, χρήματα μὲν τοσαῦτ' εἰληφότι πάντ' ἀπόλωλεν, ὡς φῆς· εἰ δ' ἦσθα ἐπικεικῆς, οὐκ ἂν ποτε αὐτὰ ἀνήλωσας.

another Rhetorician (Alexander, περὶ σχημάτων, c. 10) as ἐπὶ πλείον ἐπὶ τοῦ αὐτοῦ νοήματος ἐπιμονὴ μετὰ αὐξήσεως. πολλῶν χρημάτων τὸ χρηστὸν λυσ.] Honesty is the best policy. The collocation of the cognate words χρήματα and χρηστὸς may be only accidental.

σοὶ γοῦν.] 'In your case, at any rate; γοῦν is exempli gratia, in illustration of a general maxim.

§§ 53—57. But though (for sake of argument) the speaker has pointed out the results which would ensue, if the defendant were condemned, he protests that he can see no ground for such condemnation. Plaintiff brings forward his charge, ever so many years after the alleged offence, and meanwhile has found time for incessant litigation, especially in public causes where his personal interests were but partially affected. While prosecuting so many others, how came he to let Phormio alone? The presumption is that the plaintiff was never really wronged by him, and that the claim now put in, so long after the event, is utterly false and groundless.

To meet these charges, it will be much to the purpose to produce evidence of the bad character of the plaintiff, and also of the integrity and kindly feeling, the generosity and the public services of the defendant.

53. ἔτεσι καὶ χρόνοις ὕστερον.] i. e. 'years and ages later,' 'ever so many years after,' 'years and years later.' The phrase is curious and is perhaps rightly suspected by Seager, who suggests the emendation ἔτεσι καὶ χρόνοις τοσούτοις ὕστερον (Classical Journal 1829, Vol. 30, No. 59, p. 109). It is defended by G. H. Schaefer who refers to Pausanias x. 17. 3, ἔτεσι δὲ ὕστερον μετὰ τοῦς Διφύας ἀφίκοντο.

ἀλλ' ὅτι τοῦτον ἀπράγμων ἦσθα τὸν χρόνον; ἀλλὰ τίς οὐκ οἶδεν ὅσα πράγματα πράττων οὐ πέπαυσαι, οὐ μόνου δίκας ἰδίας διώκων οὐκ ἐλάττους ταυτησί, ἀλλὰ δημοσίᾳ συκοφαντῶν καὶ κρίνων τινάς¹; οὐχὶ Τιμομάχου κατηγορεῖς; οὐχὶ Καλλίππου τοῦ νῦν ὄντος ἐν

We may compare Lysias 3 § 39 οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι...ὀργιζόμενοι παραχρήμα τιμωρεῖσθαι ζητοῦσιν, οὗτος δὲ χρόνοις ὕστερον. But the two phrases ἐρεσι ὕστερον and χρόνοις ὕστερον, however defensible in themselves separately, do not apparently occur in combination elsewhere; and it may therefore be worth while to suggest either ἀλλὰ τοσούτοις χρόνοις ὕστερον, or simply ἀλλὰ χρόνοις ὕστερον just as in the passage of Lysias above quoted. In the latter case ἐρεσι καὶ may be a corruption of a marginal gloss ἐρεσι ἢ i.e. 'twenty years,' a transcriber's note explaining χρόνοις by referring to § 26 παρεληλυθότων ἐτῶν πλέον ἢ ἑκοσι, and § 38 ἐτῶν ἰσως ἑκοσι. (Mr Shilleto suggests as a parallel to ἐρεσι καὶ χρόνοις, Cic. Verr. II. 3. 21 tot annis atque adeo saeculis tot.)

ἀπράγμων.] Often used of quiet and easy-going people who shrink from litigation. Or. 40 § 32 ἀπράγμων καὶ οὐ φιλόδικος. Cf. ἀπραγμοσύνη and its opposites,] πολυπράγμων, — πραγμογενῆς, — πραγμοσύνη. So also, in the next line, πράγματα πράττων, as is clear from the rest of the sentence, refers to the plaintiff's incessant litigation. Or. 27 § 1 οὐδὲν ἂν εἶδει δικῶν οὐδὲ πραγματῶν.

κατηγορεῖς.] Young students are apt to confound the imperfect κατηγορεῖς with the present κατηγορεῖς.

κρίνων τινάς.] The force of the sentence is much improved by Dobree's almost certain emendation κρίνων τινας οὐ; οὐχὶ Τιμομάχου κατηγορεῖς; κ.τ.λ., where the loss of οὐ would be accounted for by οὐχὶ following immediately after. Or. 37 § 14 πολλὰ δεηθέντος καὶ τί οὐ ποιήσαντος; 47 § 43 δεομένων ἀπάντων καὶ ἱκετευόντων καὶ τίνα οὐ προσπεμπόντων;

Τιμομάχου κ.τ.λ.] All these prosecutions are almost certainly connected with the naval operations extending over the plaintiff's protracted trierarchy of seventeen months in the Thracian Waters (in B.C. 362—361). In his speech against Polycles (Or. 50) Autocles, Meno, and Timomachus are mentioned as successive commanders of the fleet (§§ 12—14 and Or. 28 § 104—5); and while he there speaks in general terms of the maladministration of all the commanders (§ 15 τὰ τῶν στρατηγῶν ἀπιστά), he uses the strongest language against Timomachus, mainly for his treasonable collusion with an exiled relative, Callistratus. (See next note.) Timomachus was condemned, and put to death (Schol. on Aeschin. 1 § 56).

Καλλίππου τοῦ νῦν...ἐν Σικελίᾳ.] The context shows that this Callippus (who must not be confounded with the plaintiff in the speech of Apollodorus πρὸς Κάλλιππον Or. 52) can be none other than 'the son of Philon, of the deme Aexone,' who, at the request of Timomachus, conveyed Callistratus on board an Athenian trireme to Thasos from his place of exile in Macedonia, after Apollodorus had stoutly refused to allow his own vessel to be used for so unlawful a purpose (Or. 50 § 46—52). He may, with great probability, be identified with Plato's pupil of that name, with whom another of Plato's disciples, the well-known Dion of Syracuse, lived on friendly terms at Athens on his banishment from Sicily in B.C. 366. In August 357, Dion, with a small force, started from the island of Zacynthus, and during the absence of Dionysius the younger, made a triumphal entry into Syracuse, attended by his friend Callippus who was one of his captains, and is described by Plutarch as λαμπρὸς ἐν τοῖς ἀγῶσι καὶ διδόσμος. Ultimately, in the spring or summer of 353, Dion was assassinated by Callippus, who after usurping the government for thirteen months, was defeated in battle by a brother of the younger Dionysius, and after wandering about in Sicily and establishing himself in Southern Italy, at Rhegium, was shortly after (probably in A.C. 350) himself killed by his friends, with the very sword (as the story runs) with which he murdered Dion. (Plutarch, Dion, 17, 28—58; Plato Ep. vii.; Diodorus xvi. passim.)

Σικελία; οὐ πάλιν Μένωνος; οὐκ Αὐτοκλέους; οὐ 961

In the present passage Apollodus is stated to have prosecuted Callippus τοῦ υἱοῦ ὄντος ἐν Σικελίᾳ. The Athenian fleet (with Callippus) reached Athens from the Thracian coasts in Feb. 360, and Callippus started for Syracuse from Zacynthus in Aug. 357, so that the plaintiff's prosecution of him cannot well be placed later than the spring of 357, though it may have been two years earlier in 359, and in any case about the same time as his prosecutions of Timomachus, Meno and Autocles. (A. Schaefer Dem. u. s. Zeit, III. 2. 158—161.)

If the present speech is as late as 350 B.C., Callippus was still alive; at any rate, the news of his death cannot have reached Athens.

οὐ Τιμοθέου;] The charge against Timotheus, the celebrated Athenian general, may have been connected with his defeat at Amphipolis B.C. 360. At first sight the allusion might be explained of the plaintiff's private suit (Or. 49) against the general for sums borrowed from Pasion (cf. above § 36 n.); but the context appears to point expressly to public indictments (δημοσίᾳ in the previous sentence and τῶν κοινῶν in the next); though this reason is not conclusive, as the first part of the previous sentence refers to δικαίωται.

54. Ἀπολλόδωρον ὄντα κ.τ.λ.] Aculeatum et amarum dictum. Reiske. It is not like Apollodorus, it is inconsistent with his true character, to be going out of his way to undertake public prosecutions where his own interests πάντων μάλιστ' εἰς τὸ πρᾶγμα.] 'Very much to the purpose,'

'anything but irrelevant.' The depositions about to be produced on the general character of plaintiff and defendant, are liable to objection on the ground of their being beside the question. The speaker here meets that objection beforehand.

56. τὰς.] sc. μαρτυρίας. 'Testimony to the plaintiff's bad character.'

The four sets of depositions may probably be grouped as follows:

(1) General evidence of Phormio's good character.

(2) On his opponent's bad character.

(3) On Phormio's generosity

(4) On Phormio's public benefactions (§§ 56, 57, χρήσιμος τῇ πόλει, and § 58 ad fin.).

Ἄρ' οὖν ὅμοιος οὗτος, σκοπεῖτε.] Look on this picture and on that.

§ 57 to end. The defendant not only implores your protection, but claims it as his right. Generous in his benefactions and apart from his actual resources enjoying credit for at least as much besides, he is enabled by means of that good credit to be of advantage, not to himself alone, but to yourselves as well. Do not suffer so worthy, so energetic, so generous a man of business to be ruined by this abominable blackguard. Most of the plaintiff's statements you will simply disregard as baseless calumny, but you must order him to prove either that there was no will (cf. § 33), or that there is some other lease besides that produced on our side (cf. § 9), or that he did not give the defendant a release from all claims (§§ 15, 16), or that the laws allow a claim to be set up when once such a release has been given (§§ 23—5). Challenge him to prove any one of these points, or anything like them. If, for want of such proof, he resorts to ribaldry, don't attend to him, don't allow his loud and shameless assertions to mislead you; but carefully remember what you have heard on our side. If so, you will give a verdict which will be true to your consciences, true to the cause of justice. (The clerk shall read you the law and the remaining depositions.)

That is our case, gentlemen: I need not detain you any longer.

57. δέεται καὶ ἱκετεύει καὶ ἀξιοῖ σωθῆναι.] Requests, implores and claims your protection. Or. 27 § 68, and 57 § 1, δέομαι καὶ ἱκετεύω καὶ ἀντιβολῶ.

translates: 'It has been read out to you, that he has acquired such a heap of money as neither he nor any one else possesses.' This can hardly be right, particularly as such a blunt assertion of Phormio's affluence would be a very invidious statement for his friends to make, and would not ingratiate him in the eyes of the court. εὐπορεῖν χρήματα (or χρημάτων) has two senses, (1) 'to be well off'; (2) 'to supply money.' 'εὐπορεῖν,' says Lobbeck (Parergap. 595), 'nonsolum significat abunde habere...sed etiam suppetitare: ἐπικουρίαν ταῖς χρεαῖς ἐξευπορεῖν' Plato Legg. xi. 153; χρήμαθ' ὑμῖν προσευπορηκῶς Dem. Phorm. 962. Cf. Apat. 894. 14' (Or. 33 § 7 εὐπορήσεν αὐτῷ δέκα μνᾶς); 'de reb. Chers. p. 94 (συνευπορούντας ἐκείνῳ χρημάτων); Boeot. p. 1019 (Or. 40 § 36 χρήματα εὐπορήσας); Neaer. 1369. 10; Aeschin. Timarch. p. 121; Lycourg. Leocr. p. 233; quibus inter se collatis intelligitur, quanta sit utriusque notionis contagia, a Romanis quoque unius verbi suppetendi angustiiis conclusa.' (See note on Or. 40 § 36, and cf. 33 § 6 τριάκοντα μνᾶς συνευπορήσαι.)

We must here take the secondary sense of εὐπορεῖν, and explain the passage as follows: 'The depositions read aloud to you show that the defendant has (lit. he has been recited to you as having) provided you on emergencies with larger sums of money than his own (οὗτος i.e. our friend, the defendant's) or any one else's private fortune amounts to; but then he has credit, &c.' The sentence πίστις μέντοι κ.τ.λ. shows how it came to pass that Phormio was enabled, as a capitalist in the enjoyment of extensive credit in the commercial world, to advance sums of money larger than the private resources of any single individual.

πίστις.] 'Credit.' Cf. § 44, πίστις ἀφορμή κ.τ.λ.

58. ἂ μὴ προῆσθε.] 'Do not throw this away,' i.e. 'do not sacrifice these advantages to the interests of the plaintiff.'

μηδ' ἐπιτρέψητε ἀνατρέψαι.] Possibly an unintentional collocation of two compounds of τρέπω. One word, however, might suggest the other. 'Do not suffer this wretch to overturn it,' i.e. overthrow the defendant from his high position and good credit.

[The metaphor is perhaps from overthrowing a fabric of wealth, as in Aesch. Pers. 165, μὴ μέγας πλοῦτος κοίσας οὐδας ἀντρέψῃ ποδὶ δλβον ὃν Δαρειὸς ἦρεν οὐκ ἀνευ θεῶν τινός, i.e. 'injurious pede proruere.' P.]

In Liddell and Scott the

τούτῳ ἀνθρώπῳ, μηδὲ ποιήσητε αἰσχρὸν παράδειγμα, ὡς τὰ τῶν ἐργαζομένων καὶ μετρίως ἐθελόντων ζῆν τοῖς βδελυροῖς καὶ συκοφάνταις ὑπάρχει παρ' ὑμῶν λαβεῖν· πολὺν γὰρ χρησιμώτερα ὑμῖν παρὰ τῷδε ὄντα ὑπάρχει. δρᾶτε γὰρ αὐτοὶ καὶ ἀκούετε τῶν μαρτύρων, οἷον ἐαυphrase ἀνατρέπειν τράπεζαν is explained 'to upset a banker's table, i.e. to make him bankrupt.' The only passage quoted is Dem. 403. 7, where however there is no reference whatever to a bankruptcy, but only to the overturning of a table towards the close of a disorderly banquet.

In Andocides de Mysteriori, § 130, we have a curious passage stating that in Athens there was a story current among the old wives and the little children, that the house of Hipponicus was haunted by an unquiet spirit that overturned his table (Ἰππώνικος ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ ἀλιτήριον τρέφει, ὃς αὐτοῦ τὴν τράπεζαν ἀνατρέπει). πῶς οὖν (the orator continues) ἡ φήμη ἢ τότε οὕσα δοκεῖ ὑμῖν ἀποβῆναι; οἰόμενος γὰρ Ἰππώνικος υἱὸν τρέφειν, ἀλιτήριον αὐτῷ ἔτρεφεν, ὃς ἀνατέτροφεν ἐκείνου τὸν πλοῦτον, τὴν σωφροσύνην, τὸν δ' ἄλλον βλὼν ἅπαντα. But the only place, so far as I can find, in which the phrase has a distinct reference to bankruptcy is the Scholium on Dem. Timocr.

αἰσχρὸν παράδειγμα κ.τ.λ.] 'A disgraceful precedent that the property of men in business, who live respectable lives, may be obtained from you by miscreants and pettifoggers.' Κ. ὑπάρχει, 'that the laws allow,' 'that it is a condition of your polity.'

59. τοῦ λυσιτελ. εἰς χρήματα.] Pecuniary advantage; instead of being placed between the article and participle, as would be most natural, εἰς χρήματα is reserved for a more emphatic position.

καιρὸν ἐν τίνι.] Confused between ἐν τίνι καιρῷ, and καιρὸν ἐν ᾧ, κ.τ.λ. Cf. Or. 56 § 24 n., and Plat. Rep. p. 399 π βλὼν ρυθμοὺς ἰδεῖν κοσμοὺς τε καὶ ἀνδρείου τίνες εἰσίν· οὓς ἰδόντα κ.τ.λ. Cf. Isocr. ad Dem. § 5 συμβουλεύειν, ὧν χρῆ... ὀρέγεσθαι καὶ τίνων ἔργων ἀπέχεσθαι, n.

δεικνύναι.] sc. κελεύετε, 'tell him to try if he can show,' &c.

61. λέγῃ.] 'Go on talking,' &c.

[φυλάττετε may mean 'retain in your mind,' though the middle is more usual. So Aesch. Suppl. 179, αἰνῶ φυλάξαι τὰμ' ἐπη δελτουμένας. But we may also render it 'keep a guard over him,' though not, of course, 'beware of him,' which would be φυλάττεσθε. P.]

62. τὸν νόμον καὶ τὰς μαρτυρίας.] The context does not show what law or what depositions are referred to: possibly another νόμος of the same general purport as that recited before,

Οὐκ οἶδ' ὅ τι δεῖ πλείω λέγειν· οἶμαι^α γὰρ ὑμᾶς οὐδὲν ἀγνοεῖν τῶν εἰρημένων. ἐξέρα τὸ ὕδωρ.

^α οἶμαι Ζ (cf. § 18).

§ 25 (ὦν μὴ εἶναι δίκας), and further evidence to facts or to the defendant's character (ἀξιον δντα, § 61).

οὐκ οἶδ' ... εἰρημένων.] The same sentence verbatim is found at the close of Or. 20 (Lept.), 38 (Nausimach.), and 54 (Conon); and also at the end of the 7th and 8th speeches of Isaeus.

ἐξέρα τὸ ὕδωρ.] 'Pour out the water.' See Midias, § 129. (Cf. ἐξερᾶν τοὺς λίθους in Ar. Ach. 341, and τὰς ψήφους in Vesp. 993.) The only other passage where the phrase is found is at the end of Or. 38, where the whole of this short epilogue recurs.

The speaker having concluded his speech within the legal limits of time measured by the κλεψύδρα, pointedly calls on the attendant to empty the 'water-clock.' The rhetorical effect is that the court is reminded that the speaker has spared them a longer speech, and the defendant gets the credit of having so good a cause that the orator does not find it necessary to avail himself of the full time at his disposal.

The result of Phormio's plea is thus stated by Apollodorus (Or. 45) κατὰ Στεφάνου Α, § 6, οὕτω διέθηκε τοὺς δικαστὰς ὥστε φωνὴν μὴδ' ἡντιοῦν ἐθέλειν ἀκούειν ἡμῶν· προσοφλῶν δὲ τὴν ἐπωβελίαν καὶ οὐδὲ λόγου τυχεῖν ἀξιοθεῖς, ὥς οὐκ οἶδ' εἰ τις πώποτε ἄλλος ἀνθρώπων, ἀπῆεν βαρέως, ὧ ἄνδρες Ἀθηναῖοι, καὶ χαλεπῶς φέρων.

§§1—2. Exordium (προοίμιον).
Having been defeated by false testimony in my suit against Phormio, I have come into court to claim a verdict against those who compassed that outrageous and atrocious wrong. I ask the jury to give me a friendly and favourable hearing; and, if I make good my case, to grant me the redress which is my due.

In the former trial, the defendant Stephanus in particular gave false evidence against me, prompted by corrupt motives;
and I propose to prove this from his own testimony. A brief recital of the relations between Phormio and myself will help the jury to form an opinion on the villany of Phormio and the falsehood of his witnesses.

The Exordium is not unlike that of Or. 54, κατὰ Κόνωνος, where, as here, the προαῦλιον (Ar. Rhet. iii. 14) or, as we should say, the key-note of the whole speech is struck in the opening words: ὕβρισθεις ὦ ἄνδρες δικασταὶ καὶ παθὼν ὑπὸ Κόνωνος κ.τ.λ.—The appeal ad captan- dam benevolentiam, πρῶτον μὲν εὐνοϊκῶς ἀκοῦσά μου, also occurs in Or. 54 § 2, and similarly the formula εἰτ' ἐάν (ἡδικῆσθαι καὶ παρανενομησθαι) δοκῶ, βοηθήσαι μοι τὰ δίκαια, and lastly the promise of brevity, ὡς ἂν οὐδὲ τε ὦ διὰ βραχυτάτων.

καταψευδομαρτυρηθεὶς.] 'Crushed by' (or 'having been the victim of') false testimony.' Cf. Or. 33 § 37, and Plat.

pher intended doubtless to refer to Or. 29 § 6, where the middle participle explained by him is to be found.

δέομαι ... ἱκετεύω ... ἀντιβολῶ.]
Cf. infra § 85, Or. 27 (Aphobus A) § 68, and 57 (Eubul.) § 1. Such combinations of two or three nearly synonymous verbs are very common in the undisputed speeches of Demosthenes (e.g.
Or. 36 § 47, ἀγεις εἰς μέσον, δεκνύεις, ἐλέγχεις; ib. 52, ἐλαύνεις, συκοφαντεῖς, διώκεις; ib. 57, δεῖται καὶ ἱκετεύει καὶ ἀξιοῖ; Or.
54 § 33, δικάζομαι καὶ μισῶ καὶ ἐπεξέρχομαι). The speech ὑπὲρ Φορμίωνος alone contains nearly forty such passages; of the speeches delivered by Apollo-dorus, the first oration against Stephanus has more than 30, while in the rest there is hardly anything of the kind, though in the second speech against Ste-phanus, § 28, we have δέομαι

The former is frequent in Attic verse, the latter is generally found in prose; the former is most often used of the gracious condescension of a deity; the latter of the kindly feelings of ordinary human beings. Or. 4 § 45, τὸ τῶν θεῶν εὐμενές, illustrates the rule, while the exception in the present passage may be paralleled from Herod. vii. 237, ξείνος δὲ ξείνῳ...εὐμενέστατον πάντων. [Add Eur. §§ 3—8. Narrative (διήγησις). My father Pasion left behind him at his death a large property which got into the hands of Phormio, who also married Pasion's widow, my mother Archippe, during my absence from Athens on public service. On my return, I threatened Phormio with legal proceedings in consequence of this marriage, but my case did not come on; and afterwards a reconciliation was brought about. Subsequently, however, on Phormio's refusing to fulfil his engagements and attempting to rob me of the banking-stock leased him by my father, I was compelled to prosecute him at the earliest opportunity.

Phormio thereupon put in a special plea in bar of action, and brought forward false witnesses to shew that I gave him a discharge from all further claims, and to attest to a lease which in fact was a fabrication and to a will that never existed.

The result of his plea, which gave him the advantage of the first hearing, was that the jury would not listen to me at all; I was fined for failing to make good my case and left the court in high dudgeon at my ill-treatment. On reflection, however, I feel that the jury, in their ignorance of the real facts, could not, on the evidence, have found any other verdict; but I have a right to be indignant with the false witnesses who brought about that result,—and with Stephanus in particular whose evidence shall

δημοσίᾳ.] To be taken with ἀποδημούντος. 'Cum publice (in causa publica) abessem.' The fondness of the Greeks for participles is shewn by the addition of τριηραρχούντος which is subordinate to, and explanatory of, ἀποδημούντος. Or. 36 § 25, and Madv. Gk. Synt. § 176, d.

This trierarchy of Apollodorus may almost certainly be connected with the negotiations between Athens and the Elder Dionysius towards the close of his career. It appears from a decree discovered near the Propylaea in 1837, and restored by A. Kirchhoff in the Philologus for 1857 (xii. p. 571—8), that Athenian ambassadors were sent to Syracuse in the summer of B.C. 369 and in B.C. 368. Cf. esp. τοῦ[των δὲ τοὺς ἐπὶ Δυσσικῆτρον ἀρχόν]τος πρέσβ[εις διακομίζεν τὴν ὁμολογί]αν. The trierarchy may be identified with that of Or. 53 § 5, and probably belongs to the later of these two embassies in B.C. 368, as we read in Or. 46 § 21, ἐγὼ μὲν ἀπεδήμουν τριηραρχῶν, τετελευτήκει δ' ὁ πατὴρ πάλαι, ὅτε οὗτος ἔγηνε, where πάλαι, though a vague word, shews at any rate that a considerable time elapsed between the death of Pasion in B.C. 370 (Or. 46 § 13), and his widow's marriage with Phormio. (Im. Hermann, de tempore, etc. p. 9; A. Schaefer, Dem. und seine Zeit, iii. 2. 146; and Lortzing, Apollodorus, p. 3.) affectation of dutiful delicacy of feeling towards his mother in the early portions of the speech is rather inconsistent with the apparently gratuitous insinuation towards its close, where he broaches the suspicion that his own brother Pasicles (who was eight years old at his father Pasion's death) was really her son by Phormio (§ 84).

δίκην ἰδίαν (γραφὴν ὕβρεως.)
Cf. Or. 54 § 1, ad fin.—διὰ τὸν πόλεμον. This suspension of lawsuits, which the plaintiff found in force on returning from his trierarchy in B.C. 368, was due to the hostilities between Athens and Thebes in the period between the battle of Leuctra in B.C. 371, and the death of Epaminondas at the battle of Mantinea in B.C. 362.
The courts were not sitting for ordinary business, perhaps because there was no pay for the dicasts (cf. Or. 39 § 17); and the only process that was available under the circumstances was a public action. So just below δικῶν οὐκ οὐσῶν means, as the courts continued closed for private suits. ὑμεῖς refers to the citizens generally, who are said, in the medial sense, 'to have had the sessions (τὰς δίκας) postponed.'

5. ἵνα...συντέμω.] The reason for the speaker's hurrying over this part of his statement is partly because the overtures of reconciliation on Phormio's side, which he takes credit to himself for candidly admitting, are really more to Phormio's credit than to his own.

Δίκην] i.e. the suit κατὰ Φορ-plea is put in on Phormio's behalf in Or. 36. The words ἐπειδὴ τάχιστα ἐξουσία ἐγένετο are possibly meant as a partial reply (they are at any rate the only reply given in this speech) to that portion of Phormio's plea which traversed his opponent's suit on the ground that it infringed the 'statute of limitations' (Or. 36 § 26). But it may be noticed on Phormio's side that at least 18 years had elapsed since the death of Apollodorus' father, and eight since that of his mother, before the suit was instituted; and during the interval the plaintiff found time for ever so many lawsuits in cases where his private interests were but partially concerned (Or. 36 § 53).

the defendant); and also of the lawsuit itself in Or. 34 § 18. Cf. Or. 34 § 1, οὐδεμίαν πρόποτε δίκην πρὸς ὑμᾶς εἰσῆλθαμεν, οὐτ' ἐγκαλοῦντος οὐτ' ἐγκαλοῦντες οὐτ' ἐγκαλούμενοι ὑφ' ἐτέρων.—ἐξ αὐτῆς, ex ipsa, perhaps, rather than ex ea.—On ἐπίλαβε τὸ ὕδωρ cf. note on Or. 54 § 36.

Στέφανος Μενεκλέους κ.τ.λ.] Like many, if not most of the documents inserted in the speeches of the Attic Orators, this deposition may be regarded as spurious. Its purport is to be found in §§ 9—26 and in Or. 46 § 5. The names of Tisias, Cephisophon and Amphias are given in §§ 10, 17, and Or. 46 § 5. Stephanus and Tisias, as well as Pasion and Apollodorus are assigned to the deme Acharnae in the documents only (§§ 28, 46), not in the speech itself. Στέφανος Ἀχαρνεὺς appears in an inscription as trierarch in B. C. 322, but this is not likely to be the defendant in the present action, for at that date the latter, if (as is not improbable) he was about the same age as Apollodorus, would be about seventy; and we can hardly suppose that one who was so poor a patriot as not to have undertaken any public services up to the age of 45 or thereabouts (§ 66), would have embarked on a trierarchy at so advanced an age. But the name was far from uncommon, and the deme may have been assigned at random by the writer of the document.

The name Ἐνδίου Ἐπιγένους Λαμπτρεὺς is given in one MS. only (cod. Ven. Φ.). An inscription, however, of B. C. 325 gives the name Κριτόδημος Ἐνδίου Λαμπτρεὺς whose father may be the Ἐνδίου of the text, though the name is not a rare one.

Lastly, Σκύθης is naturally an uncommon name for an Athenian, though found as such in an inscription. The name of his father, Ἀρματεὺς, does not occur elsewhere, except in Stephanus of Byzantium, who makes it mean 'an inhabitant of Harma' which he wrongly supposes to be a deme of Attica, whereas it was really the name of a part of the ridge of Parnes. (Abridged from A. Westermann's Untersuchungen über die in die Attischen Redner eingelegten Urkunden, pp. 105—8).

εἶναι τὰ ἀντίγραφα κ.τ.λ.] A loosely expressed sentence. τὰ ἀντίγραφα τῶν διαθηκῶν cannot be construed as the subject, and unless we alter τὰ into τὰδε (as the Argument has it) or ταῦτ' (as Dobree proposes) we must rather awkwardly get the predicate out of τὰ ἀντίγραφα. The speaker himself expresses the sense better in §§ 10, 23. (Westermann, u. s. p. 108.)

§§ 9—14. It is deposed that Phormio challenged me to open the will, produced (it is alleged) before the arbitrator; that I refused the challenge and would not open the 'will,' that the document to which they depose is a counterpart of the original will; and then follows the copy.

Let us examine this evidence. In the first place, why should one have refused to open the document?

'Oh! to prevent the jury from hearing the terms of the will.'

But, I reply, the witnesses deposed to the will as well as to the challenge, and thus the jury would hear the terms of the 'will' publicly recited from the 'copy' whether I opened it or not. What was I to gain by refusing? Why! even if they had given no challenge, and had made a mere assertion, and if some one had produced a document purporting to be Pasion's will, it would have been my interest to challenge them and to open the will. In this case, (1) had the contents differed from the terms of the deposition, I should have appealed to the bystanders to bear witness to the discrepancy, which would have been a strong proof that the rest of their case was got up for a purpose. (2) Had the contents agreed, I should have required the producer himself to give evidence. Had he consented, I should have had in him a responsible witness; had he declined, here again I should have had proof enough that the affair was a fabrication. On this hypothesis, I should have had to deal with one witness only, instead of with many (as my opponents have made it out); and of course I should have preferred the former, and so would every one else; for where (as here) there is room for cool calculation, no one would be so foolish as to abandon his own interests and do what would damage his case; and yet, by deposing that I refused to open the 'will,' these witnesses represented me as doing what is improbable, unreasonable, and contrary to all experience.

In brief, the first point which the plaintiff attempts to make in proving the evidence to be false, is that assuming he was challenged to open the 'will,' he sees no reason why he should have refused a challenge which it would have been to his interest to accept. On the other side, it may be noticed that the plaintiff had a strong reason for refusing to open the 'will' and thus give express recognition to an important document, the contents of which as he himself says elsewhere (§ 21) were detrimental to his own interests.

(A. Schaefer, Dem. III. 2. p. 171). So far, the case clearly tends against Apollodorus.

9. οὐ μὴν ἀλλ'...] 'Nevertheless,' 'however,' 'not but that.' The ellipse which this combination of particles always involves may be here supplied by some such words as οὐ μὴν (ὑμᾶς τοῦτο χρὴ θαυμάζειν) or (παράλειπεν τοῦτο χρὴ) ἀλλ' ἔγωγε κ.τ.λ. Kühner's Gk. Gr. § 535, 7.

was the use then of my refusing to open it?'

καὶν εἰ.] The ἂν strictly belongs to the apodosis ἐμὸν ἦν, but is here, as often, put as early as possible. Cf. Or. 36 § 42, οἶμαι... καὶν εἰ... λέγοι, κάλλιον εἶναι. Sometimes the construction of the apodosis shews that καὶν εἰ is regarded as much the same as καὶ εἰ, e.g. Plato Meno 72 c, καὶν εἰ πολλὰ καὶ παντοδαπαῖ εἰσιν, & γέ τι εἶδος τάνδον ἀπασαι ἔχουσι. Kühner, Gk. Gr. § 398, p. 210. Buttmann calls this "ἂν consopitum," where its force is, as it were, dormant. It is peculiar to the later or middle Attic.

rather uncommon use of ἄλλος with gen. (like ἕτερος, ἄλλοτριος, διάφορος) cf. Xen. Mem. iv. 4. 25, πότερον τοὺς θεοὺς ἡγῆ τὰ δίκαια νομοθετεῖν ἢ ἄλλα τῶν δίκαιων. This is one of the non-Demosthenic uses that strike us in this oration.—Dobree suggests ἄλλ' ἄττα ἀντὶ τῶν.

τεκμηρίῳ κ.τ.λ.] sc. τούτῳ ἐχρώμην τεκμηρίῳ ὡς καὶ τὰλλα κατασκευάζουσι.—In the next clause αὐτὸν ('to give evidence himself') is contrasted with the several witnesses, οἱ περὶ Στέφανου.

ἐβελήσαντος μὲν.] i.e. εἰ μὲν ἤθελησε contrasted with εἰ δ' ἔφευγε. We should naturally expect ἐβελήσαντα, as the use of gen. absolute, in reference to the same person as the acc. ὑπεύθυνον, is somewhat exceptional, the rule being that the gen. absolute is generally found only when there is no other case in the sentence to which the participle might attach itself. Cf. however, Xen. Cyr. i. 4. 2, ἀσθενήσαντος αὐτοῦ (sc. τοῦ πάππου) οὐδέποτε ἀπέλιπε τὸν πάππον. (Kühner, Gk. Gr. § 494 b, Madvig, Gk. Synt. § 181 B. 6.) ὑπεύθυνον.] Liable to a prosecution for ψευδομαρτυρία.

καὶ δὴ καὶ κ.τ.λ.] Kennedy translates: 'And the result was, that in that way, I had one person to deal with,' doubtless intending by the categorical form of the sentence to shew that in the Greek the conditional is only implied and not directly expressed, in other words συνέβαιεν (like ἡξίουں... ἐλάμβανον... ἦν above) is put without ἄν.—'Malim καὶ δὴ κ' ἂν συνέβαιεν et μοχ' ἔστιν οὖν ὅστις ἂν ὕμῶν,' says Dobree, comparing § 33 bis, and also proposing in § 34 τίς γὰρ ἂν ἀνθρώπων. The last two emendations are accepted in Dindorf's text.

[All the imperfects in this remarkable sentence, which does not read altogether like the style of Demosthenes, depend on the preceding ἵνα, 'in which case it would have happened that, &c.' The addition of ἂν would be quite out of place here, though it is necessary in the clause ἔστιν οὖν ὅστις (ἂν) ὕμῶν, which passes into quite a different construction. P.]

 ματα γέγονέ μοι.

14. οὐ...οὐδὲ κατ' ἄλλου πισ-τεύειν.] 'Well then, you cannot fairly believe it of any one else either.'

ὅσοις...τῶν πραττομένων.] The participle is best taken not as
 gen. after ὀργή but after ὅσοις, which is neuter. Cf. § 15, ὅσα... τῶν πεπραγμένων. 'In every course of action attended by anger, or by getting of gain, or by any exasperation ('keen resentment,' 'strong provocation') or by a spirit of jealousy, one man may act in one way, another in another, according to his individual character.'

παροξυσμός.] This word, found twice in the New Testament (Hebr. x. 24, Acts xv. 39), is never used by Demosthenes, nor indeed does it appear to occur elsewhere in the sense of 'exasperation' in any of the earlier Greek writers. In the Aphorisms of Hippocrates, 1243

(Liddell & Scott) it is a medical term, in the sense perpetuated in our 'paroxysm.' The verb however is found in Dem. 57 § 49, ἢ πόλις πάσα...ὀργιζομένη παρώξυντο, and ib. § 2; also the adj. in Or. 20 (Lept.) § 105, λόγοι παροξυντικοὶ πρὸς τὸ...πέεσαι.

λογισμὸς κ.τ.λ.] 'A calm calculation of one's interest.' [The phrase seems rather unusual, like ἀφείδῃ τὰ συνοίσοντα, 'giving up what was likely to prove his interest.' P.]

§§ 15—19. Again, the witnesses depose to a Challenge as well as to a Will. Now Challenges are meant to meet the case of those transactions, which it is otherwise impossible to bring before the court. In the present case, what call was there for a Challenge? The arbitration took place in Athens, and they have deposed that the original will was produced before the arbitrator; if this was true, they ought to have put the original will into the box and the producer should have proved it by evidence, in which case the jury, after weighing the credibility of the deposition and inspecting the seals of the will, would have decided accordingly; and, had I thought myself wronged by the verdict, I might have proceeded against the deponent in question. But, as it is, no single witness has undertaken the whole responsibility; no! they have cleverly divided it, by one witness (Cephisophon) deposing to having a document inscribed 'Pasion's Will;' and another (Amphias), to having produced it after being sent to do so by the former witness; but whether it was genuine or not, was 'more than he knew.'—In fact, Stephanus and his friends have made the Challenge a mere mask under cover of which they might depose to a will, so that the jury were led to believe that the will was my father's, and I myself was debarred from being heard on my wrongs, and so that by these very means my opponents might ultimately be convicted of having given false evidence—a result which they hardly expected.

15. μὴ ἐθέλω.] ἐθέλω is the proper form in Attic prose, θέλω in Attic verse, but the latter is occasionally found in Dem. in such formulae as ἂν θεὸς θέλῃ. (See Veitch Gk. Vbs.) The Paris ms Σ has θέλω, which was adopted in Dindorf's earlier editions.

προκλήσεις.] Harpocr. s. v. εἰώθεσαν ὅπότε δεκάζουσιν τινας, ἐξαίτεῖν ἐπὶ τοῖς θεραπαῖνας ἢ θεράποντας εἰς βάσανον ἢ εἰς μαρτυρίαν τοῦ πράγματος, καὶ τοῦτο ἐκαλεῖτο προκαλεῖσθαι, τὸ δὲ γραμματεῖον τὸ περὶ τούτου γραφόμενον ὠνομάζετο πρόκλησις. παρὰ πολλοῖς δὲ ἐστὶ ρήτορες. Δημοσθένης δ' ἐν τῷ κατὰ Στεφάνου καὶ περὶ ὧν πρόκλησις γίνεται δηλοῖ.

16. βασανίζειν οὐκ ἐστὶν ἐναντίον ὑμῶν.] In Dobree's Adversaria, we have the suggestive note 'Qu. interrog. Qu. the fact.' As a general rule doubtless this examination of slaves took place in private, before a magistrate or arbitrator or other authorized person, in the presence of a number of bystanders either concerned as witnesses or merely present out of curiosity (Or. 47 § 12); and the text as it stands would seem to imply that administration of torture in open court was not allowed.—We find Aeschines (Fals. Leg. § 126) proposing to 'question' certain slaves in public: ἀγωμεν δὲ καὶ τοὺς οἰκέτας καὶ παραδιδώμεν εἰς βάσανον... παρῆσται δὲ ἡδὴ ὁ δῆμιος καὶ βασανιεῖ ἐναντίον ὑμῶν, ἂν κελεύῃτε... κἀλεῖ μοι τοὺς οἰκέτας δεῦρο ἐπὶ τὸ βῆμα... At this point (it is important to notice) follows a Challenge which Demosthenes declines.

οἶον εἴ τι πέπρακται καὶ γέγονεν ἔξω πον τῆς χώρας, ἀνάγκη καὶ τούτου πρόκλησιν εἶναι πλεῖν ἢ βαδίζειν οὐ τὸ πρᾶγμ' ἐπράχθη· καὶ τῶν ἄλλων τῶν τοιούτων. ὅπου δ' αὐτὰ τὰ πράγματα ἐφ' αὐτῶν ἔστιν ὑμῖν ἐμφανῇ ποιῆσαι, τί ἦν ἀπλούστερον ἢ ταυτ' ἄγειν εἰς μέ-17 σον; Ἀθήνησι μὲν τοῖνυν ὁ πατήρ ἐτελεύτησεν οὐμός, ἐγένετο δ' ἡ δίαίτα ἐν τῇ ποικίλῃ στοᾷ, μεμαρτυρήκασι δ' οὗτοι παρέχειν τὸ γραμματεῖον Ἀμφίαν πρὸς τὸν διαιτητὴν. οὐκοῦν εἶπερ ἀληθὲς ἦν, ἐχρῆν αὐτὸ τὸ

Thus we have a proposal only, and it may be concluded from ἂν κελεύετε, that even if the Challenge had been accepted, the court would have had to give a special order for such departure from ordinary usage.

Again in Or. 47 (Dem.) κατὰ Εὐέργου ψευδομαρτυριῶν § 16, we read: ἔδει αὐτὸν, εἴπερ ἀληθὴ ἦν ἃ φασιν αὐτὸν προκαλεῖσθαι, κληρομένους τῶν δικαστηρίων κομίσαντα τὴν ἀνθρωπον, λαβόντα τὸν κήρυκα, κελεύειν ἐμὲ, εἰ βουλοίμην, βασανίσαι, καὶ μάρτυρας τοὺς δικαστὰς εἰσώντας ποιεῖσθαι ὡς ἔτοιμός ἐστι παραδοῦναι. But it would be idle to suppose that this passage proves that the torture might take place in open court; all that is meant is that the defendant might have produced the girl, when the court was about to sit, challenged the plaintiff to 'question' her, and called on the jurors to bear witness that he was ready to hand her over to be tortured in the usual manner and not in public court.

οἶον—ἔξω τῆς χώρας.] As an illustration of this form of Challenge, we find in Or. 32 the plaintiff (Zenothemis) borrowing money in Syracuse (§ 4) and the defendant challenging him at Athens to sail to Syracuse and appear before the authorities there (§ 18). Cf. ex iure manum consertum voco in Cicero pro Murena § 26 (with Mr Heitland's note).

πλεῖν ἢ βαδίζειν.] Here, as often, contrasted with one another, as the ordinary words for 'going by sea or by land,' Fals. Leg. § 164. οὐτ' ἐπείγασθαι βαδίζουσιν οὐτε πλεῖν αὐτοῖς ἐπύξει.

17. ποικίλῃ στοᾷ.] 'The frescoed porch.' So called from its pictures, representing the legendary wars of Athens and the battle of Marathon (Aeschin. Ctesiph. § 186). As is well known, it was this portico which gave the name of Stoics to the followers of Zeno of Citium. Persius III. 53 quaeque docet sapiens braccatis illiis Medis Porticus.

The public arbitrators had particular buildings assigned them according to the tribe to which they belonged: thus in Or. 47 § 12 the arbitration takes place in the Heliaea, οἱ γὰρ τὴν Ολυεῖδα καὶ τὴν Ἐρεχθίδα διαιτῶντες ἐνταῦθα κάθηνται.

ἐχρῆν] As usual, without ἂν. We might have had εἴπερ ἀληθὲς ἦν, ἐνέβαλεν ἂν τὸ γραμματεῖον, implying ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐνέβαλεν, whereas the sentence as it stands γραμματεῖον εἰς τὸν ἐχίνον ἐμβαλεῖν καὶ τὸν παρέχοντα μαρτυρεῖν, ἵν' ἐκ τῆς ἀληθείας καὶ τοῦ τὰ σημεῖα ἰδεῖν οἱ μὲν δικασταὶ τὸ πρῶγμα ἔγνωσαν, ἐγὼ δὲ, εἴ τις ἡδί-18 κει με, ἐπὶ τοῦτον ἦα. νῦν δὲ εἰς μὲν οὐδεὶς ὅλον τὸ πρῶγμα ἀνεδέξατο, οὐδὲ μεμαρτύρηκεν ἀπλῶς, ὡς ἂν τις τὰληθῇ μαρτυρήσειε, μέρος δ' ἕκαστος, ὡς δὴ σοφὸς καὶ διὰ τοῦτο οὐ δώσω δίκην, ὁ μὲν γραμματεῖον ἔχειν ἐφ' ᾧ γεγράφθαι διαθήκη Πασίωνος, ὁ δὲ πεμφθεὶς ὑπὸ τούτου παρέχειν τοῦτο, εἰ δ' ἀληθὲς ἡ ψεύ-19 δος, οὐδὲν εἰδέναι. οἰδὶ δὲ τῇ προκλήσει χρησάμενοι 1107 παραπετάσματι διαθήκας ἐμαρτύρησαν, ὡς ἂν μάλισθ' does not require ἂν because it implies not ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐχρῆν, which would be absurd, but χρῆ μὲν ἐμβαλεῖν ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐνέβαλεν. So also with ὥφελον, ἐμελλον, ἔδει, προσῆκεν; 'sed multo latius patet haec ratio... Omnino, ubicunque non potest contrarium opponi, recte abest particula.' Hermann de particula ἂν § XII. On a similar principle we have τί ἦν ἀπλούστερον above, which follows the analogy of δίκαιον ἦν, εἰκὸς ἦν, &c.

τὰ σημεῖα.] Probably the seals attached to the will (cf. Becker's Charicles, Sc. ix. n. 14), and not those on the deposition-case or ἐχίνος (as supposed in Starke's addendato Hermann's Privatalt. § 65, 9). On the ἐχίνος cf. Or. 39 § 18, σσημασμένων τῶν ἐχίνων, and note on Or. 54 § 27. For the opening of the seals of a will, see Ar. Vesp. 584, κλᾶν ἡμεῖς μακρὰ τὴν κεφαλὴν εἰπόντες τῇ διαθήκῃ, καὶ τῇ κόγχῃ τῇ πάνυ σενμῶς τοῖς σημείοισιν ἐπούση.

ἦα] 'perhaps old Attic, Plat. Theaet. 180, Rep. 449' Veitch Greek Verbs s.v. εἶμι. As first person ᾄειν is rare, but προσῆειν is not. In § 6 we have had ἀπῆειν.

18. εἰς...οὐδεὶς.] 'No single witness has accepted the whole responsibility;' cf. § 38 διελθόντο τὰδίκηματα. εἰς οὐδεὶς is a much stronger negative than οὐδεὶς. Or. 21 (Meid.) § 12, ἐν γὰρ οὐδὲν ἔστω ἐφ' ᾧ...οὐ δίκαιος ὢν ἀπολωλέναι φανήσεται. Cf. Fals. Leg. § 201, ἐν οὐδ' ὀτιοῦν.

ὁ μὲν...ὁ δὲ.] Cephisophon (§§ 21, 22)...Amphias (ὁ Κηφισοφώντος κηδεστής, § 10).—The subject of ἕκαστος (ὁ μὲν...ὁ δὲ) is μεμαρτύρηκε implied by the former part of the sentence. This is all that is meant by Dobree's punctuation 'Distingue ὁ δὲ, πεμφθεὶς' to shew that πεμφθεὶς is subordinate to παρέχειν and is not to be taken with ὁ δὲ. Trans. 'another, that he produced the will on being sent by him (Amphias).'

19. παραπετάσματι] sc. προφάσει, (Or. 46 § 9 πρόφασιν...τὴν πρόκλησιν), προσχήματι, as a 'cloak,' or 'pretext,' lit. a 'screen' or 'curtain.' Plat. Protag. 316 ε ταῖς τέχναις ταύταις παραπετάσμασιν ἐχρήσαντο, immediately after προσχῆμα ποιεῖσθαι καὶ προκαλύπτεισθαι.

ὡς ἂν μάλισθ' οἱ δικασταὶ... ἐπίστευσαν... ἐγὼ δὲ ἀπεκλείοἱ δικάσται ταύτην τὴν διαθήκην ἐπίστευσαν τοῦ πα-τρὸς εἶναι, ἐγὼ δὲ ἀπεκλείσθην τοῦ λόγου τυχεῖν ὑπὲρ ὧν ἀδικοῦμαι, οὗτοι δὲ φωραθεῖεν τὰ ψευδῇ μεμαρτυσθην ... οὗτοι δὲ φωραθεῖεν ...] This sentence, as it stands in the mss, can only mean 'The present witnesses (Stephanus, &c.) used the challenge as a pretext for giving evidence of a will, in the very way in which the court would have believed that the will was my father's, and I should have been debarred from getting a hearing, and in which my opponents would now be palpably convicted of giving false evidence.' This makes nonsense, as the jury in the former trial did believe the witnesses, and Apollodorus was debarred from speaking. ἄν is quite out of place with ἐπίστευσαν and ἀπεκλείσθην, but not so with φωραθεῖεν (which cannot here be taken as a simple optative expressing a wish). It thus appears that we should (with G. H. Schaefer) remove ἄν from the aorist indicative and place it with the aor. optative, and read as follows: ὥς (or ὥσθ') οἱ δικάσται...ἐπίστευσαν, ἐγὼ δὲ ἀπεκλείσθην...οὗτοι δ' ἄν μάλιστα φωραθεῖεν. The sense thus gained is fairly satisfactory: 'the witnesses combined giving evidence of a challenge with giving evidence of a will (made the former a pretext for the latter). The result was that the jury in the previous trial believed the will was really my father's and therefore decided against me without giving me a hearing on my present wrongs; with the further result that by that very means my opponents would be clearly convicted of having given false evidence;—a result quite the contrary of what they anticipated.'

Hermann attempts to explain the passage by the following translation:

'Illi vero, provocationis prae-textu usi, de testamento testati sunt eo modo, quo facillime iudices hoc patris testamentum esse credere, ego autem ab oranda causa mea excludi debebam [?], ipsi vero—falsa testati esse deprehenderentur; atqui contrarium sperabant. Illa enim οὗτοι δέ, (hic voce paullum subsistit orator) φωραθεῖεν τὰ ψευδῇ μεμαρτυρηκότες, ironice dicta esse patet' (Opuscula iv. 27 de particula ἄν i. 7).

Dobree says: 'Sensus est: ita rem administrarunt, ut tunc quidem iudices deciperent; postea autem hoc palam fieret, quamvis id non praeviderent.—Qu. de modorum permutatione. Similis locus F. Leg. 424. 16' τοσοῦτ' ἀπέχουσι τοῦ τοιοῦτόν τι ποιεῖν, ὥστε θαυμάζουσι καὶ ζηλοῦσι καὶ βούλουτ' ἄν αὐτὸς ἑκαστος τοιοῦτος εἶναι.

[I suggest ὥς ἄν εἰ μάλιστα, and perhaps οὗτοι γε infra, (though οὗτοι δὲ might mean 'yet these' &c.). 'They gave their evidence so, that if the dicasts were ever so much persuaded, and I was stopped from further proceedings then, yet they will be detected in having lied.' ὥς ἄν φωραθεῖεν is a virtual synonym of ὥστε φωραθῆναι. See Aesch. Ag. 357 (366 Dind.) and my note.

§§ 19—23. To prove this, take the evidence of Cephisophon. He deposes to a document having been left him by my father, inscribed 'Pasion's Will;' thinking that to depose to this only was a mere trifle, and that he could not safely go so far as to add (what in itself would have been a simple matter) 'that this was the document produced by the deponent.'—Now, had Phormio's name appeared outside, the deponent might reasonably have kept the document for Phormio; further, had it really been endorsed 'Pasion's Will,' it would have belonged to me by inheritance like the rest of my father's property, and I should of course have appropriated it, feeling that, with a lawsuit before me, the will, if its terms were those alleged, would be rather detrimental to my interests. The fact that, in spite of the alleged endorsement, it has been produced to Phormio, not to myself; and been let alone by me, proves the forgery of the will and the falsehood of the deposition of Cephisophon. However, I dismiss him for the present, especially as he has given no evidence on the contents of the will, which by the way is a strong proof of the falsehood of the deposition of Stephanus and his friends. Cephisophon, the very person who deposes to having the document, did not dare to depose to its identity with that produced by Phormio; and yet the present witnesses (Stephanus and his friends) have declared that it is a copy of the other, though they cannot claim to have been present when the will was drawn up, never saw it opened before the arbitrator, and indeed have deposed that I refused to open it. If so, have they not clearly charged themselves with having given false evidence?

Μαρτυρία.] The wording of this deposition is identical with that of the speech itself (§§ 18 and 20), with the exception of the clause ὑπὸ τοῦ πατρὸς, (naturally suggested by καταλειφθῆναι,) and the description of the witness as Κεφάλωνος Ἀφιδναῖος. Κεφάλων is a parallel form of Κεφαλών and is found elsewhere (Plut. Arat. 52). One Κηφισοφών Ἀφιδναῖος is mentioned in inscriptions as trierarch and commander of the fleet, and it has been proposed to identify him with the witness in this case, though the name of the trierarch's father is not given (Boeckh, Seewesen p. 442). The composer of the deposition may have been led to assign Cephisophon to Aphidna by a passage in Or. 59 κατὰ Νεαίρας πῶς οὐκ ἂν ἀνερρήμην...] ‘I should of course have appropriated it.’ The plaintiff actually says that if the terms of the will were such as alleged and if it had been really inscribed ‘Pasion’s Will’ (διαθήκη is emphatic: ‘had the endorsement been, not merely, ‘This is Pasion’s,’ but ‘This is Pasion’s will,’ &c.’), then he would certainly have claimed it as heir to his father’s property and, finding it detrimental to his own interests, would have kept it close.’ The effrontery of this statement is sufficiently startling.

As regards the phrase διαθήκη ἀναιρεῖσθαι, it may be noticed that in Isæus Or. 6 (Philoct.) §§ 30—

§§ 24—26. Let us now examine the terms of the deposition and we shall see that its object is to make it appear by any means, fair or foul, that my father made this will. It speaks of 'the will of Pasion;' whereas it ought to have run 'the will which Phormio asserts to have been left by Pasion;' and you are aware that there is a vast difference between a thing being really true and Phormio's saying so.

25. εἰ τὰ μάλιστα.] 'If it were ever so true that the challenge took place, which I utterly deny.'—ἐκείνως, 'in a form which I am about to shew,' viz. in § 26 τῶν διαθηκῶν (not τῶν Πασίωνος) but ὧν φησι Φορμίων Πάσιωνα καταλιπεῖν.

26. εἴ τινές εἰσι.] 'if there is any will of Pasion's at all.'

ὥσπερ ἐν ἀρχῇ τῆς προκλήσεως.] ὥσπερ should perhaps be struck out.

φάσκειν [sc. εἶναι διαθήκας.] Here, as often, used with the collateral notion of saying what is untrue. Thus both φημι and φάσκω are used in Soph. El. 319 of promising without performing: φησὶν γε φάσκων δ' οὐδὲν ὧν λέγει ποιεῖ. [For the whole sentence, cf. Eur. Alc. 528 χωρὶς τό τ' εἶναι καὶ τὸ μὴ νομίζεται.]

[§§ 27, 28.] An examination of the terms of the 'Will' proves that Phormio had important motives for forging it, viz. (1) to escape the penalty for seducing one who shall be nameless, (2) to secure all my father's money that was in my mother's hands; and (3) to obtain control over all the rest of the family property.

27. κατασκευάσμα.] The 'fabrication,' 'forgery,' of the will. Cf. κατασκευάζειν in §§ 13 and 20.

ὧν διεφθάρκει ἦν...] 'To escape the penalty of having corrupted her whose name I cannot here mention without impropriety, but whom you yourselves know without my naming her.' (For this 'delicacy of allusion,' cf. note on § 3.)—ὧν διεφθάρκει ἦν is equivalent to τῆς διαφθορᾶς τῆς γυναικὸς ἦν (or τοῦ διεφθαρκεῖναι ταύτην ἦν). The substantive is here 'thrown into' the verb as in Fals. Leg. § 238 p. 415 ἐν αὐτοῖς οἷς ἐτιμᾶσθε, 'in the very honours you enjoyed,' where Shilleto quotes de corona § 312 ὑπὲρ τοῦ κατασχεῖν.] 'for the purpose of securing.' So inf. § 47 ὅπως τὴν ἀφορμὴν τῆς τραπέζης κατὰσχοι.

κυρίῳ γενέσθαι.] The dative is used as though the sentence had begun with ἡ διαθήκη κατεσκευάστο Φορμίῳ instead of with its equivalent in sense ἦν τὸ κατασκευάσμα τὸ τῆς διαθήκης. The regular construction would of course require κύριον (proposed by Lambinus and approved by G. H. Schaefer).

λελυμασμένου.] Also a dependent perfect in Or. 19 § 105 and Or. 21 § 173 (λελύμανται). The inf. is found as pass. in Or. 20 § 142.—The sense is:—'a slave who is thinking how to escape punishment for having wronged, dishonoured, his master's household, damaged his master's property.' τὰ τῶν δεσποτῶν refers to his master's wife [but is expressed purposely in a general way. Aeschylus however uses γυναῖκος λυμαντήριος in this sense, Ag. 1413 and Cho. 751. P.]

διαθήκην μετὰ τῆς προκλήσεως.] § 12 προσεμαρτύρουν τῇ προκλήσει τὴν διαθήκην and § 15 πρόκλησιν ὁμοῦ διαθήκην μαρτυρεῖν. The mss have πρὸς, which is altered by Reiske into μετὰ and by Dobree into διὰ (cf. § 81 τὴν μίσθωσιν ἦν τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον διὰ προκλήσεως ἐνέβαλοντο).

'Malim τῶν.....τῶν.' Dobree.

Sumsingross, charged on land, are meant (as Pabst and Kennedy understand it); not annual rents (as G. H. Schaefer supposes).—On συνοικίαν see notes on Or. 36 §§ 6 and 34.

καὶ τοῦ ζητῆσαι... ἀποκλείων.] See on Or. 40 § 15 ἐὰν τι οὗτοι τῶν πατρῶν ἐπιζητῶσι.

§§ 29—36. Again, the 'lease' upon which Phormio took the bank from my father, though itself a fabrication, will prove the 'Will' an utter forgery.

It concludes with a clause stating that my father owes eleven talents to the bank. This was added in order that whatever sums were traced to Phormio, might be made out to have been 'paid' in discharge of this debt, and not embezzled.—(You imagine perhaps that, as Phormio speaks bad Greek, he is merely a foreigner and a fool. To be sure, he is anything but a good Greek in hating those he ought to honour, but in villany and knavery he is far from a fool.)

The terms of the 'lease' shall now be read and examined.

(1) No one would have paid so large a rent, as that alleged, for the banking business.

(2) No one would have committed the rest of his property to a man under whose management the Bank got into debt.

(3) The stringency of the proviso preventing Phormio from doing business as a banker on his own account is inconsistent with the singularly generous terms of the will and proves the latter to be a forgery.

29. τὴν μίσθωσιν κ.τ.λ.] See Or. 36 §§ 4—6.—καὶ γὰρ ἐκ ταύτης, 'for from this too,' &c. [The clause καίπερ ἐσκευωρημένης reads unlike the style of Demosthenes. P.]

πλάσμα.] Cf. πέπλακε in line 10 of Argument, and Or. 36 § 33. Hesychius has πλάσμα· σχηματισμός (late Greek 'pretence'). ψεύσμα. ἢ κτίσμα.

ἔνδεκα ταλ.] The origin of this 'debt' is carefully explained in Or. 36 §§ 4—5 (see note on προσώφειλε p. 6), and in the present speech, the plaintiff says nothing that materially shakes that explanation. [The construction is, ὀφείλων τούτῳ εἰς τὰς π., 'owing Phormio eleven talents on the deposits,' or 'for the deposits' which he had put out to interest. Kennedy translates, 'upon the deposits to Phormio.' See § 31 fin. P.]

30. ὡς ἐπὶ τῇ μητρὶ δοθέντων.] 'As my mother's dowry. Or. 40, περὶ προικὸς, § 6, ἐκδόντος αὐτὴν... καὶ προῖκα τάλαντον ἐπιδόντος.

πάντες ᾗδεσαν κ.τ.λ.] This must be taken as a rhetorical exaggeration. All that the speaker probably means is that as Phormio was only the lessee, not the owner of the bank, he could be called upon by Apollodorus, the lessor after Pasion's death, to give an account of all the moneys held by the bank. As a contrast we have in § 66 ἐργασίας ἀφανεῖς διὰ τῆς τραπέζης ποιῆται.

κεκομίσθαι.] In middle sense. Or. 41 § 11 οὐκ ἀνενηνόχασι κεκομισμένοι (τὴν φιλίην). Or.

56 (Dionysod.) § 3 δέον δ' αὐτὸν ἐν τῇ πέρυσιν ὥρα κεκομίσθαι τὰ χρήματα. Trans. 'that whatever sums he might be proved to possess, he might pretend he had recovered in the way of debts.'

σολοικίζει τῇ φωνῇ, βάρβαρον.] (See note on Or. 36 § 1 τὴν ἀπειρίαν τοῦ λέγειν.) σόλοικος is a word of narrower meaning than βάρβαρος and is applied mainly to faults of pronunciation or mistakes in Grammar, especially Syntax, due to foreign extraction; while βάρβαρος, though originally referring to language (as an onomatopœtic word connected with the Sanskrit varvara 'a jabberer') and at first describing the incoherent jargon, as the Greeks considered it, of all languages but their own, gradually attained a wider signification and embraced all that was non-Hellenic in the customs, the politics, the laws, and the moral and intellectual characteristics of foreign nations. (Cf. Isocr. Paneg. § 3 n.)

Hesychius (possibly with the present passage in view) has the gloss σολοικίζειν βαρβαρίζειν, and Aristotle (περὶ σοφιστικῶν ἐλέγχων § 3) explains σολοικίζειν by τῇ λέξει βαρβαρίζειν and (in § 14) illustrates it by instances from the rules of gender. The distinction drawn between βαρβαρισμός and σολοικισμός by Zeno and the Stoics, and accepted by the writers on Rhetoric, is perhaps best expressed by Quintilian: 'vitium quod fit in singulis verbis, sit barbarismus ... cetera vitia omnia ex pluribus vocibus sunt, quorum est soloeisismus' (I. 5, 6 and 34).

ὠφειλήκει ἢ τράπεζα.] Phormio's account is that Pasion owed 11 talents to the bank;
 whereas Apollodorus unfairly, as it seems, treating this sum as a deficit though it stood in Pasion's hands to the credit of the bank, denounces Phormio for having caused the bank to get into debt. [Apollodorus wishes to throw a doubt on Phormio's ever having had a lease at all on the terms now brought forward. He says he would have been a fool to pay so much for a business that was encumbered if not insolvent; and Pasio would have been equally foolish if he had let the bank to one who had managed it so badly as Phormio. P.]

εἰ γὰρ κ.τ.λ.] A sophistical argument to bear out the previous clause δι’ ὃν ὠφειλήκει ἢ τράπεζα. It is quite true that ἡ τράπεζα ἐνεδέησε χρημάτων, but then the 11 talents in question were held by Pasion on the security of land and were part of the assets of the business.—

34. ἐὼ ταῦτα κ.τ.λ.] The speaker, it will be observed, makes no attempt to meet fairly the statement made on the opposite side, accounting for the 11 talents not being actually in the bank. (Or. 36 §§ 4—6).

[ὑφῆρηται. Phormio, he says, has filched, or secretly withdrawn, eleven talents from the bank, which he now pretends Pasion and Pasion's heirs were bound to repay. P.]

μὴ τραπεζιτεῦεν.] The object of this clause appears to have been to prevent Phormio's doing business on his own account, apart from the profits made on the bank. The plaintiff seems rather unfairly to suggest that Phormio was allowed to make no profit whatever out of the lease.

τίς γὰρ ἂν κ.τ.λ.] 'Is there any man, I ask, who, after taking precautions to ensure his own children receiving the profits of a lessee's management of the bank, by preventing him from doing business on his own behalf, nevertheless actually provided for that lessee's appropriating the profits he had himself laid by in his lifetime and left behind him on his death?' [The two things, he says, are inconsistent. If Phormio must bank only in the interest and for the benefit of Pasion's family, it was not likely that he would have had so much money left him by Pasion; i.e. he must have got it unfairly. The sentence is artificially constructed, and is one of those sometimes called 'bimembered,' where each clause is antithetical to the other, as here προϋνοήθη ὅπως το παρεσκεύασεν ὅπως. P.]

τυχὼν γε τῆς παρ' ὑμῶν δωρεᾶς.] The fact that Pasion was made a citizen of Athens increases the disgrace brought on his family by his providing in his alleged will that his wife should marry Phormio.—Or. 59 § 2 ψηφισαμένου τοῦ δήμου τοῦ Ἀθηναίων Ἀθηναῖον εἶναι Πασίωνα καὶ ἐκγόνους τοὺς ἐκείνου διὰ τὰς εὐεργεσίας τὰς εἰς τὴν πόλιν followed by τῇ τοῦ δήμου δωρεᾷ. Or. 36 § 47. [τυχὼν γε seems an imaginary answer in favour of Phormio; 'very true; but then it was after he had received the franchise (that he took the wife).' 'So then' (the retort is), 'like a slave who makes a wife over to his master, rather than in the converse case, Pasion gave him, it seems, a marriage portion larger than any citizen ever did!' P.] ὥσπερ ἂν.] sc. διδοίη. Pasion's gift of his wife with a large dowry to Phormio, is the kind of gift a slave might offer his master in acknowledgement that all the slave had, belonged by right to his master, and not such a gift as might be expected from a superior to an inferior, in which latter case a very slight favour would be enough, at any rate the inferior would be content with being allowed to have the honour of being married to his superior's wife, without any dowry at all.

τοῖς εἰκόσι... ἐξελέγχεται ψευδῇ.] 'That which the facts, the dates, the probabilities of the case, shew to be false, Stephanus the defendant has not scrupled to bear witness to.' K. For τοῖς εἰκόσι see esp. §§ 9—14. τοῖς χρόνοις seems inexplicable, except as a rhetorical flourish, for we have had nothing like an argument from dates; and Dobree rightly asks Quomodo? Even τοῖς πεπραγμένοις is barely justifiable, unless it is to be referred to §§ 15—18.

§§ 37—39. Phormio attempts to prove the existence of the 'will,' by going about saying that Nicocles gave evidence to having been guardian, and Pasicles to having been in wardship, under the will. Why then were not the terms of the will deposed to by Nicocles and Pasicles, instead of by Stephanus and his friends? Was it because the former did not know the terms? If not, much less could the latter. How then came the latter witnesses to depose to one set of facts, the former to another? It's the old story; they divided the responsibility of the wrong; the guardian and ward deposed to the guardianship as being under the will, and the other witnesses, under cloak of a challenge, deposed to the contents—the scandalous contents of the 'will.'

§§ 40—42. In bar of the previous action, Phormio pleaded a discharge deposed to have been granted by me, releasing him from all further claims. This is false, as I shall prove at the proper time; but suppose you assume it to be true, it shews that Stephanus has given false evidence and that the will to which he bears witness is a forgery. For no one would be so foolish as to take the precaution of having witnesses present when he gave a discharge to a lessee with a view to getting rid of any claims against himself on the part of that lessee; and yet allow the 'lease' itself and the 'will' to remain

40. παρεγράψατο... ὡς ἀφέντος.] See notes on Or. 36 Argument l. 23 and ib. § 29. The distinction there drawn between ἀφιέναι and ἀπαλλάττειν may be exemplified thus:

ἀφῆκε μὲν Ἀπολλόδωρος ὁ ἀπαλλαγείς, ἀπῆλλαξε δὲ Φορμίων ὁ ἀφεθεῖς.

41. τοῦτ' κ.τ.λ.] Stephanus, however, has no right to declare that the evidence to the release is false. [The meaning is, that Stephanus was in league with Phormio, and therefore was not in a position to deny, though he knew it to be untrue, any plea of Phormio's against A.]

τοῦ βεβαίαν αὐτῷ τὴν ἀπαλλαγὴν εἶναι.] The plaintiff's object in having witnesses to his alleged ἀφesis of Phormio would be to ensure his own ἀπαλλαγή, that is, his getting quit of any counter-claim on the part of the latter. Or. 33 § 3, πάντων ἀπαλλαγῆς καὶ ἀφέσεως γενομένης.

If ἀπαλλαγή were synonymous with ἀφesis, we should have to render 'in order to make his discharge of Phormio's dues valid.' 'Who would be such a fool,' he would then ask, 'as to give an ἀφesis in presence of witnesses and so lose all right to further claims?' But the sense is rather: 'Admit it true that the plaintiff gave a release to Phormio in the presence of witnesses with a view to his own riddance of any counter-claim on Phormio's part; no one who had (as alleged) done this, would be such a fool as to allow the compacts and agreements, the will, &c. (καὶ τὰλλα sc. περὶ τὴν μίσθωσιν) to remain in existence to his own detriment. No! if he had given a receipt, he would have opened and suppressed the documents. But as a fact, he had not touched them, and his refraining from suppressing them is thus inconsistent with the alleged grant of a release to Phormio. — ποιήσασθαι ἄφεσιν not 'to get' but 'to give a release,' = ἀφείναι, as 'any verb in Greek may be resolved into the cognate substantive with ποιείσθαι.' Shilleto on Fals. Leg. § 103.

42. ἐναντία μίσθωσις... διαθήκη.] §§ 34—36. For πεπρασμένα cf. Or. 36 § 33. — ἐκ τούτου τοῦ τρόπου, 'in this manner.' Kennedy, doubtless following Bekker's text (ἐκ τοῦ τούτου τρόπου), translates: 'just what you might expect from this man's character.'

§§ 43—56. Stephanus will urge, that he is not responsible for a deposition but for a challenge, and for the latter on two points only, (1) the question whether Phormio made this challenge or not, and (2) whether I refused it; and that the terms of the challenge mentioned in the deposition are Phormio's business, not his. If so, the witness ought to have had the words erased when his deposition was drawn up; it is now too late to disclaim them, and he is bound in this trial by the terms of his own plea that he 'gave true testimony, in testifying to that which is written in the record.'

With all their respect for 'written law,' the obligations of relationship had more of religious sanction. See Cox, Hist. of Greece, I. pp. 15—18. P.]

54. ὁ τῆς ἐμῆς γυναικὸς πατὴρ.] i.e. Deinias, father of the Theomnestus who speaks the first 15 §§ of Or. 59 κατὰ Νεάρας, when Apollodorus takes up the speech. Apollodorus, besides being brother-in-law to Theomnestus by marrying the sister of the latter, gave his own daughter in marriage to him (Or. 59 § 2).

δοὺς· ἐκ τοῦ ἀνεψιῦ γεγενῶς,

§ τῆς ἀνεψιάς, i.e. cousins once removed, second cousins. The form of the word follows the analogy of λυκιδεύς, κωαδεύς, ἀδελφιδεύς, θυγατριδεύς, ἀλωπεκιδεύς, the terminations in -ιδεύς, -ιδέος, -αδεύς, -αδέος (οὐς), being a kind of patronymic form. P.] See Diet. Ant. s. v. Heres.

πολλοὶ πεποιήκασι κ.τ.λ.] Instances of such generosity are given in the passages quoted from Dem. in the note on § 35 supra, where instead of ἐπιδόουσι προῖκα the rather less common phrase προσθεῖναι προῖκα is used.

τὰ συγγενεῖας ἀναγκαῖα.] 'The strong ties of kindred.' Cf. necessitudo. Fals. Leg. § 290. ὅπερ συγγενῶν καὶ ἀναγκαίων. Cf. Or. 36 § 30 ἀνάγκη... οὐκείων.

55. Δεινίας Θεομνήστου Ἀθμονεὺς.] The father's name is γατέρα αὐτοῦ ἐκδοῦναι Ἀπολλοδώρῳ κατὰ τοὺς νόμους γυναικα ἔχειν, καὶ μηδεπώποτε παραγενέσθαι, μηδὲ αἰσθῆσθαι ὅτι Ἀπολλόδωρος ἀφήκε τῶν ἐγκλημάτων ἀπάντων Φορμίωνα.]°

- 56 Ὅμοιός γε ὁ Δεινίας, ὃ ἄνδρες δικασταί, τούτῳ, ὃς ὑπὲρ τῆς θυγατρὸς καὶ τῶν θυγατριδῶν καὶ ἐμοῦ τοῦ κηδεστοῦ διὰ τὴν συγγένειαν οὐδὲ τάληθῇ μαρτυρεῖν ἐθέλει κατὰ τούτου. ἀλλ' οὐχ οὕτοσὶ Στέφανος, οὐκ ὥκησε καθ' ἡμῶν τὰ ψευδῇ μαρτυρεῖν, οὐδ' εἰ μηδένα τῶν ἄλλων, τὴν αὐτοῦ μητέρα ἰσχύνη τοῖς ἀπ' ἐκείνης οἰκέλοις τῆς ἐσχάτης ἐνδείας αἴτιος γενόμενος.

very likely to be right, as Deinias had a son named Theomnestus (Or. 59 §§ 2 and 16) and the grandson very often bore the same name as the grandfather (note on Or. 39 § 27). But of the numerous persons named Deinias or Theomnestus, not one is described in any inscription as Ἀθμονεύς, and the ascription of the witness to the deme in question is perhaps due to the invention of the composer of the document.

It is clear that Deinias, on being called, refused to swear to the deposition read aloud to him, οὐδὲ τάληθῇ μαρτυρεῖν ἐθέλει. The deposition ought therefore to be followed by the word ἐξωμοσία as in § 60. (A. Westermann, u. s. pp. 109—111.) Cf. Or. 49 § 20.

Apollodorus, be it observed, assumes that the reason why Deinias refuses to swear to the deposition is that it would be to the detriment of his kinsman Stephanus; but the disclaimer may really have been due to Deinias being aware that the evidence was false. As the document before us is untrustworthy, we cannot tell what the proposed evidence really was,—possibly something referring to Pasion's will (as suggested by Westermann u. s.) or rather something to the detriment of Stephanus' character, e.g. his bad behaviour to Apollodorus and his family, or his receiving bribes from Phormio to give false evidence against the plaintiff. (Lortzing, Apoll. p. 80.)

56. ἀλλ'—οὐκ ὥκησε.] Elsewhere, we have the ἀλλὰ repeated, e.g. Or. 21 (Meid.) § 200 ἀλλ' οὐ Μειδίας, ἀλλ' ἀπὸ τῆς ἡμέρας ταύτης λέγει κ.τ.λ. and Or. 23 (Aristocr.) § 89 ἀλλ' οὐκ Ἀριστοκράτης, ἀλλὰ προσηλακίζει μὲν κ.τ.λ. Passages like these lead Dobree to say, 'παλιν ἀλλ' οὐκ ὥκησε,' but either construction is allowable.—οὐδ' εἰ μηδένα τῶν ἄλλων, sc. ἰσχύνη. If he had no respect for any one else, he might at least have respected (had some regard for) his own mother and her relations.

§§ 57—62. I must tell the jury, by the way, of an atrocious trick which was played me to my great disadvantage in the former action. At the trial itself, the deposition on which I mainly relied proved to be missing; and I have since learnt that it was stolen by Stephanus while the suit was still before the arbitrator.

I call witnesses to prove this: they take an oath of disclaimer. —I thought as much.—Well, to prove they are perjured, I now produce a challenge (duly attested by witnesses) calling on Stephanus to allow his slave to be tortured in the matter of the abstraction of the document; my witnesses depose he refused the challenge.

Now, do the jury suppose that one who thus perpetrated a theft without any personal provocation, would have had the slightest hesitation in giving false evidence in his own interests and at the special instance of another?

57. ἐξεπλάγχην.] The form ἐπλάγχην is post-Homeric and is used in compounds with the sense 'strike with terror or amazement.' (Veitch Gk. Vds. s. v. πλήσσω.) For the simple verb, ἐπλήγχην is used, as in the first line of the very next section, but only in the sense of 'receiving a blow from.' [e.g. Soph. Oed. Col. 605, δτισφ' ἀνάγκη τῇδε πληγῆναι χθονὶ and Eur. Orest. 497, πληγείς θυγατρὸς τῆς ἐμῆς ὑπὲρ (ὕπαι) κάρα. πληγείς τῷ κακῷ, for ἐκπληγείς, is remarkable; as if a Roman had said malò percussus, for percussus. P.]

ῥάων ἔσομαι.] 'I shall feel relieved' or to translate it still more closely 'I shall feel easier.' For this use of ῥάων, cf. Eur. Ion 872, στέρωνν ἀπονησαμένη ῥάων ἔσομαι. Herc. Fur. 1407 ὡς δὴ τί φίλτρον τοῦτ' ἔχων ῥάων ἔσει.

58. τὴν ἀρχήν.] 'the magistrature,' in whose possession the sealed casket of depositions was kept until the trial. Cf. notes on Or. 53 § 24 τὴν ἀρχήν and on Or. 39 § 9 where ἀρχήν, like magistratus in Latin and 'authorities' in English, is used of the holder of the office as well as of the office itself. 'Portentose Reiskius τὴν Ἀρχίπην.'

τὸν ἐχίνον κεκνηκέναι.] 'had tampered with the deposition case.' κινεῖν is similarly elsewhere in the sense of 'meddling with unlawfully' in Or. 22 Androt. § 71 and Or. 24 Timocr. § 179 χρήματα κινῶν ἱερὰ. Hdē. vi. 134 κινεῖν τὰ ἁγία.

ἐξομνύναι.] 'to take an oath of disclaimer.' Cf. Fals. Leg. § 176 ἡ μαρτυρεῖν ἡ ἐξομνυσθαι ἀναγκάσει. εἰ δ' ἐξομνύσωιν, ἐπιορκούντας ἐξελέγξω παρ' ὑμῖν φανερώς. 59. κακῶν ἀλλοτρίων κλέπτῃς κ.τ.λ.] 'did not shrink from being set down as having stolen what stood in other people's way.' κακῶν ἀλλοτρίων κλέπτῃς is a very questionable expression, ('singulariter dicta sunt' observes Lortzing p. 91), 'a thief of other people's ills,' meaning (as some suppose) one who steals what is detrimental to other people's interests, in this case the μαρτυρία, which is a κακὸν οἰκίῳ to Phormio and a κακὸν ἀλλότρίῳ to Stephanus. Beiske says 'Fur alienorum malorum est Graecis ille qui mala, fraudes, scelera, clam, in occulto exsequitur et perficit, non sponte sua, sed iussu alieno;' and similarly C. B. Kennedy (rather vaguely) renders it 'a person who would commit a theft as a tool of another.' G. H. Schaefer, who rightly doubts whether κακὰ ἄλλότρια can mean anything but mala quae aliis patitur, proposes to read κακῶν with the sense 'qui quid furatur, ut sceleribus aliis accommodet.' Another critic (Beals, diatribe p. 100) says: 'κακῶν ἄλλοτριων κλέπτῃς lepide vocatur Stephanus, qui in gratiam Phormionis et fortasse eius jussu, testimonium e capsula surripuerat.' In Plato Rep. 346 ε we have μηδὲνα ἐθέλειν ἐκόντα ἄρχειν καὶ τὰ ἄλλότρια κακὰ μεταχειρίζεσθαι ἀνορθούντα ('to handle and set right other people's disorders'), but neither this nor any other passage that I can find supports the sense usually assigned to the words before us.

It may therefore be worth while to suggest that κακῶν may be corrupt and should be altered into καὶ τῶν where καὶ emphasizes the whole clause τῶν ἄλλοτριων κλέπτῃς ὑπέμεινεν ὀνομασθῆναι, and not τῶν ἄλλοτριων only. [The latter construction would inappropriately import into the passage some of the humour of the lines in Aristoph. Ranae 610 εἰτ' οὐχὶ δεῖνὰ ταῦτα, τύπτειν τούτον κλέπτοντα, πρὸς τ' ἄλλότρια 'isn't it a shame to beat this poor fellow (Xanthias) for stealing, and that too—another man's goods?' A not uncommon παρά προσδοκίαν, as if some other kind of theft were possible.] Or again we may alter κακῶν into καὶ ἐκῶν, comparing § 62 where ὁ τὴν τοῦ κλέπτῃς φανῆναι (δόξαν) μὴ φυγῶν is parallel to ὁ δ' αὖ μὴδεὶς ἐκέλευεν ἐθελοντῆς (=ἐκῶν) πομπῆς ἦν.

ἄλλοτριων in any case is intended to point the contrast with ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ in the second half of the sentence.

[καὶ τῶν ἄλλοτριων κλέπτῃς seems a highly probable emendation; nor is there any difficulty in καὶ referring to the general character of a κλέπτῃς τῶν ἄλλοτριων. P.]

60. μαρτυροῦσι κ.τ.λ.] The composer of the present document and the next and of that in Or. 46 § 21, has not taken the trouble to invent any names for the witnesses. He describes them as 'friends of Phormio' to suggest a motive for their disclaiming cognisance of the alleged theft on the part of his witness Stephanus. The writer adds that it was 'on the declaration or award of the arbitrator between Phormio and Ap.' But so long as there were fresh witnesses being brought forward (as appears from § 58 πρὸς μαρτυρίαν κ.τ.λ.), the case was not ripe for the arbitrator's decision; so we must either suppose that the writer has made a mistake, or that at any rate he uses ἀπόφασις in a vague and general sense for the process of decision and its immediate antecedents. (A. Westermann u. s. p. 111—112.)—On ἀπόφασις, cf. Or. 54 § 27 ad fin. The word in this sense is from ἀποφαίνω, not from ἀπόφημι.

61. p. 1120. μαρτυροῦσι.] The fabricator of the document overlooks the fact that the μαρτυρία and the πρόκλησις are two separate documents. It is improbable that he deliberately left out the πρόκλησις, as he has taken the pains to manufacture all the other necessary documents in the case. The two titles μαρτυρία and πρόκλησις are wrongly placed at the head of the document, implying that either the compiler or the transcriber thought that the document included both. Dindorf (ed. 3) has rightly placed the πρόκλησις after the document, as in Or. 59 § 123 § 124.

67. ἢ τῆς ἀνάγκης χρεία.] 'The force of circumstances ('the pressure of their necessitous lot,' lit. 'need induced by necessity,') 'leads to some allowance being made for them in the eyes of those who view the case with human fellow-feeling.' Stobæus in quoting this passage in his 'Elegant Extracts' has the reading adopted in the text, instead of the common reading ἢ τῆς χρείας ἀνάγκη. He also has οὐδεμίαν δικαίαν πρόφασιν ἔχουσι, besides, for obvious reasons, omitting ὥσπερ οὗτος. (Florilegium 46. 72. p. 316.) The extract proceeds with the words πολλὰ δ' οὖν κακὰ πράγματα τοῖς ἐλευθέρους ἢ πενία βιάζεται ποιεῖν, ἐφ' οἷς ἂν ἐλεοῖντο δικαιότερον ἢ προσπολλύνοντο, which do not appear in the present passage. They are really taken from Dem. Or. 57 (Eubulides) § 46, as Meineke might have noted in his edition of Stobæus. For the copyist's patchwork δ' οὖν κακὰ πράγματα we should therefore restore δονλικὰ πράγματα from Demosthenes himself, and print the passage as a separate extract.

sides of the streets, so far from shewing a modest reserve, really indicate an unsociable character. All this solemn guise is purposely put on, to veil his real disposition, while it serves to repel the approaches of his fellow-men. He has never contributed to the needs of any one of all the citizens of Athens; but as a usurer, who counts his neighbours' needs his own good fortune, he has ejected relations of his from their homes, and shewn himself ruthless in the exaction of interest from his debtors.

68. ἃ πέπλασται κ.τ.λ.] explained by the contrast immediately after, τοῖς ἀπλῶς ὡς πεφύκασι βαδίζουσι καὶ φαιδροῖς. ἃ πέπλασται καὶ βαδίζει instead οἱ ἦν ἔχει πεπλασμένην ὄψιν καὶ τὸ σεμνὸν βᾶδισμα, is a fresh instance (like ὧν διεφθάρκει in § 27) of the fondness of the Greeks for throwing into the verb what in other languages would be naturally expressed by a substantive.

ἐσκυθρωπακῶς.] Or. 54 § 34 μεθ' ἡμέραν μὲν ἐσκυθρωπάκασι καὶ λακωνίζεν φασί... For this and similar words expressing sullen and demure demeanour the student should read the speech of Hercules in Eur. Alc. 773—802.

For a similar passage, shewing how keenly the demeanour of persons walking in the streets was criticised at Athens, we may compare Or. 37 (Pant.) § 52 where the defendant anticipates that the plaintiff will bring up against him his fast walking and loud talking, and his constantly carrying a stick. After contrasting their respective characters he adds (§ 55) τοιοῦτος ἐγὼ ὁ ταχὺ βαδίζων καὶ τοιοῦτος σὺ ὁ ἀτρέμας. Again Plato Charmid. p. 159 v expressly mentions 'walking quietly in the streets' as a mark of σωφροσύνη. σωφροσύνη τὸ κοσμίως πάντα πράττειν καὶ ἡσυχῇ, ἐν τε ταῖς ὁδοῖς βαδίζειν καὶ διαλέγεσθαι. Aristotle ascribes κίνησις βραδεία and φωνὴ βαρεῖα to his μεγαλόψυχος (Eth. iv. 9=3) and Theophrastus characterises the 'Arrogant man' (ὁ ὑπερήφανος) as δεινός... ἐν ταῖς ὁδοῖς πορευόμενος μὴ λαλεῖν τοῖς ἐντυγχάνουσι, κἀτω κεκυφώς. Cf. Alexis ap. Athen. i. p. 21 § 38 (referred to by Mr Jebb, Theophr. p. 188), ἐν γὰρ νομίζω τοῦτο τῶν ἀνελευθέρων | εἶναι, τὸ βαδίζειν ἀρρύθμως ἐν ταῖς ὁδοῖς. δεηθεῖν καὶ ἐπαγγεῖλειεν.] 'prefer a request and make a promise (or proposal).' The two words are correlative to one another like 'asking and granting a favour.' ἐπαγγεῖλειεν is an emendation for ἀπαγγεῖλειεν proposed by H. Wolf and accepted by Reiske and others. Dobree unnecessarily suggests 'Quaere an potest = ἐπαγγεῖλαιτο, i. e. open pateret.' This would involve a needless repetition of the idea of δεηθεῖν. [Besides, ἐπαγγεῖλσθαι is rather 'to make a profession of,' 'to propose that some one should accept your service' in some matter. P.]

τοῖς πεπλασμένοις καὶ σκυθρωποῖς.] 'Affected and sullen characters.'

τῷ πρότερον εἰσήνεγκας.] 'to whose service did you ever contribute?' Cf. Or. 53 § 9 ἐραρον αὐτῷ... εἰσδοίσοιμι.

συμβέβλησαι.] 'to whom have you ever lent any aid?' K. Or, perhaps, 'with whom have you had any dealings?' But συμβάλλεσθαι (with perf. pass. used as mid.) may here be used in a general sense of helping, as in Or. 21 (Meid.) § 133 συμβαλουμένους τοῖς συμμάχοις. We have the active use in Or. 34 § 1, συμβόλαια πολλοῖς συμβάλλοντες.

not patruum. Reiske suggests that this Nicias may be identified with the person of that name in Or. 36 § 17 married to the sister of Apollodorus' wife.
But the relationships that would thus result are rather complex (cf. supra §§ 54—56), and it seems simpler to suppose that there were two persons of that name in the same family.

ἀοίκητον.] 'a homeless outcast.' The word is rare in this meaning, being generally used of an uninhabitable country ('ἀοίκητος καὶ ἔρημος Hdt. II.
34, cf. v. 10. So in Plat. Legg. 778 B, etc.' L. and S.). Unless we accept it in the sense of 'houseless,' it would be necessary either (as Reiske says) to alter παῖδα into οἶκον or to read δοικον (as G. H. Schaefer suspects). The latter word is found in this sense in Plato Symp.
203 D and elsewhere. In Lucian however (p. 727), the word ἀοίκητος is used as in the present passage. Gallus § 17, *περιέμενον the speaker dexterously avails himself of the odium and unpopularity attending the trade of a money-lender at Athens.

in the Epistles of Alciphron, borrowed doubtless in part from the later Attic Comedy, in a letter beginning *μέγα κακὸν εἰσιν

the money-lender is described as *πρεσβύτην, ὀφθῆναι ῥικνὸν, συν-

ib. III. 3. 2 ὁ Χρέμης ὁ κατεσκληκῶς, ὁ κατεσπακῶς τὰς ὀφρῦς, ὁ

the same letter we have another banker, of whom no harm is said, called by the conventional name Pasion, doubtless taken from our Pasion.

εἶτα — ἡδικηκότα λαβόντες.]
Compare Midias § 97.

§§ 71—76. At this point the speaker begins a fierce invective against Phormio. Against Phormio, who produced the defendant as his witness, you have a right to be indignant for his effrontery and his ingratitude. When Phormio was for sale, instead of being bought by a cook, or what not, and learning his master's trade, he had the good fortune to come into the hands of my father, who taught him the business of a banker, and conferred on him many other benefits. Yet, with all his wealth, he is ungrateful enough to allow the founders of his fortunes to remain in poverty and distress. He has not scrupled to marry her, who was once his own master's wife, thus securing to himself a large marriage-portion, while he suffers my daughters to languish without a dowry and become poor old maids in their father's house. Meanwhile, he counts and calculates the amount of my money, and criticises me as narrowly as a master might his slave.

71. νεμεσῆσαι.] A poetic verb, rarely found in good Greek prose. It occurs, however, in Or. 20 (Lept.) § 161, τοιαῦτα... οἷς μηδεὶς ἂν νεμεσῆσαι; twice in Plato, and also in Arist. Rhet. II. 9. Here as elsewhere νεμεσᾶν is used in its regular sense of 'indignation at undeserved good fortune' (Arist. Eth. II. 7. 15 ὁ νεμεστικὸς λυρεῖται ἐπὶ τοῖς ἀναξίως εὐ πράττουσι).

ἂν μαθὼν... ἦν.] ἂν influences not only the participle but the principal verb ἦν as well.

72. τραπεζίτης ὦν.] The participial clause is here, as often, more emphatic than the principal verb ἐκτήσατο. 'Since my father, into whose hands he came, was a banker.'

 weaker word than φίλος, though it is curiously placed after it by an anti-climax in Or. 18 (de corona) prefer translating it: 'a man of ἐδικάζοντο.] The regular word used of the suitors under such circumstances was ἐπιδικάζεσθαι (Or. 43 Macart. § 55 τῆς ἐπικλήρου ἐπιδικάζεσθαι and ἐπεδικαζόμεν γένει ὧν ἐγγυτάτω). Hence, Dobree suggests: 'legendum vi-detur ἐδικάζοντο i. e. ἐπεδικάζοντο cum Wolfio,' a suggestion which, although since supported by the discovery of a marginal correction to that effect in the Paris ms Σ, is not perhaps absolutely necessary, as the wider general term includes the narrower special one. The reference, in any case, is to the provisions of the Athenian law, whereby, when there was no son to inherit the estate, the heiresses were bound to be married to their nearest relatives (not in the ascending line). The next of kin brought his claim before the chief Archon, whose duty it was ἐπιμελεῖσθαι τῶν ἐπικλήρων (Or. 43 § 75), public notice was given of the claim, and if no one appeared to dispute it, the Archon adjudged the heiress to him (ἐπεδίκασεν αὐτῷ τὴν ἐπικληρον).

If another claimant appeared, a court was held to decide the suit, according to the Athenian law of consanguinity. Cases even occurred in which the suitor would get his wife taken off his hands to enable him to marry such an heiress (e. g. Or. 57 § 41). If the 'heiress' was poor, and the nearest relative did not choose to marry her, he was bound to give her a marriage-portion according to his own fortune (C. R. Kennedy, Dict. Antiq. s. v. Epicleus). Or. 43 § 54 lex τῶν ἐπικλήρων δοῦναι θητικὸν τελοῦσιν, ἐὰν μὴ βούληται ἔχειν ὁ ἐγγυτάτω γένους ἐκδιδόντω ἐπιδούς κ.τ.λ. (Cf. K. F. Hermann, Privatalt. § 64, notes 10 and 11, with Pollux 3. 33; and see Aristoph. Vesp. 583—7.) θεῖοι.] Phormio's sons being, like Apollodorus, sons of Archippe, would be 'uncles' to the daughters of their half-brother Apollodorus.—ἡμεῖς is emphatically contrasted with εἰ πένης οὗτος ἦν (supra). [as ὧν ἐγὼ ἔχω inf. with the implied ὧν οὗτος (or ὧν αὐτός) ἔχει.]

to account,' 'taken to task,' (§ 82 ἐξήραες δ' οὐκ ἦν). Liddell and Scott refer to this passage, and explain it 'to question by the torture,' comparing Polybius 15. 27. 7 (φιλοτιμῶς ἐξετάσαι πᾶσαν προτιθένα βάσανον), but in view of the context it seems better to give it a general sense, though not to the exclusion of the special meaning above suggested. Besides, a reference to the passage in Polybius will shew that the verb there refers not to the torture itself but to the close examination preceding the torture, which latter was only to be applied if the ἐξέτασις failed. [The verb here seems used in a non-Demosthenic sense for ἐλεγχόμενους τὴν οὐσίαν, 'having their property enquired into.' Slaves, in fact, had no property: but their masters might enquire if they had, rightly or wrongly, become possessed of anything, e.g. of means to purchase their liberty. 'To make an inventory of property' is ἐξετάζειν (Ar. Eccl. 729), or ἐξέτασιν ποιῆσαι, which is also a military term. P.]

77—80. My aspect of countenance, my quickness of walk and my loudness of talk may not, perhaps, be in my favour; they are not my fault but my misfortune; they distress other people and do me no good; and yet I can claim that I am moderate in my personal expenditure, and I thereby shew that I lead a far more orderly life than

Phormio and the like. Towards the state, I have performed public services in a most liberal manner, passing even beyond the requirements of the law, to express the gratitude due to Athens from one who owes his citizenship to her generous adoption of his father. Don't taunt me then, Phormio, with what is really to my credit, but prove, if you can, that I am guilty of immorality like your own. How dare you criticise another's life and character?

§§ 80—82. You are a rogue of old, Phormio, an arrant rogue; had you been honest, you would have remained poor. As it is, after embezzling the sums under your control, you choose to regard them as an inherited patrimony! Yet, suppose I could have clapped your present property on your shoulders and arrested you summarily as a thief caught in the act, then if you denied the theft, you would have been compelled to confess that you got it all from my father: you could not have got it elsewhere, for you were a barbarian when we bought you. And yet you ungratefully resisted a suit for the sums claimed from you on our part; you abused us, you criticised the antecedents of our family. Well, even if I am bound to think less of myself than of all the rest of my audience, I am at any rate bound to think more of myself than of Phormio; and Phormio at least, is bound to think less of himself than of me. σὺ δούλος ἦσθα.] Emphatically placed at the close of the passage.

As for Pasicles (craving your forgiveness for being provoked into uttering what I am about to say), while I acknowledge him as my mother's son, yet, judging from his taking Phormio's side against me, I have my fears that his father was another. Say no more, then, of Pasicles! call him your son, Phormio, and not your master; my opponent (as he is bent upon it)—not my brother.

83. τούτῳ. Depending on ἐγκαλεῖ, not on τῶν αὐτῶν.

ὑβρίσθαι.] The mss have ὑβρισθεὶς, which makes it necessary to take ὥστε with οὐ δύναμαι κατασχεῖν and at first sight leaves εἰ without a verb. To remove the supposed difficulty, Dobree reads ὑβρίσθαι, placing παραιτησάμενος—κατασχεῖν in a parenthesis. The infin. is also approved by G. H. Schaefer and accepted by Dindorf. But the emendation is at once unnecessary and inadequate, and we prefer accepting the arrangement suggested by Shilleto, who has been the first to explain the ms reading correctly. 'Schaefer ὑβρίσθαι frustra tentat. Interpunctionis egebat locus, non coniecturae.' The passage should run as follows: ἐγὼ δ' ὦ ἄνδρες Ἀθηναῖοι καὶ περὶ Πασικλέους, (παραιτησάμενος καὶ δεηθεὶς ὑμῶν συγγνώμην ἔχειν, εἰ, προεληλυθὼς εἰς τοῦτο ὥστε ὑπὸ τῶν ἐμῶν δούλων ὑβρισθεὶς οὐ δύναμαι κατασχεῖν, ἃ τέως οὐδὲ τῶν ἄλλων λεγόντων ἀκούειν ἐδόκουν ἐρῶ καὶ οὐ σιωπήσομαι) ἐγὼ γὰρ ... νομίζω. 'γὰρ post parenthesis saepe fraudi fuit criticis' (Fals. Leg. § 107 not. crit.).

[The passage is slightly ἀνακόλουθον, but it can hardly be doubted that we must construe προεληλυθὼς εἰς τοῦτο ὥστε—ὑβρισθεὶς οὐ δύναμαι κατασχεῖν, 'having reached such a point that—I am unable to restrain (my feelings),' and συγγνώμην ἔχειν (ἐμοὶ) εἰ — ἐρῶ καὶ οὐ σιωπήσομαι. γὰρ ὁμομήτριον. There is no great difficulty in the passage; certainly it is not made clearer by any proposed alteration. He was going to say ἐγὼ καὶ περὶ Πασικλέους—ἐρῶ, but he lost himself, as it were, in the maze of the intervening clauses. P.]

84. παραπεπτωκῶς.] 'Courting,' 'flattering.' As this verb does not seem to occur elsewhere in this sense (which indeed is not noticed in Liddell & Scott) H. Wolf and Dobree would prefer ὑποπεπτωκῶς as in §§ 63, 65; but the text is supported by the mss and by Harpocration, who says: ἀντὶ τοῦ ὑποπεπτωκῶς. Δημοσθένης ἐν τῷ κατὰ Στεφάνου.—παραπεπτωκῶς implies subservience of a less abject and cringing form than ὑποπεπτωκῶς, which would be too strong a word for this context. ὑποπίπτειν est ad pedes alicuius, παραπίπτειν ad latius alicuius succumbere' (Lortzing, Apoll., p. 90).

Πασικλέα.] The silence of Pasicles is a point brought against Apoll. in Or. 36 § 22. The insinuation in the text seems quite gratuitous, and its indelicacy forms a singular contrast to the plaintiff's affectation of reserve in referring to his mother in the earlier part of the speech (§ 3 and § 27).

§ 85. Farewell, then, to my so-called brother; while I turn to my true friends, the jury, and appeal to them not to allow me to be laughed to scorn by my own servants and by those who cringe to them, like Stephanus.—My father was a great benefactor to the state, and it would hardly be creditable to yourselves that his son should suffer wrong.

ἀσπίδας.] The father, Pasion, had a shield manufactory, as we learn from Or. 36 § 4.

ἐπιδούς.] Used of voluntary free gifts for state purposes (ἐπιδόσεις) opp. to εἰσφέρειν. See Wolf's Leptines p. 66, ed. Beatson, notes 109, 110; and Boeckh, P. E. Book IV. § 17, notes 447—454.

ἐτρηράρχησε τριηραρχίας.] At first sight this is an exception to the usual idiom, whereby a cognate accusative is not used after a verb except with an adjective. But the clause πέντε τριεῖς ἐβελοντῆς ἐπιδούς is virtually an adjectival phrase descriptive of the nature of the trierarchies. Thus, in English we do not say 'he fought a fight' by itself, but 'he has fought a good fight,' or, 'he fought a fight and won the day,' where the additional clause in italics is equivalent to an adj. to the cognate accusative 'fight.' (See esp. Mayor's note on dicta dicere and servitutem serviunt Cic. Phil. II. § 42 where the absence of the adj. is explained by the sense of the acc. being different from that of the governing verb and therefore cognate in form alone.) bree. [Compare ἀρχὴν ἀρεῖαι. Here we should have expected either ἐτρηράρχησεν αὐτῶν, or ἐτρ. τὰς τριηραρχίας.] On the trierarchal services of Apollodorus, see note on Or. 36 § 41.

§§ 86—end. Time would not suffice to tell of all the outrages inflicted on me; but you may form some notion of their enormity if each one of you would just think of the slave he left at home and imagine himself treated by him as I have been treated by Phormio. Whatever satisfaction each of you would claim under such circumstances, you will allow me to have a right to now, and I therefore ask you for the sake of the laws and of your solemn oaths to establish a signal precedent by the punishment of the man who by his false evidence robbed me of that satisfaction. Remember all that you have heard on our side and meet my opponents' suggestions at every point. If they deny that they are responsible for all the details of their deposition, ask them 'What stands in the document?' 'Why did not Stephanus erase the clause?' If they say that a will has been deposed to by a guardian, by a ward, and by one who has it in his keeping; then ask these three witnesses 'What will?' 'what are its terms?' for not one of the three had a good deal to say in defence of his evidence. A cunning rogue himself, and well primed by Phormio's numerous advisers, he has attempted to mislead you into the notion that he is not responsible for all the details of his deposition. He has not brought a single witness to prove, either (1) that he was present when my father made the alleged will, or (2) that he ever saw it opened after my father's death; and yet he has actually deposed that the copy set forth in his deposition is a transcript of the 'will.' By so doing he is palpably convicted of having given false testimony.*

τὴν ἀπολογία... μελετᾶν.] 'prepare their defence.' μελετᾶν, like meditari, with which it is etymologically connected, is often used of 'rehearsing a part,' 'conning over a task,' 'practising for a performance.'

2. μάρτυρας ... ὡς ... παρεγένετο.] The plaintiff objects that Stephanus could not attest to a document being a copy of Pasion's 'will,' as he calls no evidence to prove he was present when the will was made (cf. Or. 45 § 26). But even supposing he had been present, it would not follow that he was familiar with the terms, as even the witnesses to a will would not necessarily know its contents, or be able to attest to its correspondence with any document purporting to be a copy of the same. Cf. Isaeus Or. 4 (Nicostratus) § 13 τῶν διατιθεμένων οἱ πολλοὶ οὐδὲ λέγουσι τοῖς παραγινομένοις ὃ τι διατίθενται, ἀλλ' αὐτοῦ μόνου, τοῦ καταλιπεῖν διαθήκας, μάρτυρας παρίστανται, τοῦ δὲ συμβαίνοντός ἐστι καὶ γραμματεῖον ἀλλαγήναι καὶ τάναντία ταῖς τοῦ τεθνεώτος διαθήκαις μεταγραφῆναι. οὐδὲν γὰρ μᾶλλον οἱ μάρτυρες εἰσονται εἰ ἐφ' αἷς ἐκλήθησαν διαθήκαις, αὐτὰ ἀποφαίνονται (Becker, Charicles, Scene ix. note 18).

The inelegance of the triple repetition διατιθεμένῳ.. διέθετο.. διαθέμενον is perhaps open to criticism. (A. Schaefer, Dem. u. s. Zeit. III. 2. 187.)

Isaëus Or. 3 §§ 23, 24 tells us 'it was usual to select persons of good character to receive such evidence and to have as many of them as possible.' (C. R. Kennedy in Dict. Ant. s. v. ἐκμαρτυρία.) Cf. Schol. on Aeschin. Fals. Leg. § 19 εἰ ἐπαλεθὼν ἐκείνος (sc. ὁ ἐκμαρτυρήσας) εἶπεν, ὅτι οὐδὲν εἶπον, ἐκρίνοντο οὗτοι (sc. οἱ μαρτυρήσαντες) ὡς συκοφάνται.

§§ 9—10. The defendant has also given evidence contrary to another law. Under cover of the testimony of the defendant and his friends, Phormio has virtually given evidence in his own cause, which is illegal; and the law declares that a suit for false testimony shall be main-tainable against a person on the ground of his having given evidence contrary to the law.

9. πρόφασιν λαβὼν τὴν πρόκλησιν.] In Or. 45 § 19 (which should be compared with the whole of the present sentence) this Challenge is denounced as a παραπέτασμα. § 11. That the defendant's evidence is false may be concluded from the material on which it is written.

λελευκωμένον καὶ οἰκοθεν κατεσκευασμένον.] The plaintiff curiously argues the falsehood of the defendant's deposition from the nature of the material on which it is inscribed. The document, he points out, is 'whitened, and must have been brought from home purposely prepared.' This would have been proper enough for a deposition attesting to the facts of the past, in which case there is time to draw up an elaborate document, whereas a deposition purporting to attest a Challenge (evidence to which might be given by any duly qualified person even accidentally present) would naturally be rapidly written on the spot ἐν μάλθῃ, i. e. on a waxen tablet, which would allow of any addition or erasure being made at the request of the witnesses before they attested it. 'The difference between these methods,' as C. R. Kennedy remarks, 'was much the same as between writing with a pen on paper and with a pencil on a slate.' (Diet. Ant. s. v. μαρτυρία.) For λελευκωμένον cf. Dem. The law forbids a man's making a will if he have male issue lawfully begotten.—Again, the law only allows those who are not 'adopted' to dispose of their property by will, and my father was a citizen by 'adoption' only. μηδὲ νόμον...ἐπ' ἀνδρὶ θεῖναι.] Just as a privilegium was forbidden by Roman law, so at Athens legislation expressly affecting a particular individual, whether in his interest or to

13. ὁ μὲν νόμος...ὁ δὲ πατὴρ κ.τ.λ.] The sentence is rather loosely written, and the sense might have been brought out better by some such arrangement as this: ὁ μὲν νόμος...κελεύει, ὁ δὲ πατὴρ Φορμίῳ οὕτω Ἀθηναίῳ γενομένῳ ἔδωκε τὴν ἑαυτοῦ γυναῖκα· ἐτελεύτησε γὰρ κ.τ.λ. ΝΟΜΟΣ.

[“Ὅσοι μὴ ἐπεποιήντο, ὥστε μῆτε ἀπειπεῖν μῆτ’ ἐπιδικάσασθαι, ὅτε Σόλων εἰσῆει τὴν ἀρχὴν, τὰ ἑαυτοῦ διαθέσθαι εἶναι, ὅπως ἂν ἐθέλῃ, ἂν μὴ παῖδες ὥς γνήσιοι ἄρρενες, ἂν μὴ μανιῶν ἢ γήρως ἢ φαρμάκων ἢ νόσου ἔνεκεν, ἢ γυναικὶ πειθόμενος, ὑπὸ τούτων

14. ὅσοι μὴ ἐπεποιήντο κ.τ.λ.] ‘whosoever had not been adopted, when Solon became Archon, and thereby remained unable either to renounce or to claim his inheritance, shall be allowed to dispose of his own property at his pleasure, provided he have no male issue lawfully begotten.’ Cf. Isaeus Or. 6 (Philoctemon) § 28 τοῖς φύσει υἱέσιν αὐτοῦ οὐδεὶς οὐδὲν ἐν διαθήκῃ γράφει δόσιν οὐδεμίαν, διότι ὁ νόμος αὐτοὺς ἀποδίδωσι τῷ υἱεῖ τὰ τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ οὐδὲ διαθέσθαι ἐφ’ ὅτῳ ἂν ὥς παῖδες γνήσιοι.

The law is quoted to prove that Pasion had no right to make a will, (1) because he had male issue lawfully begotten (sc. Apollodorus). But it will be noticed that the law does not forbid such persons from making any will whatever, but simply enacts that those who have no male issue may dispose of their property as they please. Pasion was not debarred by this law from making a will, but was not allowed to make any disposition he chose, since (as in our law of entail) the right to the property was secured to the son.

Again (2), Pasion was a citizen by ‘adoption,’ whereas this law implies that no ‘adopted’ person could dispose of his property as he pleased. But it will be observed on the other side, that the plaintiff has deliberately confounded two different senses of ποιεῖσθαι (1) ‘to adopt into a family’ and (2) ‘to present with the citizenship.’ ἐπεποιήντο refers to ‘family adoption’ and the plaintiff argues as though it meant the same as ἐπεποιήτο πολίτη.

ἀπειπεῖν...ἐπιδικάσασθαι.] Or. 52 (Callippus) § 19 οὔτε ἀμφισβητήσαντα οὔτε ἀπειπόντα περὶ τοῦ ἀργυρίου. ἀπειπεῖν may be paralleled by the phrase in Roman law eiurare hereditatem.

μανιῶν] genitive, like the subsequent substantives, governed by ἔνεκα at the end of the clause. ‘Unless his mind is impaired by lunacy, or dotage, or by drugs or disease.’ K.

[The plural μανίαι means, as usual, ‘mad fits,’ ‘delusions.’ P.]

16. διότι.] In the same sense as ὅτι, for which it is not unfrequently used, especially by Isocrates when a hiatus is thereby avoided, e.g. Isocr. Lochites § 7 ἐνθυμουμένους ὅτι followed by καὶ διότι. Isocr. Paneg. § 48 n.

[φαρμακῶν is one of a class of verbs implying mental or bodily affection, e.g. λημᾶν, 'to have bleary eyes,' ποδαγρᾶν, χαλαζᾶν, φονᾶν, 'to be blood-thirsty,' θανατᾶν, 'to have a desire for death,' Plat. Phaedo p. 64 b, τομᾶν 'to require the knife' &c. The verbs themselves are less commonly used than their participles. P.]

εἰ δοκοῦσιν εὖ φρονούντος κ.τ.λ.]
It is curious to find the plaintiff setting up this suggestion of lunacy when in another speech, Or. 49 (Timoth.) § 42, delivered at an earlier date, he describes his father as not only giving him a written statement of debts due, but also, in his last illness, telling him and his brother the details of each particular sum, the name of the debtor, and even the purpose for which the money was lent.

He might have turned his argument to more account, if, instead of insinuating that the terms of the alleged will suggested that his father was of unsound mind, and therefore legally incompetent to make any will at all, he had urged that, his father having been of sound mind up to the day of his death, the 'insane' provisions of the will betrayed it to be a forgery.

17. ἀκόλουθον εἶναι... τῷ δόντι...

of these two datives, referring to two different persons, is extremely harsh. The order is :

enough to examine all these questions thoroughly.' This passage has been quoted as an indication of the plaintiff's consciousness of his own oratorical skill, and as a presumption in favour of the view that Apollodorus is himself the writer of the speeches delivered by him which have come down to us among the orations of Demosthenes. (A. Schaefer, Dem. u. s. Zeit. III. 2. 192.)

§§ 18—21. The forgery of the will is also proved by the law of betrothals, which provides that a woman may be affianced for lawful wedlock by her guardians, i. e. certain near relations, such as father, brother or grandfather. As none of these are in existence, and you may be sure that the other side would have produced them or pretended to do so to suit their purpose, it follows that my mother was an 'heiress,' and the law declares that the son of an heiress, when he comes of age, shall be his mother's guardian. Now I was abroad on public service (and therefore of full age) when Phormio married my mother (and he did so without obtaining the consent of myself, her guardian).

18. σκέψασθε τοὺς νόμους.] The accusative after the principal verb, where in English we should prefer making it the nom. of the subordinate clause. Cf. Or. 45 § 24. Kennedy partially keeps up the Greek construction by rendering it thus: 'look now at the laws, (to see) from whom they require betrothals to be obtained.'

ἐγγύας.] The betrothal (ἐγγύσις) was made by the natural or legal guardian of the girl, in the presence of the relatives of both parties. 'All children born from a marriage legally contracted in this respect were γνήσιοι, and consequently, if sons, ἰσόμοιροι, or entitled to inherit equally.' (Whiston in Dict. Ant. s. v. Matrimonium, K. F. Hermann, Privatalt. § 30, 7 and § 65, 15.)

ἐπιδικασίαν εἶναι τῶν ἐπικλήρων ἀπασῶν, καὶ ξένων implied by the vague word παλαι 'some time before' would seem to be two years. The plaintiff wishes to insinuate that, though some time elapsed before the marriage proper (ἐγγμῆ), intrigues had been going on at an earlier date, and this is how the composer of the deposition in § 21 seems to have understood it.

τὴν μητέρα τὴν ἐμὴν.] These words, which would have been appropriate enough in the mouth of Apollodorus, are absurdly out of place in the deposition, and betray gross carelessness on the part of the fabricator of the document.
Even apart from this detail, the general contents of the deposition are different from what we are led to expect by the plaintiff's language in introducing it. (A. Westermann u. s.
p. 118.)

§§ 22—24. The law does not allow any one to marry an 'heiress,' without a legal adjudication. Phormio made no legal claim for the hand of my mother, but did exactly as he pleased, in defiance of the law.

22. τῶν ἐπικλήρων.] The plaintiff attempts to prove that his mother was an 'heiress.' If so, her property ought to have passed absolutely into the hands of her eldest son, on his coming of age, whether her husband was alive or not. But there is not a single trace of such a relation between Archippe and Apollodorus in the rest of the speeches of the latter. Archippe was most probably of foreign extraction (cf. Or. 45 § 22) and the plaintiff's argument seems the merest shuffling. (See further, A. Schaefer, Dem. u. s.
Zeit. III. 2, p. 176.) On ἐπιδικασία τῶν ἐπικλήρων see note on is not found in the Attic Ora-

 Ar. Ethics II. 9. 6, οὐ γὰρ ἀδέ-

 So in Latin, we have decuriare used of organised bribery at § 45 decuriatio tribulium and decuriasse Plancium, conscripsisse. Cf. the obscure name given to bribed dicasts at Athens, Ἀλκον δεκάς. (In wholesale bribery an agent, it is conjectured, was chosen from each tribe and the group of ten thus selected to deal with their fellow-tribesmen were comically called

Lycus near the law-courts.
 Meier and Schömann, *Att. Pro-

The usual phrase for bribery is χρήμασι φθείρειν (or διαφθείρειν), though the euphemism χρήμασι πείσαι is still more frequent, and it is curious to note how frequently the word δωροδοκία occurs, and how rarely δεκάσμος and its corresponding verb. Again and again we have charges of receiving bribes, seldom of giving them; possibly because those who gave them were too powerful to be attacked.
 —ἐπὶ δωροδοκίᾳ 'with a corrupt motive,' is here a general term, implying without directly expressing the corresponding term δεκάσμος.

καταλείπουσιν.] Especially used of leaving behind one at death. 'The reason why people leave their wills behind them (instead of publishing them before they die) is to prevent any one knowing their contents.' Kennedy renders it: 'keep wills by them until their death.' From not recognising this meaning, several unnecessary conjectures have been suggested, e.g. κατασεσημασμένας καταλείπουσιν (Reiske); κατακλείουσιν (Seager); οὐ καταλείπουσιν, sc. διαθηκῶν ἀντίγραφα (G.H.Schaefer).

[I incline to think καταλείπουσιν is the true reading. The reason why people 'leave wills' is to shew how they wish to dispose of their property; the reason why they 'keep them under lock and key' is that no one may have access to them. P.]

Argument 1. ψευδοκλητείας.] See note on § 17.

1. 8. μοχθηρόν.] 'vexatious,' sc. συκοφαντικόν.

§§ 1—4. (Arethusius has incurred a debt to the public treasury and has neglected to discharge it.) I have accordingly laid an information against him and drawn up a specification of his property. I have been prompted to do so, not by petty and vexatious motives, but by the simple desire to exact vengeance for having been outrageously wronged by Arethusius and his brother Nicostratus. The purity of my motives will be proved, (1) by the small amount at which the two slaves are valued in the specification (two-and-a-half minae), so that the pecuniary gain to which I am legally entitled for bringing this information is small, while the loss which I should incur, if I fail, is 1000 drachmae, (or four times as great as the value of the slaves). (2) The fact that I have laid the information in my own name, instead of getting a friend to act on my behalf, proves that I am prompted by the personal motive of revenge alone; content with that revenge, I am willing to waive in favour of the public treasury all claim to the reward which the law in such cases allows the bringer of the information (viz. three-fourths of the valuation).

The court will now permit me to justify myself by shewing how ungratefully I have been dealt with by my opponents and by relating, so far as time permits, the most atrocious and flagrant of all the wrongs which they have inflicted upon me.

1. οὐ συκοφαντῶν κ.τ.λ.] Apol-lodorus is anxious to rebut, at the very outset, the obvious imputation of συκοφαντία. To prove that, so far from being actuated by a spirit of petty and vexatious litigiousness, he has been inspired by what an Athenian tribunal would regard as a thoroughly legitimate motive, the motive of revenge, he appeals to two points. The first is the small amount (two and a half minae) at which the slaves in dispute were valued.
If the informer proved his case, the law allowed the informer to have three-fourths of the amount.
Apollodorus would thus have a claim for barely two minae (or less than £8), a sum too small to provide a sufficient motive for συκοφαντία. If that had been his object, he would of course have made a higher valuation, looking only to his share of the reward as the informer. His second point is the fact that instead of availing himself of the services of his friends he had himself drawn up the specification (αὐτὸς ἐγὼ ἀπέγραψα)— a fact which proved that he was prompted by the motive of a purely personal revenge, especially as he waived all claim to his share of the fine.

οἰόμενος δεῖν τιμωρεῖσθαι.] 'To avoid the fatal charge of sycophantia, any one prosecuting a fellow-citizen for some public offence endeavoured to shew that he had private and personal grounds of enmity against the accused; and if he succeeded in proving this, it was considered the most natural and reasonable thing in the world that he should endeavour to satisfy his hatred by becoming public prosecutor.' Wilkins' Light of the World p. 80 (where a reference is made to Lewes' History of Philosophy i. 108).
For illustrations of the Greek view of the reasonableness of revenge, see note on Isocr. ad Dem. § 26.

τὸ μέγεθος.] 'the size,' 'the amount,' a neutral word, here meaning probably 'the small amount,' 'the paltriness of the specification.' Herod. ii. 74, μεγδθεῖ μικρός. The sum of two and a half minae seems to refer to the value of the two slaves taken together. (Boeckh, Publ.

Second German ed.). Reiske, ὥστ' οὐκ ἂν ἐξευρεῖν.] A mixed phrase between ὥστ' οὐκ ἂν ἐξεύρομι and ὥστε μὴ ἐξευρεῖν. The use of ἂν with ὥστε and the infinitive is rare, but it occurs when a mere contingent result is described. P.]

2. τοῦ νομα παρέχειν.] 'lend his name,' i. e. allow himself to be used as a cat's paw. In both passages however the genuineness of the verse may be doubted. P.]

τὰ τρία μέρη.] Three-fourths of the valuation was allowed by law to be paid to the individual who brought the action. 'This regulation,' says Boeckh, 'appears to have been confined to concealed property, which was discovered by the informer.' In a majority of other cases the third part only was received by the accuser (Publ. Econ. II. 130).—τῷ ἰδιώτῃ τῷ ἀπογράψαντι, 'to the individual informer' K. δ' ἰδιώτης is here contrasted with ἡ πόλις.

3. εἰ ἦν ἱκανὸν... ὑμεῖς ἂν συγγνώμην εἴχετε... νῦν δὲ οὐδὲ διπλάσιον... ἱκανὸν ἂν γένοιτο.] The student will be careful to distinguish between the two forms of conditional sentences here combined. 'If the time allowed had been sufficient, you would have made allowance for me..., but, as the case is, even twice as much time would not suffice.' (Goodwin, Greek Moods § 49. 2 and § 50. 2.)—On τὸ ὕδωρ cf. Or. 54 §§ 36 and 44 n.

ὅσα... ὅλα.] 'What benefits they have received from me and what a requital they have paid me for them,' or, better, 'the return they have given me for all the benefits I have conferred upon them.' For this idiomatic use of the double relative, cf. Soph. El. 751, οἳ ἐργα δράσας ὅλα λαγχάνει κακὰ, also Ovid, Fasti v. 460, cernite sim qualis qui modo qualis eram; and Cornelius Nepos, Atticus, 18, 3, notans quis a quo ortus quos honores quibusque temporibus cepisset.

§§ 4—9. My opponent's brother, Nicostratus, was my neighbour in the country, and, being about the same age, we were thrown much together and became more and more intimate with one another. I granted him whatever he asked of me, and he on his part was of some service to me in taking charge of my property whenever I was abroad on public or private business.

On one of these occasions, when I had left him in charge, three of his servants ran away from him. While pursuing them, he was taken prisoner by a privateer, and sold as a slave. On my return, I was told of his unhappy plight by one of his brothers, Deinon, and I supplied the latter with travelling expenses and thus enabled him to go to the rescue of Nicostratus. The latter, on his return, informed me that he had been ransomed for a considerable sum; and by appealing to me with tears in his eyes and pointing to the marks left by the galling fetters (though he is now ashamed enough of those scars that are the memorials of his slavery), he succeeded in inducing me to forgive him the three minae, which I had advanced for his brother's travelling expenses, and to contribute, as a free gift towards the twenty-six minae required for the redemption money, the sum of ten minae which I raised on the security of some of my property.

4. Νικόστρατος γὰρ.] γὰρ is almost invariably used at the beginning of narratives like the present; the English idiom generally requires us to omit it in translation, though we may sometimes render it, 'Well, then,' 'to proceed, then.' Cf. Or. 55 § 10 τοῦ γὰρ χωρίου κ.τ.λ.

γνωρίμως εἶχε.] γνώριμος is a much weaker word than φίλος, as has already been noticed, on Or. 45 § 73. The gradually increasing intimacy between Apollodorus and Nicostratus is well expressed by the successive phrases (1) γνωρίμως εἶχε, (2) μᾶλλον ἀλλήλοις ἐχρώμεθα, (3) πᾶν οἰκῶς διεκείμεθα of the present section, and (4) φίλος ἀληθινός of § 12.

ἐτελεύτησεν ὁ πατὴρ.] The death of Pasion took place B. C. 370. (Or. 46 § 13.)

κατῴκουν...οἰκῶ.] If any distinction is to be drawn, the compound verb should be rendered 'I settled' and the simple 'I live,' but it is more likely that οἰκῶ is intended as a virtual repetition of the preceding κατῴκουν. In such cases it is unnecessary to repeat the preposition, e. g. Eur. Baec. 1065 κατήγεν ἤγεν ἤγεν εἰς μέλαν πέδον and Orest. 181, διοιχόμεσθ', οἰχόμεθα where Porson remarks that, when a verb is repeated, it is generally used first in its compound, then in its simple form. Cf. Or. 36 § 4 προσώφειλε... ὥφειλε.

δημοσίᾳ τριηραρχῶν.] This reference to the speaker's public services is dexterously inserted to ingratiate him with his audience, as well as to lead up to the subsequent narrative συμβαίνει δὴ μοι τριηραρχία.—On some of the later trierarchal services of Apollodorus cf. note on Or. 36 § 41.

5. τριηραρχία περὶ Πελοπόννησον κ.τ.λ.] The date of this event, if it could be determined with certainty, would assist materially in determining the date of the delivery of the speech. It seems very probable that this trierarchy should be identified with that referred to in Or. 45 § 3, which, as we have already seen, may be placed in the year 368 B.C. See chronological note on the Introduction to this speech.

διὰ ταχέων.] Thuc. i. 80, διὰ ταχέων ἐλθεῖν, Isocr. Plataic. § 3 διὰ βραχέων ἀν' ἐποικισμέμαθ' τοὺς λόγους followed by ἀναγκαῖον διὰ μακροτέρων δηλώσαι. (Kühner Greek Grammar II. § 434, 1, d.)

ἀνήγμαι.] ἀνάγεσθαι is constantly contrasted with κατέγεσθαι; the latter word occurs in § 6 κατήχθη εἰς Αἴγυπτον. The verb, with its corresponding substantive ἀναγωγὴ, implies a notion that ships in the open sea or, as we say, on the 'high seas,' are at a greater elevation than vessels in harbour. So in Thuc. i. 48 and viii. 10 μετέωρος is an epithet of ships at sea; and similar references to this familiar optical illusion may be noted in Milton's Paradise Lost II. 636, 'Far off at sea a fleet descried Hangs in the clouds,' and in Ruskin's 'thymy slopes of down overlooked by the blue line of lifted sea' (Modern Painters III. iv. 14 § 51).

ally a secondary tense has the optative εἶην in the dependent clause. For the combination of the indicative ἀνήγμαι with the optative εἶην, we may compare Or. 27 (Aphob. A) § 19 ἐτόλμα...λέγειν ὡς χρέα τε παμπολλὰ ἐκτέτικεν...καὶ ὡς πολλὰ τῶν ἐμῶν λάβοιεν. The optative of the perfect and future were less familiar than the optative of the other tenses. It is apparently for this reason that the indicative of the perfect or the future was often retained after secondary tenses, even when the present or the aorist was changed from the indicative to the optative (Goodwin, Moods and Tenses § 70. 2. B. 2).—The mss appear to have been misled by the indicative ἀνήγμαι into writing ἦν instead of εἶην which is now found in all the best editions.

ἀληθινὸς φίλος.] ἀληθινὸς is the Latin verus; ἀληθῆς verax. See also Donaldson, New Cratylus § 258 and Kühner Greek Gr. i. § 334.

7. [ἀληθινὸς is 'genuine,' as χρυσός, ἀρετή, &c.; ἀληθῆς is more directly contrasted with ψευδής, as ἀληθῆς λόγος. But the distinction is not always observed. Euripides has ἀληθῆς φίλος Suppl. 867, and σαφῆς φίλος is not unusual in the same sense. P.]

κλάων.] 'In Tragedy κλαίω and κλάω; in Aristophanes κλάω prevails, in Attic prose κλαίω and κλάω, the latter gaining ground.' Veitch, Greek Verbs.

εἴκοσι μνῶν.] Aristotle, Eth. v. 10. 9, gives as an example of νομικὸν δίκαιον, conventional right, τὸ μὴ λυτροῦσθαι, the right of every man to claim his freedom on payment of one mina,—perhaps referring only to slaves. P.]

ἐκέλευε.] The tentative sense of the imperfect 'urged me,' 'prompted me,' 'asked me,'—less strong than the aorist ἐκέλευσε.

8. ἔλκη ἐν ταῖς κνήμαις ὑπὸ δεσμῶν.] Ar. Equites 907, τὰν τοῖσιν ἀντικνημοῖς ἐλκῦδρια περι-αλείφειν.

οὐ μὴ ἐβελήσῃ.] 'There is little chance of his consenting.'

Nicostratus would naturally refuse to display the scars left by the galling fetters: to do so would be to confess that he had incurred the disgrace of having been sold as a slave.

The future indicative with οὐ μὴ has here, as elsewhere, the force of an emphatic future with οὐ. The subjunctive, especially in the aorist tense, is still more common in this sense, and is indeed the reading of the mss in the present passage, the indicative being an apparently unnecessary emendation due to Dobree. [The Greeks said οὐ τῷ ἔμπροσθεν χρόνῳ εἶην αὐτῷ φίλος ἀληθινός, καὶ νῦν ἐν τῇ συμφορᾷ βοηθήσοιμι^ρ αὐτῷ, καὶ τὰς τε τριακοσίας, ἃς τῷ ἀδελφῷ αὐτοῦ ἔδωκα ἐφόδιον ὅτε ἐπορεύετο ἐπὶ τοῦτον, ἀφείην αὐτῷ, χιλίας τε δραχμὰς 9 ἔρανον αὐτῷ εἰς τὰ λύτρα εἰσούσοιμι. καὶ τοῦτο οὐ λόγῳ μὲν ὑπεσχόμην, ἔργῳ δ' οὐκ ἐποίησα, ἀλλ' ἐπειδὴ οὐκ ἠνέπόρου^α ἀργυρίου διὰ τὸ διαφόρως ἔχειν τῷ Φορμίῳ καὶ ἀποστρεῖσθαι ὑπ' αὐτοῦ τὴν οὐσίαν ἣν μοι μὴ φύγῃ, οὐ μὴ ἔλθῃ, and οὐ μὴ ληφθῶ, but seem to have preferred οὐ μὴ πρᾶξει to οὐ μὴ πρᾶξῃ. But here too mss generally vary. P.] This construction must be distinguished from the special use of οὐ μὴ with the second person of the fut. indic., to express a strong prohibition. (Goodwin, Moods and Tenses § 89, 1 and 2.)

ἀπεκρινάμην.] The Attic form corresponding to ὑπεκρινάμην in Herodotus and ἀπεκρίθην in late Greek, e.g. in the New Testament (Winer's Gr. p. 327, ed. Moulton).

ὅτι ἐν τῷ ἔμπροσθεν χρόνῳ εἶην φίλος, καὶ νῦν βοηθήσοιμι.] 'That I had been his true friend formerly, and would assist him now.' The opt. εἶην represents not the present or future but the imperfect of direct discourse; while the future optative βοηθήσοιμι corresponds to the future ind. of oratio recta. 'The fut. opt. in Classic Greek is used only in indirect discourse after secondary tenses to represent a fut. indic. of the direct discourse' (Goodwin, Moods and Tenses § 26). βοηθήσαιμι is wrong, because it would represent ἐβοήθησα of the

ἔρανον κ.τ.λ.] 'I would contribute 1000 drachmae towards his ransom,' i.e. 10 minae out of the total amount of 26 minae mentioned in § 7 ad fin. On ἔρανος cf. Hermann, Privatalt. § 65, 13.

9. οὐ λόγῳ μὲν ὑπεσχόμην, ἔργῳ δ' οὐκ ἐποίησα.] Cf. de corona § 179 οὐκ εἶπον μὲν ταῦτα οὐκ ἔγραψα δέ, οὐδ' ἔγραψα μὲν οὐκ ἐπρέσβευσα δέ, οὐδ' ἐπρέσβευσα μὲν οὐκ ἔπεισα δέ τοὺς Θηβαίους. Kennedy neatly translates 'nor did I content myself with mere words; but what I promised I performed.'

διαφόρως—τῷ Φορμίῳ.] The context shews that the reference is to the estrangement between Apollodorus and Phormio shortly after the death of Pasion in 370 B.C.—τὴν οὐσίαν refers mainly to the banking-stock which forms the subject of Or. 86, the claim to which was not brought forward until some twenty years later.

ἐκέλευσα.] 'Told him to give him 1000 dr.' (not ἐκέλευον, which would mean 'tried to induce him to give them.' Cf. ἐκέλευε in § 7 ad fin.).—δωρεὰν, not as a loan, but as a free gift.

§§ 10—13. Not many days afterwards, he came once more and told me with tears in his eyes that the persons who had advanced the redemption money were demanding payment of the remaining sixteen minae, and that the agreement required him to refund the money within thirty days, or, failing payment, to be liable for twice the amount.
He could raise no money, he said, on the farm in my neighbourhood, as that property was already encumbered by a claim upon it on the part of his brother Arethusius; and he asked me to advance the remainder, as otherwise my former gifts would be thrown away, and himself carried off to prison as the lawful property of the ransomer. He further promised to collect the whole amount and to repay me.
Accordingly, I raised the remaining sixteen minae on the security of my lodging-house, and lent him this sum for a year without interest.

10. ἀπαιτοῖεν.] ἀπαιτεῖν (cf. ἀπολαμβάνειν) is 'to ask for one's due,' 'to request repayment of what is one's own.'
So ἀποδοῦναι 'to pay what is due,' 'to make full payment of the sum borrowed.' In Arist.
Rhet. II. 7. 5, among the reasons which indicate the absence of real gratitude, we have ὅτι ἀπέδωκαν ἀλλ' οὐκ ἔδωκαν ('they merely returned the favour,' simply repaid a debt, and nothing more). Cf. St Luke vi. 34, 35, ἀμαρτωλοὶ ἀμαρτω-λοῖς δανείζουσιν, ἵνα ἀπολάβωσι τὰ ἴσα.

τὸ χωρίον τὸ ἐν γειτόνων μοι.]
'the property (or farm) in my immediate neighbourhood.' ἐν γειτόνων seems to be an elliptical phrase equivalent to ἐν τοῖς τῶν γειτόνων 'in my neighbours' lands,' 'in my own neighbourhood.' In early Greek there is probably no other instance of this phrase, and as ἐκ γειτόνων is not without example in the Attic Orators it appears preferἐθέλοι οὔτε πρίασθαι οὔτε τίθεσθαι· ὁ γὰρ ἀδελφὸς ὁ Ἀρεθούσιος, οὐ τὰνδράποδ' ἐστὶ ταῦτα ἃ νῦν ἀπογέγραπται, οὐδένα ἐφ' οὔτε ὠνεῖσθαι οὔτε τίθεσθαι ὡς able to the reading in the text, which is obtained by Reiske from τὸ ἐγγειτόνων, found in three good mss. (ΣΑ¹B). Inepte Reiskius, says Dobree, who gives a reference to Aristoph. Plut. 435, ἡ καπηλὶς ἡκ τῶν γειτόνων. For ἐκ γειτόνων cf. Lycurgus, (Leocrates) § 21 οὐδὲ τὰ θρία τῆς χώρας ἀσχυνόμενος ἀλλ' ἐκ γειτόνων τῆς ἐκθρεψάσης αὐτὸν πατρίδος μετοικῶν (cf. e vicinia and exadversum in the sense of prope). For ἐν γειτόνων we find no parallel earlier than Lucian, φιλοψευδῆς § 25 ἐν γειτόνων δὲ ἡμῖν ὄκει and convivium § 22; also Icaromenippus § 8, ἐν γειτόνων ἐστὶ τὰ δόγματα καὶ μὴ πολὺ διεσπληνόμενα ('their doctrines are next door to one another and differ but slightly').

πρίασθαι.....ὠνεῖσθαι.] The former is used as the aorist of the latter; ὠνησάμην (though common in Lucian and Plutarch) being never found in early Greek Prose, and perhaps once only in Greek comedy (in a doubtful fragment of Eupolis). The correct aorist and present are found side by side in § 21, πρίαμντο followed by ὁ ὠνούμενος; similarly in Lysias, Or. 7 § 4, πρίαμντος occurs with ὠνούμην in the very next sentence.

τίθεσθαι.] lit. 'to get security given you,' hence 'to lend money on security' of land, &c.; 'to lend on mortgage,' as opposed to τίθεναι, lit. 'to give security,' 'to put in pledge,' 'to mortgage,' 'to borrow on security.'—Hermann, Privatalt. § 68. 15, quotes Dionys. Halic. de Isaeo p. 610, which illustrates the general sense of the present passage; δανειζομένῳ οὐδεὶς ἂν ἔδωκεν ἐπ' αὐτοῖς ἐτι πλεον οὐδὲν ἀποδεδωκότε τὰς μισθώσεις.

ἃ νῦν ἀπογέγραπται.] 'which have been scheduled in the present suit (entered in the ἀπογραφή, or specification).'

ὡς ἐνοφειλομένου — ἀργυρίου.] 'on the ground that money was due to himself thereon.' The property was already saddled with a debt due to Arethusius, to whom it was (in part at least) mortgaged. Arethusius, in other words, had a lien of money upon the property. In another speech delivered by Apollodorus, Or. 49 (Timoth.) § 45, we have the words ἐνεπισκήψασθαι ἐν τῇ οὐσίᾳ τῇ ἐκείνου ἐνοφειλόμενον αὐτῷ τοῦτο τὸ ἀργύριον.

To contract a fresh loan on the security of property already mortgaged was of course fraudulent and was very properly forbidden. Cf. Bekker's Anecdota p. 259 μὴ ἐπιδανείσασθαι ἐπὶ τοῖς αὐτοῖς ἐνεχύροις. Or. 35 (Laorit.) § 21 ἐστὶν ἐν τῇ συγγραφῇ ὅτι ὑποτιθέασι ταῦτ' ἐλευθερά (unencumbered) καὶ οὐδενὶ οὐδὲν ὀφείλοντες, καὶ ὅτι οὐδ' ἐπιδανείσονται ἐπὶ τοῦτοις παρ' οὐδένο. See also Or. 34 § 6.

χιλίας δραχμὰς, ἀπόλωνται.] i. e. ἵνα μὴ αἱ τε χιλίαι δραχμαί, ἀς ἀποδέδωκα, ἀπόλωνται. τὰς δραχμὰς is here attracted into the same case as the relative δ, the object of ἀποδέδωκα. Or. 20 (Lept.) § 18, οὐδεὶς ἐστ' ἀτελής, οὐδ' οἷς αὐτὸς ἔγραψε, τοὺς ἀφ' Ἀρμοδίου καὶ Ἀριστογέιτονος. Plato, Phaedo p. 66 E, ἡμῖν ἐσται οὐ ἐπιθυμούμεν τε καὶ φάμεν ἐρασταὶ εἶναι φρονήσεως. (See Kühner, Greek Grammar, II. § 556, 4.)

ἀγώγιμος.] 'liable to seizure.' Or. 23 (Aristoer.) § 11 ἂν τις αὐτὸν ἀποκτείνῃ, ἀγώγιμον εἶναι.

τοῦ λυσαμένου...εἶναι τὸν λυθέντα.] 'the laws enact that a person ransomed from the enemy shall be the property of the ransomer, if the former fail to pay the redemption money.'

12. ἅπερ ἂν.] sc. ἀποκρίναιτο. οὐκ ἂν νομίσας ἀδικηθῆναι ἂν. ἂν is often separated from its verb by such words as οἶμαι, δοκῶ, οἶδα, νομίζω. Xen. Cyrop. VIII. 7. 25, ἡδέως ἂν μοι δοκῶ κοινωνῆσαι (Goodwin, Moods and Tenses § 42, 2, p. 62). This is most frequently the case when ἂν is closely attracted to an emphatic negative, e.g. Or. 36 § 49, οὐ γὰρ ἄλλο γ' ἔχουσ οὐδὲν ἂν ποιῆσαι.

ἔτι, ὦ Νικόστρατε, κ.τ.λ.] ἔτι, which usually introduces an indirect construction, is here followed by oratio recta, and need not be translated. Xen. Cyrop. VII. 8, 8 ἀπεκρίνατο ἔτι, ὦ δέσποτα, οὐ ζῆ (Goodwin, Moods and Tenses, § 79).

ἐπειδὴ...οὐ δύνασαι κ.τ.λ.] G. H. Schaefer suggests ἐπειδὴ δ' οὐ δύναμαι (for δύνασαι) πορίσαι...ἀργύριον γὰρ (for μὲν) ἐμοὶ οὐ πάρεστιν...τῶν (om. δέ) κτημάτων...κίχρημι ὃ τι βούλει. He holds that this reply suits the request of Nicostatus in § 11, πόρισον τὸ ἐλλείπον τοῦ ἀργυρίου, better than the manuscript reading; the proposed alteration does not, however, commend itself as conclusive; indeed, the emphatic pronoun ἐμοί, and the words οὐδ' ἔχω οὐδ' αὐτὸς, are more appropriate as a contrast to the second person δύνασαι than ἐμοὶ οὐ πάρεστιν, οὐδ' ἔχω οὐδ' αὐτὸς, τῶν δὲ κτημάτων σοι τῶν ἐμῶν κίχρημι ὅ τι βούλει, θέντα τοῦ ἐπιλοιποῦ ἀργυρίου ὅσον ἐνδεῖ σοι, ἐνιαυτὸν ἀτόκῳ χρησθαι τῷ ἀργυρίῳ καὶ ἀποδοῦναι τοῖς ξένοις. συλλέξας 13 δ' ἔρανον, ὥσπερ αὐτὸς φῆς, λῦσαί μοι. ἀκούσας δ' οὗτος ταῦτα καὶ ἐπαινέσας με ἐκέλευσε τὴν ταχίστην πράξαι, πρὶν ἐξήκειν τὰς ἡμέρας ἐν αἷς ἔφη δεῖν τὰ λύτρα καταθεῖναι. τίθημι οὖν τὴν συνοικίαν ἐκκαίδεκα

to the proposed substitution δύναμαι. The sense of the text is simply this: 'inasmuch as you are at present unable to pay the whole of the debt, although I have no money by me, nor indeed have I any at all (e.g. at my banker's) any more than yourself, I freely grant you the loan of any part of my property; you may mortgage it for the remainder of your debt and have the use of the money for a year without interest.'

κίχρημι] here, as elsewhere, of a friendly loan, commodare, as contrasted with δανείζω, which is generally used of a money-lender's loan on interest, mutuo dare. Or. 49 (Timoth.) § 23, στρώματα καὶ ἱμάτια καὶ φιάλας ἀργυρᾶς δύο...ἐχρησε, καὶ τὴν μὲν τοῦ ἀργυρίου, ἣν ἐδανείζετο, ἐδάνεισεν, where, in the very next section, ἐδανείσατο is applied to the furniture as well as to the money; τὰς φιάλας... ἃς ἤγάσατο ὅτεπερ καὶ τὰ στρώματα καὶ τὴν μὲν τοῦ ἀργυρίου ἣν ἐδανείσατο.

θέντα κ.τ.λ.] sc. θεῖναι τι (τῶν κτημάτων) τοῦ ἀργυρίου καὶ χρησθαι κ.τ.λ. For the genitive (of price) cf. infra § 13, τίθημι τὴν συνοικίαν ἐκκαίδεκα μνῶν. (For numerous instances of gen. after words like ὠνεῖσθαι, πωλεῖν, περιδίδοσθαι, see Kühner, II. § 418. 6. a).—ὅσον ἐνδεῖ sc. 16 minae, Apollodorus having already (§ 8 fin.) provided 10 out of the 26 minae (§ 7 fin.).

συλλέξας ἔρανον.] Mid. § 184, ἐγὼ νομίζω πάντας ἀνθρώπους ἐράνους φέρειν παρὰ τὸν βίον αὐτοῖς, οὐχὶ τοῖςδε μόνους οὐδὲ συλλέγουσί τινες κ.τ.λ. Cf. Antiphon, p. 117. 19. P.]

λῦσαί μοι] sc. τὸ κτήμα. 'Release my property from the mortgage,' or (with Kennedy), 'pay off my mortgage as you promise.' So, in another speech delivered by Apollodorus, Or. 50 (Polycles) § 28 ὅνα λύσονται μοι τὸ χωρίον, ἀποδόντες...τριάκοντα μνᾶς.

13. τὴν συνοικίαν.] Probably 'the lodging-house' mentioned in Or. 45 § 28, and there valued at 100 minae. This security would amply suffice for a loan of 16 minae, and the rate of 16 per cent. below mentioned would, if paid on the value of the house, exactly produce the 16 minae required. In consideration of lending this sum on the security in question, Arcesas would further receive interest (from Apollodorus) at the rate of 16 per cent. on the 16 minae. Cf. Or. 36 § 6, ἐπὶ συνοικίαις δεδανεικῶς ἦν (with note). Aeschin. Timarch. § 124 ὅπου πολλοὶ name of the deme as Παμβῶται.

 On προξήνησεν, 'introduced,' cf. Or. 37 (Fant.) § 11.

ἐπὶ ὀκτὼ ὀβολοῖς τὴν μῶν τοῦ μηνὸς ἐκάστου.] 'Who lent me the money at an interest of 8 obols per mina per month,'
 i. e. 12×8 obols per 600 obols (or '16 per cent.'), per annum.
 When the interest is quoted at so many obols per mina per month, we have simply to double the number of obols to find the rate per cent. per annum.
 Thus ἐπὶ πέντε ὀβολοῖς is 10 per cent.: again ἐπὶ δραχμῇ (i. e. ἐφ' δεξ ὀβολοῖς) is 12 per cent. and ἐπὶ τρίτῃ ἡμιωβελίῳ (i. e. $2\frac{1}{2}$ obols per mina per month) is 5 per cent. per annum. From 12 to 18 per cent. appear to have been the commonest rates of interest at Athens. (For this, and another Athenian method of reckoning rates of interest, see Donaldson's Greek Grammar ad fin., or Dict. Antiq. s. v. Fenus.)

§§ 13 cont.—15. As soon as he had got the sixteen minae, so far from being grateful, he actually laid a plot to rob me of them, calculating on my being driven by my youthful inexperience into foregoing the attempt to recover the money which he owed me.

 First, as I was then engaged in lawsuits against my relations, he made overtures to them and pledged himself to make common cause with them. Next, as he was acquainted with my proposed pleadings, he disclosed them to my opponents, and further got me condemned to pay a fine in a case for which I had never really received a summons, though he fraudulently entered the name of his brother Arethusius as one of the witnesses to the summons alleged. Moreover, in the event of my bringing to a preliminary hearing the lawsuits which I had obtained leave to institute against my relations, they were preparing to inform against me as a debtor to the treasury and to get me thrown into prison.
 Again, Arethusius actually got me condemned as a debtor to the treasury, made a forcible entry into my house and carried off all my furniture, though it was worth far more than the 'debt' in question.

ἢ ἀποστερήσειε... καὶ ἀπορούμενος ἐγὼ κ.τ.λ., ὅπως μὴ εἰσπράττοιμι.] ὅπως μὴ is somewhat out of place, indeed ὅπως is really superfluous, as the whole sentence depends on the particle of purpose ἵνα.

14. τῶν ἀντιδίκων.] Referring principally to his opponent Phormio, (cf. § 9, διαφόρως ἔχειν τῷ Φορμίωνι, and § 14 ad fin. τῶν οἰκείων τῶν ἀδικούντων με,) but a litigious person like Apollodorus doubtless had many such opponents, even apart from those whose lawsuits are expressly recorded in the orations that have come down to us (see Or. 36 § 53).

τοὺς λόγους ἐκφέρει μου εἰδώς.] 'Divulges my arguments, with which he was acquainted.'

ἐγγράφει τῷ δημοσίῳ ἀπρόσκλητον κ.τ.λ.] Lit. 'registers (against me) for the state-treasury an unsummoned fine of 610 drachmae arising from production of property in court,' i.e. 'enters me as a state-debtor to the amount of 610 drachmae, demanded from me without formal citation, as a fine for non-production of property in court;' or, as Prof. Kennedy renders it, 'registers (against me) a fine to the treasury... upon a writ of exhibit of which I had no notice by legal summons.'

The note on this sentence in Jerome Wolf's edition of Demosthenes (A. D. 1547) deserves quotation not only as a signal instance of modesty and candour, but also to illustrate the difficulties which embarrassed a commentator in the sixteenth century, owing to the inadequacy of the books of reference then accessible. 'Sententia quae sit, Oedipus divinet. Me et Budaeus (sc. Budaei commentarii linguae Graecae) et lexica Graeca Latinaque omnia destitunt, Quaesivi ἀπόκληρος (sic), quaesivi ἐμφανής, quaesivi κατάστασις, quaesivi ἐξ ἐμφανῶν καταστάσεως. Sed aut multa aut ἀπορδιδόντα omnia. Doctiores, si boni viri sunt, explicant potius, quam me sugillanto.'

Before entering on the details, it may be well to explain the general drift of the passage. Apollodorus is engaged in a variety of lawsuits in one of which we must suppose that he was alleged to be in possession of certain articles, probably documents, either actually belonging to one of his opponents or such that the latter had a legal right to demand production of them for purposes of inspection. The proper course on the part of Nicostratus, who had made common cause with one of these opponents, would have been to serve Apollodorus with a summons or citation, duly ἀπρόσκλητον ἐξ ἐμφανῶν καταστάσεως ἐπιβολὴν ἐξακοσίας καὶ δέκα δραχμὰς, διὰ Λυκίδου τοῦ μωλωθροῦ attested by witnesses, requiring him to produce the articles in question. If Apollodorus had, without assigning a legally valid reason, refused to do so, Nicostratus would have been entitled to have a fine levied on Apollodorus and to get him entered as a debtor to the state for the amount of that fine. Instead of this, it appears that Nicostratus served no citation on Apollodorus (the ἐπιβολὴ was ἀπρόσκλητος), thus giving the latter no opportunity for shewing cause against the production of the articles demanded; he then proceeded to obtain a verdict against his opponent and to have him registered as owing 610 drachmae to the public treasury.

ἐγγράφει.] 'registers (against me),—a common term for a formal entry or registration, especially of a debt or fine. τῷ δημοσίῳ.] For τὸ δημόσιον in the sense of τὸ κοινόν 'the treasury,' cf. Isaeus, Or. 10 § 20 ἐμοὶ τι ἀτύχημα πρὸς τὸ δημόσιον συνέβη. Meid. § 182 and Deinarchus, Or. 2 § 2, ὀφέλων τῷ δημοσίῳ. See Or. 39 (Boeot.) § 14.

ἀπρόσκλητον.] This is the reading of the codex Augustanus primus (A¹), first accepted by Reiske for the vulgata lectio ἀπόκληρον which is unintelligible. ἀπρόσκλητος ἐπιβολή 'a fine without a citation,' here means 'a fine inflicted in a case for which no citation has been issued.' Similarly infra § 15 ἀπρόσκλητον δίκην and Meid. § 92 τὴν κατὰ τοῦ διαιτητοῦ γνώσιν, ἣν ἀπρόσκλητον κατεσκεύασεν, αὐτὸς κυρίαν ἐαυτῷ πεποιήται.

Cf. the Roman exhibitio (Ulpian, Digest, 29. 8. 2, exhibitio tabularum testamenti); and actio ad exhibendum (Ulpian, Digest, 43. 29. 1, exhibere est in publicum producere). Hence comes our common legal term, an exhibit or writ of production. With ἐμφανῇ καταστήσαι, we may further compare our ordinary phrase sub paena duces tecum, used when a solicitor (for instance) holds a document which the court can require to be put in, for the furtherance of the ends of justice.

κλητῆρας ἐπεγραψάμενος.] i.e. 'having endorsed it with the names of summoners.' As the δίκη was ἀπρόσκλητος, i.e. as there were no κλητῆρες, this endorsement was virtually a forgery.

τὰ σκεύη πάντα ἐξεφόρησε.] 'carried out all my furniture' (i.e. distrained upon me for my alleged debt). Or. 22 (Androt.) § 57, βαδίζειν ἐπ' οἰκίας καὶ σκεύη φέρειν μὴδὲν ὀφειλόντων ἀνθρώπων. Arethusius seized property worth more than 20 minae, although the 'debt' amounted to little more than six. (610 dr. = 6 m. 10 dr.)

§§ 15—18. On my proceeding against Arethusius for fraudulent citation, he came into my property at night and laid waste my orchard with all its fine fruit-grafts, its vines and its olive-trees. Further they put up a boy of free birth to go in broad daylight and pluck the flowers of my rose-bed, hoping I would mistake him for a slave and strike him, and thus make myself liable to an indictment for assault. In this they were disappointed. Thereupon, as soon as I had brought to the preliminary stage before the magistrate my indictment of Arethusius for fraudulent citation, and was on the point of taking it before the jury, he lay in wait for me when I was coming up from the Peiraeus late at night and violently assaulted me, and was only prevented from dashing me into the quarries by some people hearing my cries and rushing to the rescue.

Not many days after, I brought my case before the jury and with the greatest ease got Arethusius convicted. Though the jury proposed to condemn him to death, I begged them to acquiesce in the penalty proposed by my opponents themselves, a fine of one talent.

ὅτε δὲ—ἐβάδιζον.] lit. 'When I thought it my duty to avenge myself, and on hearing of the plot, was proceeding, after payment of the debt, to take measures against Arethusius, &c.' In translating the whole sentence it is convenient to omit ὅτε, to render ᾤμην and ἐβάδιζον as principal verbs, and to begin a new English sentence with the first words of the apodosis, ἐλθὼν εἰς τὸ χωρίον κ.τ.λ.

καὶ ἐκτίσας... ἐβάδιζον.] This is the reading of the Paris ms Σ. Bekker adopts ἐκτίσας...καὶ ἐβάδιζον, which gives us a rather less compact construction.

τὸν Ἀρεθοῦσιον.] to be taken in apposition with τὸν κλητῆρα. The Zurich editors adopt the reading τὸνδ' Ἀρεθοῦσιον found in the Paris ms Σ and another νόμον, ἔλθων εἰς τὸ χωρίον τῆς νυκτὸς, ὅσα ἐνὶν φυτὰ ἀκροδρῶν γενναῖα ἐμβεβλημένα, καὶ τὰς ἀναδενδρά-good ms (Φ). But the words in the text may after all be only an interpolated explanation of τὸν κλητήρα (cf. § 10).

τῆς ψευδοκλητίας.] The genitive is here used after βαδίζειν ἐπὶ τινα on the analogy of the construction commonly found after διώκειν, εἰσάγειν and ἐπεξερχεσθαι (in the legal sense). Plato, Leg. 886 B, ἐπεξέρτω φόνον τῷ πτείναντι. Or. 49 (Apollodorus v. Timoth.) § 56 μὴ ... ἐπὶ τῷδε κακοτεχνῶν ἔλθαι. The phrase βαδίζειν ἐπὶ τινα is also found (though not in any legal sense) in Plutarch's Theseus, 7, ἐπὶ τοὺς πανταχοῦ πονηροὺς βαδίζοντα καθαίρειν γῆν καὶ θάλατταν (of Hercules).

ὅσα ἐνὶν φυτὰ—διαθεῖν.] 'he cut off all the choice fruit-grafts that were there, and the trained vines besides; he also broke down the nursery-beds of olive-trees set in rows around my plantations, making worse havoc than would ever be made, even by enemies in war.'

ἀκροδρῶν.] The primary sense of the word is 'fruit,' the secondary 'fruit-trees.' Though used in early writers of any edible fruit, later authorities restrict it to the hard-shelled varieties alone. Compare the distinction quoted from Galen in the Geoponica x. 74. 4, 'Ὁρφεὺς ἀκρόδρνα πᾶσαν ὀπώραν καλεῖ. Γάληνος δὲ καὶ οἱ τὰ φυτουργικὰ συνταξάμενοι ἀκρόδρνα φασὶ τὰ σκέπη ἔχοντα, ὅλον ῥόας, κάρνα, ἀμυγδάλας καὶ εἰ τι ὅμοιον (pomegranates, nuts, almonds and the like), ὀπώρας δὲ τὰ δσκηπῇ ὡς μήλα, ἀπίους καὶ τὰ ὅμοια (apples, pears, &c.). In Xenophon, Oecon. 19 § 12, we have τᾶλλα ἀκρόδρνα πάντα after mention of vines and fig-trees, and in Plato, Critias, 115 B, τὸν ἡμερῶν καρπὸν, τὸν τε ξηρὸν (different kinds of grain)... καὶ τὸν ὅσος ξύλως (fruits of hard rind). παιδιᾶς τε ὅς ἐνεκα ἡδονῆς τε γέγονε δυσθυσάριστος ἀκροδρῶν καρπός, ὅσα τε παραμύθια πλησμονῆς μεταδότης ἀγαπητὰ κάμνοντι τίθεμεν. Athenaeus, II. § 88 p. 52, οἱ Ἀττικοὶ καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι συγγραφεῖς κοινῶς πάντα τὰ ἀκρόδρνα κάρνα λέγουσιν, ib. III. § 20 p. 81, Γλανκίδης δὲ φησὶν ἀρίστα τῶν ἀκροδρῶν εἶναι μήλα κυνώνια (quinces), φαύλια, στρουθία (two other kinds of quince).

The etymological formation of the word, referring as it does originally to what we may call the 'tree-tips,' or the fresh growth at the furthest extremities of the branches, may be illustrated by the passage in Hesiod's Works and Days 231, ὄρεσι δὲ δρῦς ἄκρη μὲν τε φέρε βαλάνους, μέσση δὲ μελίσσας, and Theocritus, xv. 112, πᾶρ δὲ οἱ ὄρια κείται, ὅσα δρῦς ἄκρα φέροντι.

[It seems to me that ἀκρόδρνα meant trees which produced fruit chiefly on the upper boughs, as distinguished from vines, from which the grapes hang in clusters nearer to the ground. The edible acorn, βάλανος, may have been specially so described, if we limit δρῦς to the sense of 'oak-tree.' P.]

γενναῖα.] 'of a choice kind,' 'of a good stock.' Plato, Leg. 844 E, τὴν γενναίαν νῦν λεγομένην σταφυλὴν ἢ τὰ γενναῖα σῦκα ἐπονομαζόμενα ὀπωρίζειν. (Cf. nobilis in Martial III. 47. 7, frutice nobili caules and as an epithet

Columella iv. 1. 8, vitis arbus-tiva, and Pliny N. H. xvii. 23 § 199 sqq. nobilis vina non nisi in arbutis gigni. The best trees for the purpose were, according to Pliny, the elm (amicta vitibus ulmo of Hor. Ep. i. 16. 3) and the poplar; next to these the ash, the fig-tree and the olive. (See further St John's Manners and Customs of Ancient Greece, ii. 344—8.)

On the laws protecting the cultivation of the olive in Attica and providing for the preservation of the sacred olives (or μορφαί) and even of the hollow trunk of an olive tree, see the interesting speech of Lysias, Or. 7, περὶ τοῦ σηκοῦ, esp. § 2, ἀπεγράφον τὸ μὲν πρῶτον ἐλαίαν ἐκ τῆς γῆς ἀφανίζειν, καὶ πρὸς τοὺς ἐωνημένους τοὺς καρποὺς τῶν μοριῶν πυθανόμενοι προσήσαν ... νυνὶ με σηκὸν φασὶν ἀφανίζειν. See also Dem. Or. 43 (Macart.) §§ 69—71.

16. παιδάριον ἀστὸν.] i. e. a little boy, who was free born. It was expected that Apollodorus would have mistaken the boy for a slave and either bound or beaten him, thereby rendering himself liable to an indictment for assault (ὑβρις).

Aeschines (Timarch. § 16)

ψαντες διὰ τὸ γείτονες εἶναι καὶ ὁμορον τὸ χωρίον ἐκέλευον τὴν ῥοδωνιὰν βλαστάνουσιν ἐκτίλλειν, ἢ, εἰ quotes a 'law of Solon' ἂν τις Ἀθηναίων ἐλευθερον παῖδα ὕβριση, γραφέσθω ὁ κύριος τοῦ παιδὸς πρὸς τοὺς θεσμοθέτας... ἐνοχοὶ δὲ ἔστωσαν ταῖςδε ταῖς αἰτίαις καὶ οἱ εἰς τὰ οἰκετικὰ σώματα ἑξαμαρτάνουσιν, and similarly Dem. Meid. §§ 47—48. According to these two passages, it was permissible to institute a γράφη ὕβρεως even for outrage done to a slave, and though the text appears at first sight to imply that in such a case an indictment could not be brought, yet all that is necessarily meant is that if the lad maltreated were free born, the indictment (however unjustifiable in the present instance) would have been easier to bring forward than in the case of a slave. (Becker's Charicles III. p. 31—32 = p. 367 of English Abridgment. Hermann, Privatalt. § 60).

ἐκέλευον—ἐκτίλλειν.] 'prompted him to pluck off the flowers of my rose-bed.' (ἐκέλευον 'put him up to...' 'persuaded him' cf. § 7.) [ἐκτίλλειν is perhaps 'to pick off the young shoots as they were growing.' P.].

The Rhetorician Hermogenes quotes the phrase τὴν ῥοδωνιὰν ἐκτίλλειν as an instance of ἀφέλεια (Spengel, Rhetores Graeci II. 353) and Harpocration has the following article, ῥοδωνιά· Δημοσθένης ἐν τῷ περὶ τῶν Ἀρεθονοσίου ἀνδραπτόων. ῥοδωνιά ἐστιν ἡ τῶν ῥόδων φυτεία ὥσπερ ἰωνιά ἡ τῶν ἰων, ὡς Ἐκαταῖος ἐν ἀπεριγηγήσεως δηλοῖ. Similarly Pollux I. 229 who gives ἰωνιά as the only parallel he can remember to the formation of the word ῥοδωνιά (cf. rosaria, violaria).

To a modern reader, the mention of a rose-bed is immediately suggestive of a pleasure garden, but whether we look to the character of its owner who seems to have been a dry man of business and little more, or to the context with its fruit-trees, its vines and its olives, we are driven to the conclusion that his roses were mere articles of trade, grown to be sold in town for crowns and garlands. Just so, among the blessings of Peace, in the Pax of Aristophanes, 577, we find 'the violet-bed beside the well' mentioned in the very same breath as 'cakes and figs and myrtle-berries, sweet new wine and olive-trees.'

The Greek appreciation of the rose seems to have been mainly utilitarian. Thus it is under the head of στεφανώματα that Theophrastus dilates on the many beauties of the rose and on its numerous varieties (πλήθει τε φύλλων καὶ ὀλιγότητι καὶ τραχύτητι καὶ λειδότητι καὶ χροίῳ καὶ εὐοσμῷ. Hist. Plant. VII. 6). To the Greek, says Ruskin, 'a rose was good for scent, and a stream for sound and coolness; for the rest one was no more than leaves, the other no more than water' (Modern Painters III. 4. 13 § 13). It is indeed a noteworthy fact, attributable partly to the insignificance of the Attic flora, and still more to the defective development of Greek taste in this particular, that in what is known as the best period of Greek literature there is scarcely a single instance of a refined appreciation of the attractions of a flower-garden. One of the rare

The length of the twelfth part of the day would vary with the time of the year, and the running out of the water would indicate the lapse of a particular portion of the whole day. Thus the water-

Reiske conjectures δι' ἐμέ, 'on my account,' which would also make good sense, though disapproved by Dobræe, who refers in support of δι' ἐμοῦ to Or. 51 § 17 ὥσπερ... χάριν τιθημένων διὰ τῶν τοιούτων τοῖς ἀμελοῦσιν ὑμῶν, ἀλλ' οὐ διὰ τῶν βελτιόνων τοῖς ὑπηρετοῦσιν αἱ δὲ χαρίζεσθαι προσήκον.

Πασίωνος ὦν.] i.e. the son of one who, originally a banker's slave, had received the citizenship by adoption. Neither the father nor the son was a citizen by birth, and it would have been peculiarly invidious had the latter compassed the death of one who was by birth a citizen of Athens.

§§ 19—21. Having now recounted some of the wrongs done me by Arethusius and his brother Nicostratus, I will call evidence in detail to prove that the two slaves entered by me in the specification do not belong to Nicostratus who is now attempting to claim them, but are really part of the property of Arethusius and are thus liable to be confiscated to the state, as a partial payment of his debt to the treasury.

§ 19. At this point the speaker, after having shewn the reasons which justified him in regarding Arethusius as his enemy and exacting vengeance from him, reaches the real point at issue, viz. the proof that the slaves specified in the schedule belong to Arethusius, and not, as is alleged, to his brother Nicostratus.

τὸν δὲ Μάνην.] governed by ἐναπετίμησεν but placed early for emphatic contrast with τὸν μὲν Κέρδωνα in § 19. It may almost be regarded as an accusative absolute.

Μάνης was one of the commonest slave-names. Theophrastus in his will, which is preserved by Diogenes Laertius, v. 55, mentions among his slaves Callias and Manes, and the latter name occurs in Ar. Ran. 965, Lys. 908, 1213, and Pax 1146, while in the Aves, 523, it is used in the plural as a synonym ἐναπετίμησεν.] Archepolis handed over Manes to Arethusius as an equivalent for part of the debt due to the latter. The nominative to this verb is not Arethusius, the subject of the participle δανείσας, but Archepolis, the subject of the subordinate clause ἐπειδὴ οὐχ οἷός τ' ἦν. It will further be noticed that, while the verb ἀποτιμᾶω is generally used in the active of borrowing and in the middle of lending money on security, the compound ἐναποτιμᾶω is in the present passage applied to the debtor's transference of a part of his property on valuation in lieu of direct payment of his debt. The same compound occurs in the passive form in Dio Cassius XII. 37 τὰ ἐνέχυρα πρὸς τὴν ἀξίαν ἐναποτιμῆσθαι ἐκέλευσε (i. e. Caesar ordained that the securities on which money had been borrowed should be valued and transferred to the creditors in place of a money payment).

Reiske, G. H. Schaefer and the Zurich editors (as well as Dindorf in his Oxford edition of 1846) place a comma after τὸ ἀρχαῖον, and thus construe ἅπαν with ἐναπετίμησεν αὐτῷ, 'handed him over in full payment,' 'paid off the whole sum in the person of Manes.'

The latter verb having no present participle of its own, ὠνούμενος commonly takes its place and is so used in the present passage. Cf. note on § 10, where πρίασθαι is followed by ὠνεῖσθαι.

§§ 22—25. I now propose to deal with the Challenge which my opponents proposed to me, and also with that which I myself proposed to them.

At the preliminary hearing of my case against Arethusius, they put in a Challenge, and offered therein to deliver up the slaves, to be tortured by myself, their object being to claim the Challenge as a piece of evidence in their own favour in the event of my refusing to accept it.

I replied to the Challenge by stating in the presence of witnesses, that since this was not a private but a public cause and since the slaves, as I contended, were the property of the state, it was not for myself to torture them, as I was only a private person; on the contrary, it was a question for the board of police or for certain persons chosen by the Council of the state. On these conditions I was willing to accept their Challenge, and I challenged them to accept my own proposal. They declined my offer.

παραδιδόναι...τὰνδράποδα βασανίσαι.] The principle of extracting evidence by the torture of slaves, was one of the weakest points in the judicial system of Athens (some interesting criticisms on it may be found in Forsyth's Hortensius p. 40, and in Mahaffy's Social Life in Greece p. 226—8).—ἐμοὶ αὐτῷ is emphatic, just as, six lines further, εἰ ἐμοὶ ἐξεδίδουσαν contrasted with δημοσίᾳ. The speaker holds that the slaves belong to the state and should have been handed over to the public official and not to a private individual like himself.

ταύτην.] Not the evidence given by the slaves, but the mere offer to allow them to be tortured, 'wishing this (offer) to be a kind of evidence on their own side.' ταύτην is attracted into the same gender as μαρτυρίαν; τοῦτο would have made the same sense, but would have been less idiomatic.

23. el ... el.] Two or even three protases, not co-ordinate, may belong to one apodosis, e. g. Plat. Men. 74 B, el τίς σε ἀνέροιτο τοῦτο, τί ἐστὶ σχῆμα; el αὐτῷ εἶπες ὅτι στρογγυλότης, el σοι εἶπεν ἄπερ ἐγώ, εἶπες δὴ-που ἂν ὅτι σχῆμά τι (Goodwin, Moods and Tenses § 55. 1).

The reiteration of el in the present passage has been considered open to objection; it occurs however in Or. 54 § 15, in ἄν undoubtedly genuine speech of Demosthenes (A. Schaefer, Dem. u. s. Zeit III. 2. 188 and Lortzing, Apoll. 33).

δημοσίᾳ βασανίζεσθαι.] 'to be questioned publicly,' i. e. 'to be tortured by a state-officer.'

οὔτε καλῶς ἔχειν] sc. ἡγούμεν, 'it was unsuitable, I thought, for myself to decide as to the answers of the slaves.'

τὴν ἀρχὴν] sc. τοὺς ἔνδεκα, as appears by comparing § 23, μετὰ (τῆς βουλῆς) ἢ μετὰ τῶν ἔνδεκα. Reiske wrongly renders: 'illum Archontem ad cuius tribunal haec causa pertineret, aut delectos a senatu.' Frequently it is the context alone that decides whether ἡ ἀρχὴ or even οἱ ἀρχοντες refers to the Archons or to some other public functionaries. Thus in Or. 22 (Androt.) § 26 τοῖς ἀρχουσιν ἐφύγου refers to the Eleven, and in Lysias, Or. κατὰ τῶν σιτοπώλων §§ 5—10, οἱ ἀρχοντες is several times used of the five σιτοφύλακες in the Peiraens. On τὴν ἀρχὴν for 'the authorities,' abstract for concrete, see note on Or. 45 § 58.

γράφεσθαι.] 'to have the answers written down,' or 'to take down the answers.' Plato Theaet. 143 A, ἐγραψάμην ὑπομνήματα 'I wrote me down some memoranda.' This sense of the middle must not be confounded with the technical meaning 'to indict.'

βασάνους, as is proved by the subsequent clause, 'whatever the slaves said,' is here used, not of the torture itself, but of the extorted evidence. Harpocr. βάσανος· Ἀντιφῶν λῆθος οὕτω καλεῖται, ἣ τὸ χρυσίον παρατριβόμενον δοκιμάζεται. Ὑπερείδης δ' ἐν τῷ κατ' Ἀπρίου τὰ ἐν τοῖς βασάνοις εἰρημένα ὑπὸ τῶν βασανιζομένων καὶ ἀναγραφέντα βασάνους ὠνόμασε. (Anaximenes) rhet. xvi. 1, βάσανός ἐστι μὲν ὁμολογία παρὰ συνειδότης, ἀκόντος δέ.

παρέχειν κ.τ.λ.] 'to produce in court' the evidence obtained by torture. The torture itself, it appears, did not take place in court (see note on Or. 45 § 16).

ἵνα—ἐψηφίσασθε.] For ἵνα 'in which case,' cf. Or. 36 § 47. ἐκ τούτων should be taken with ἐψηφίσασθε and not with ἀκούσαντες, cf. Or. 45 § 2 ἐξ ὧν (ἀκούσαντες)... γινώσθε.

25. ἰδίᾳ βασανιζομένων τῶν ἀνθρώπων] equivalent to ei idia ébasanízontō. Hence in the corresponding clause, instead of δημοσίᾳ δέ, which would have been equally good Greek, we have ei δέ δημοσίᾳ sc. ébasanízontō (Goodwin, Moods and Tenses § 109. 6).

[The drift of the argument is : 'I objected to a private examination, because my opponents would have said that my report of their statements was untrue ; whereas if the examination were public, the responsibility would have rested wholly on the authorities.' P.]

οἱ ἄρχοντες.] 'The Eleven.' See note on τῇ ἀρχῇ in § 24.

§§ 26—29. My opponents are really claiming what is public property, that is, your own property, men of the jury, and I shall prove this by your own laws. When the jury were proposing to condemn Arethusius to death, my opponents proposed a pecuniary penalty and promised jointly to pay it. So far from fulfilling their guarantee, they are actually claiming your own property; and the laws declare that the property of persons who guarantee the payment of a sum to the state and fail to do so shall be confiscated; so that even on this ground alone, the laws would require the slaves in question to be state property.

As soon as Arethusius becomes indebted to the treasury, instead of being, as was admitted in former days, the wealthiest of the brothers, he is now made out to be ever so poor, and part of his property is claimed by his mother, part by his brothers, as in the present instance by Nicostatus.

I must ask you in conclusion to consider that there will never be any lack of claimants to contest your property, and to defraud the state of her dues, by making pitiful appeals to your compassion. If you disregard all such pleas in the present case, you will do wisely in finding a verdict against Nicostatus.

ΚΑΤΑ ΚΟΝΩΝΟΣ ΑΙΚΙΑΣ.

ΥΠΟΘΕΣΙΣ.

Ἀρίστων Ἀθηναῖος δικάζεται Κόνωνι αἰκίας, λέγων ὑπ' αὐτοῦ καὶ τοῦ παιδὸς αὐτοῦ τετυπτήσθαι, καὶ μάρτυρας τούτου παρεχόμενος. ὁ δὲ Κόνων ἀρνεῖται τὸ πρῶγμα καὶ μάρτυρας ἀντιπαρέχεται, οὓς ὁ Δημοσθένης οὐ φησι πιστούς· βεβιωκέναι γὰρ φαύλως 1256 καὶ εὐχερῶς ἔχειν πρὸς τὸ ψεύδεσθαι.

I Ὑβρισθεῖς, ὧ ἄνδρες δικασταί, καὶ παθὼν ὑπὸ

Argument 1. 2. τετυπτήσθαι. In Classical Greek, we should have had the phrase πληγὰς εἰληφέναι. The tenses from τυπτέω*, with the exception of the future τυπτήσω (used in Attic Prose and Comedy), are characteristic of late Greek. Thus, in the first Argument to the Midias, we have τετύπτηκεν and τετυπτημένος, and in Lucian (Demonax § 16) we read: ἐπεὶ δέ τις ἀθληγῆς... ἐπάταξεν αὐτὸν εἰς τὴν κεφαλὴν λίθῳ καὶ αἷμα ἔρρηξεν, οἱ μὲν παρόντες ἡγανάκτουν ὡς αὐτὸς ἕκαστος τετυπτημένος, where ἐπάταξεν is correctly used (as in Classical Greek Prose) instead of the aorist active of τύπτω, while τετυπτημένος is only a late form, for which writers of the best age would have written either πεπληγμένος or πληγὴν εἰληφώς.

The κατὰ Κόνωνος affords an instructive study on this point of Greek usage, as will further appear in Excursus (A) at the end of the speech.

6. εὐχερῶς ἔχειν κ.τ.λ.] 'make no difficulty about lying,' Or. 21 (Meid.) § 103, τὸν μαρὸν καὶ λίαν εὐχερῆ, τὸν κοινορτὸν Εὐκτῆμονα. So ῥαδίως ὁμύναι infra § 39. P.]

§§ 1, 2. I was grossly assaulted by the defendant Conon, and, for a very long time indeed, my life was despaired of. When I was restored to health and strength, instead of going beyond my years by bringing against him a public indictment for brutal outrage, I followed the advice of my friends and took the easier course of instituting a private suit for a common assault. I ask for your indulgent hearing, while I briefly relate to you my wrongs, and I trust that, if I prove my case, you will help me to my rights.

1. ὕβρισθαι—ταυτηνί.] The

Κόνωνος τουτουὶ τοιαῦτα ὥστε πολὺν χρόνον πάνν opening sentence is best rendered by treating ὕβρισθαι and παθῶν as principal verbs, and beginning a fresh sentence with the word ὑγιάνας, e.g. 'I was the victim of wanton outrage, and I suffered such maltreatment at the hands of Conon the defendant, that, for a very long time indeed, neither my friends nor any of my medical attendants expected my recovery. Contrary to expectation, I was restored to health and strength; and I thereupon brought against him the present action for the assault in question.'

This exordium is quoted by the rhetorician Hermogenes as an example of perspicuity and directness of expression. (καθαρότης. Spengel, Rhetores Graeci II. 276.) Here, as in Or. 45, the keynote of the whole speech is struck by the opening word, ὕβρισθαι.

πολὺν χρόνον πάνν.] For this position of πάνν, separated from πολὺν, the word which it obviously qualifies, cf. Plato, Hipp. Maj. 282 ε ἐν ὀλίγῳ χρόνῳ πάνν and (Dem.) Prooem. 18 βραχὺ τί μοι πεσθῆτε πάνν.

ἔλαχον...δίκην.] lit. 'obtained his suit by lot,' 'had it allotted to him,' i.e. 'obtained leave (from the Archon) to bring this action.' Where several lawsuits were instituted at the same time, the Archon decided by lot the order in which they were to be heard (κληροῦν τὰς δίκας); hence the applicant for leave to bring an action is commonly said λαγχάνειν δίκην.

τῆς αἰκίας.] 'the assault in question.' Ariston, as he further explains in the next sentence, is bringing against Conon a private suit for assault (αἰκίας δίκη), instead of a public indictment for wanton outrage (ὕβρεως γραφή). The penalty in the former was light, namely, a pecuniary fine paid to the plaintiff; in the latter, it was either a fine paid to the state, or, in extreme cases, death. The former implied that the complainant had been simply assaulted and struck, the latter that he had been subjected to malicious and brutal indignities.

αἰκία διαφέρει ὕβρεως, ὅτι αἰκία μὲν ἡ διὰ πληγῶν, ὕβρις δὲ καὶ ἀνευ πληγῶν μετὰ προσηλακισμού καὶ ἐπιβουλῆς· διὸ καὶ εὐθὺναι ἐλάττωες τῆς αἰκίας (Lexica Segueriana p. 355).

συνεβουλευόμεν...συνβουλευόντων.] 'consulted'... 'counselled.' The active and middle senses of this verb are also found side by side in Xen. An. II. I. 17, ξυμβουλευομένους ξυμβούλευσε τάδε.

τῇ τῶν λωποδυτῶν ἀπαγωγῇ.]

ἰδίαν ἔλαχον δίκην, ἥδιστ' ἂν, ὧ ἄνδρες Ἀθηναῖοι,

'the summary process directed against footpads,' i.e. 'summary arrest and imprisonment for highway robbery.' The plaintiff's friends meant that Conon might have been captured flagrante delicto, and carried off to prison as a λωποδύτης (lit. 'a clothes-stealer'). According to the plaintiff's subsequent statement, this would be actually true, as Conon and his friends had stripped him of his cloak and carried it off (§ 8 ἐξέδυσαν, and § 10 ἀπεκομίσθην γυμνός, οὔτοι δὲ ψυχόντο θοιμάτιον λαβόντες μόνον). Cf. Isocr. de perm. § 90, τοῦτον ἀπαγαγὼν ἀνδραποδιστὴν καὶ κλέπτην καὶ λωποδύτην, Dem. Or. 22 § 26, Aeschin. Timarch. § 91 and Lysias Or. 10 § 10.

ὑβρεως γραφαῖς.] here contrasted with αἰκίας δίκη.—Harpocr. γραφή· δημοσίου τινος ἐγκλήματος ὄνομα. δίκη· ἰδίως λέγεται ἐπὶ ἰδιωτικῶν ἐγκλημάτων, ὡς σαφὲς ποιεῖ Δημοσθένης ἐν τῷ κατὰ Κόνωνος.

[The plural γραφαί shows that more than one public indictment could have been framed. See also Or. 21 (Meid.) § 28, καὶ δίκας ἰδίας δίδωσιν ὁ νόμος μοι καὶ γραφὴν ὑβρεως. P.]

ἐπάγεσθαι.] 'to take upon my shoulders a greater burden than I should be able to bear.'—πράγματα, in taking legal action. P.]

ὑπὲρ τὴν ἡλικίαν—φαίνεσθαι.]

'to incur the imputation of going beyond my years in undertaking to prosecute for the maltreatment I had received.' The task of instituting and carrying to its issue a γραφή ὑβρεως would be more laborious and would require greater skill and experience than was involved in a δίκη αἰκίας. A young man like Ariston would find himself in an awkward and invidious position, as prosecutor in so ambitious a case as a γραφή ὑβρεως, not to mention his being unequally matched against an unscrupulous opponent who was older than himself and had numerous connexions to support him. He would also be deterred (though he does not here confess it) by the rule requiring the prosecutor to pay a fine of a thousand drachmae in the event of his not obtaining at least one-fifth part of the votes.

The construction is, ἐγκαλοῦντα τούτων ἃ ἐπεπόνθειν.

[ὑπὲρ τὴν ἡλικίαν may mean, 'beyond the resentment suited to my years,' implying that a young man ought to put up with a little affront, and not make a serious matter of it. P.]

ἰδίαν.] ἀντὶ τοῦ ἰδιωτικὴν Δημοσθένης ἐν τῷ κατὰ Κόνωνος. ἐλέγετο δὲ τὸ ἰδίαν καὶ ἰδιωτικὸν ὡς ὁ αὐτὸς ῥήτωρ ἐν τῷ κατὰ Ζηνόθεμιν (§ 32 πρῶγμα ἰδίον). Harpocration.

θανάτου.] The penalty of death was inflicted in cases of λωποδυτῶν ἀπαγωγῇ, and even in special cases of ὕβρεως γραφῇ. For the former, cf. Xen. Mem. i. 2. 62, ἐὰν τις φανερός γένηται λωποδυτῶν ἢ βαλαντιστομῶν ἢ τοιχωρυχῶν, τοῦτοις θάνατός ἐστιν ἡ ζημία, and for the latter, Lysias, fragm. 44, καίτοι τις οὐκ οἶδεν ὑμῶν ὅτι τὴν μὲν αἰκίαν χρημάτων ἔστι μόνον τιμῆσαι, τοὺς δὲ ὑβρίζειν δόξαντας ἔξεστιν ὑμῖν θανάτῳ ζημιῶν.

2. δεινῆς—τουτονί.] 'The original outrage, atrocious as it was, does not surpass the subsequent brutality of the defendant.' See § 26. The first clause may perhaps be taken as a genitive absolute.

παρανενομήσθαι.] The passive is formed just as if the verb were directly transitive in the active, i.e. as if the active construction were παρανομεῖν τινα, and not εἰς τινα. So also the active παρανοεῖν εἰς τινα has παραιοῖσθαι for its corresponding passive. (See below § 4 init. and § 5 fin.)

βοηθῆσαί μοι τὰ δίκαια.] 'assist me to my rights.' For the phrase and the context, cf. Or. 27 § 3 δέομαι ὑμῶν..μετ' εὐνοίας τ' ἐμοῦ ἀκοῦσαι καὶ ἡδικῆσθαι δοκῶ, βοηθῆσαί μοι τὰ δίκαια, ποιήσομαι δ' ὡς ἂν δύνωμαι διὰ βραχυτάτων τοὺς λόγους. A fuller phrase may be noticed in § 42 of this speech, βοηθεῖν καὶ τὰ δίκαια ἀποδιδόναι.

The exordium has several points of coincidence with that of Or. 45. See p. 50.

In the next four sections the plaintiff states the origin of the bad blood between the defendant's family and himself. The narrative, though part of the διήγησις which naturally follows immediately after the προοίμιον of a forensic speech, is only preliminary to the recital of the facts on which the suit is really founded. It is to this portion of the statement of the case that Rhetoricians like Theodorus of Byzantium would have given the name of προδιήγησις (Arist. Rhet. iii. 13).

§§ 3—6. Two years ago, we were ordered out to Panactum ρᾶς ἡμῖν προγραφείσης. ἐσκήνωσαν οὖν οἱ υἱεῖς οἱ Κόνωνος τουτουὶ ἐγγὺς ἡμῶν, ὥς οὐκ ἂν ἐβουλόμην· ἡ γὰρ ἐξ ἀρχῆς ἔχθρα καὶ τὰ προσκρούσματ' ἐκείθεν on garrison duty, and, as ill luck would have it, the sons of Conon pitched their tents close to our own. They picked quarrels with our servants and were persistently guilty of drunken and indecent conduct at the expense of our attendants and ourselves. My messmates and myself represented the case to the general, and he reprimanded them severely for their treatment of ourselves and for their misbehaviour in the camp. Notwithstanding, they burst in upon us on that very evening and violently assaulted us; indeed serious consequences might have ensued, but for the arrival of the officers on the scene of disorder. On our return to Athens, there was naturally some ill blood between Conon's sons and myself, but I simply made up my mind to have nothing more to do with them. However, as the result proved, my collision with the sons in the camp led to my being grossly maltreated by their father the defendant, who instead of rebuking his sons for the original outrage, has himself been guilty of a much more shameful aggression.

3. ἔτος τουτὶ τρίτον.] 'two years ago' (sc. ἐστὶ). Dem. Olynth. § 34 ἀπηγγέλθη...τρίτον ἢ τέταρτον ἔτος τουτὶ, 'Ἡραῖον τεῖχος πολιορκῶν.

The present passage places the date of the speech in the 'third year after,' or, as we should say, 'two years after,' an expedition to Panactum, a fort on the borders of Attica and Boeotia. Of such an expedition we read in Or. 19 (de fals. leg.) § 326, περι...τῆς πρὸς Πανάκτῳ χώρας μεθ' ὅπλων ἐξερχόμεθα, δ' ἕως ἦσαν Φωκεῖς σφοι οὐδεπώποτ' ἐποιήσαμεν. If these expeditions are identical, the speech was delivered in B.C. 343 or 341, according as we place the historical event in B.C. 345 (with Clinton) or 343 (with Westermann).—A. Schaefer, however, plausibly connects the event in question with certain military operations in B.C. 357, and thus obtains for the date of the speech B.C. 355, the year before the delivery of the orations against Leptines and Androtion (Dem. und seine Zeit, III. 2. 251).

On Panactus, or Panactus, Harpocration has this article: Πανάκτος· Δημοσθένης κατὰ Κόνωνος· πόλις ἐστὶ μετὰ τῆς Ἀττικῆς καὶ τῆς Βοιωτίας. He further notes that Thucydides makes the word neuter and Menander masculine.

φρουρᾶς..προγραφείσης.] 'being ordered out on garrison duty.' For προγράφειν, in the sense of 'putting up a public notice' at head-quarters, compare Arist. Aves 448, ἀκούετε λεφ' τοὺς ὀπλίτας νυνμεν | ἀνελομένους θῶπλ' ἀπέναι πάλιν οἴκαδε, | σκοπεῖν δ' ὅτι ἂν προγράψωμεν ἐν τοῖς πινάκιοις, and Aristotle ἐν Ἀθηναίων πολιτείᾳ (quoted by Harpocration s. v. στρατεία), δταν ἡλικίαν ἐκπέμπωσι, προγράφουσιν ἀπὸ τίνος ἀρχοντος ἐπινύμου μέχρι τίνος δεῖ στρατεῦσθαι. ὥς οὐκ ἂν ἐβουλόμην] sc. σκηρῶσαι αὐτοῦς, 'and would to heaven they had not!'

4. ὥραν.] Not to be translated 'hour' but 'time,' as ὥρα in the former sense is found in late Greek only, and was probably first so used by Hipparchus the Alexandrine astronomer in the second century B.C. In phrases like ἔθνον ὥραν οὐδένοσ κοινὴν θεῶν (Eumen.
 109) and τὴν τεταγμένην ὥραν (Bacch. 724) the rendering 'hour' should be avoided as open to misconception.

ταύτην...ἐπαρῶνουν...εἰς τοὺς παῖδας.] Liddell and Scott inadvertently quote this passage as an instance of παροινεῖν being used transitively 'like ὑβρίζειν,' whereas ταύτην is obviously the accusative of time (so. τὴν ὥραν) and the object of παροινεῖν is expressed by εἰς τοὺς παῖδας.
 For the corresponding passive to this intransitive active, see οινος and παροινεῖν mean, not 'to be intoxicated,' but 'to be abusive over one's cups.' P.]

 tive as an instance of ἀπλῇ them from memory with this μετὰ ταῦτα οἶα—προσῆκε.] These few words as printed in Dindorf's ed. include no less than seven instances of hiatus, five of which can however be readily removed by elision. Benseler, who has exhaustively treated this subject in his volume de hiatus in oratoribus Graecis, says of the speeches of Dem. against Conon and Callicles: orator solet verba ita coniungere et collocare, ut plerum-

On closing with us, one of them fell upon my friend and pinned him, while Conon and his son and another* ἔπινον κ.τ.λ.] Either Pamphilus 'the fuller' or 'wool-stapler' had invited Conon and his set to a friendly symposium, or, which is more probable, his shop was their place of lounge. Σπίνθαρος ὁ Εὐβούλου.] This Eubulus was probably the orator and statesman, one of Demosthenes' most formidable opponents. This supposition is strongly confirmed by the fact that the orator in question is known as Εὐβουλος Σπινθάρου Προβαλλίσκος. The person mentioned in the text would, according to the common custom, be called Spintharus, after his grandfather. Cf. note on Or. 39 § 27. (A. Schäfer's Dem. u. s. Zeit, i. 190 n.)

ἐξαναστήσας.] The word is sometimes used as a military term of starting soldiers from ambush, as in Thuc. iii. 108. 3, ἐξανίσταντες, and Xen. Hell. iv. 8. 37. The orator makes his client, a young soldier, characteristically describe the scuffle in the language of military life. Similarly, a few lines below, ἀνεμίσθημεν 'when we closed with one another.'

8. συμβαίνει...καὶ περιτυγχάνομεν.] A simple and somewhat archaic form of phrase instead of δε περιτυγχάνομεν. Thuc. i. 50, ἡδὴ ἦν ὅπῃ καὶ οἱ Κορίνθιοι ἐξαπίνης πρὶν ἂν ἐκρούοντο, Soph. Phil. 354 (Kühner § 518 8).

Φερρεφαττίου.] The site of the temple of Persephone is uncertain; it is supposed to have been south of the Leocorium, and close to the statue of Triptolemus, but we have no data worth mentioning besides the vague indications of the present passage (Leake's Athens i. 488, and Wordsworth's Athens and Attica, p. 150).

εἰς μὲν—ἐκείνον.] 'One of them, whom I failed to identify, suddenly fell on Phanostratus, and pinned him.' The present προσπίπτει gives a vivid effect to the description, and the imperfect κατείχεν must also be noticed as implying that the plaintiff's friend was held fast during the whole of the ensuing scuffle, and therefore could offer no assistance.—ὁ υἱὸς αὐτοῦ, Ctesias.—ἐξέδυσαν, 'stripped me' of my cloak § 9, ἔχοντο θολμῶτιον λαβόντες μου.

εἰθ'—συγκλείσαι.] 'next, they tripped me up, and made me fall heavily into the mud, and by leaping upon me, and maltreating me, they put me in such a condition that they cut my lip right through, - and bunged up my eyes.'

9. τὰ μὲν ἄλλα—ἐν ὑμῖν ἔνια.] i.e. 'much of what they said was most abusive, and some of it I should be sorry to repeat in your presence.' Cf. Or. 18 § 103, ὅσ' ὀκνήσαιμ' ἂν πρὸς ὑμᾶς εἰπεῖν, 21 § 79, οὐ γὰρ ἐγωγε προαχθεῖην ἂν εἰπεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς τῶν τότε ῥηθέντων οὐδέν (quoted by Westermann), and esp. Aeschin. Timarch. § 55, τοιαῦτα

This rhetorical device of professing to have compunctions at repeating the bad language of one's opponent is sufficiently obvious. The effect is threefold, (1) the court is left to imagine that the terms of abuse were singularly offensive; (2) the plaintiff is accredited with being a man of high principle for hesitating to repeat the abominable language of his opponent, —for what Aristotle would call his δυσχέρεια τῶν αἰσχροῶν; and (3) the court is flattered by the compliment implied in the assurance that the language was too indecent to be repeated in their hearing. Cf. Arist. Rhet. iii. 7, παθητικὴ δὲ, εἰάν μὲν ἢ ὕβρις, ὀργιζομένου λέξεις, εἰάν δὲ ἀσεβῆ καὶ αἰσχρά, δυσχεραίνοντος καὶ εὐλαβουμένου καὶ λέγειν.

σημείον.] To be taken with ὑβρεως; τεκμήριον with τοῦ γεγενῆσθαι. The former is 'an indication,' 'a sign'; the latter 'a conclusive proof,' (note on Isocr. ad Dem. § 2).

ἦδε—πλευράς.] 'he began to crow, mimicking the fighting-cocks that have won a victory, while the rest bade him flap his elbows against his sides, like (lit. in lieu of) wings.

If the authority of Aelian (var. hist. II. 28) may be trusted, cock-fighting was a political institution at Athens, and took place in the public theatre once a year. (See esp. Becker's Charicles p. 77 n., also p. 80—81, where the whole scene described in the text is admirably woven in with the adventures of Charicles.)

Nub. 497, κατὰ θου θοῖμάτιον..... γυμνός εἰσιέναι νομίζεται. — ᾤχοντο, in its usual pluperfect sense, 'after stripping me of my cloak, they had taken to their heels.'—ἦλθον, possibly first person singular, but more probably third person plural, referring to οἱ παρατυχόντες. But cf. § 20, ὑγιὲς ἐξελθὼν φοράδην ἦλθον οἱ κάδε.

εἰς βαλανεῖον.] a public bath, as is shewn by § 10, ἵνα μὴ μακρὰν φερομένην οἴκαδε ἐκ τοῦ βαλανείου (W.). See Becker's Charicles p. 147—152.—For the context, cf. Lysias, fragm. 75 (of a boy who had been severely thrashed) οὐ δυναμένον δὲ βαδίζειν ἐκόμισαν αὐτὸν εἰς τὸ δαίγμα ἐν κλίνῃ, καὶ ἐπέδειξαν πολλοῖς Ἀθηναίων.

10. Χολλείδην.] 'Of Χολλεῖδαι,' (Or. 35 § 20), a deme of the tribe Leontis, probably situated south of Hymettus and west of Mons Anhydrys, or Hymettus minor (Leake's Athens, II. 57 and Wordsworth's Athens and Attica, chap. xxv.).—τουτουὶ implies that Euxitheus was present in court; the other, Meidias (probably the same as the subject of the well-known oration of Dem.), was absent.—τῆς οἰκίας, Ariston's home.

eat; and but for a violent discharge of blood at a critical time, death would have resulted, as will be proved by medical evidence.

τῶν σιτίων ἀπεκεκλείμην.] 'I was cut off from, debarred from, my food,' 'too ill to eat anything.' Hesychius explains ἀποκεκλήσθαι σιτίων ἀνορέκτως ἔχειν τροφῆς.—Strict Atticists prefer ἀπεκεκλήμην (from old Attic κλήω) to ἀπεκεκλείμην and ἀπεκεκλείσμεν (Veitch, Gk. verbs).—ἦτρον, 'the pit of the stomach.'

12. εἰ μὴ—διεφθάρην.] 'If a copious discharge of blood had not spontaneously occurred, while I was in extreme agony and at the very crisis of the malady, I should have died of internal suppuration.' [An injury caused by the stamping upon him when down, was relieved at last by passing blood from some internal hemorrhage. P.] περιωδύνῳ is possibly a technical term, at any rate it is used by Hippocrates, 'the Father of Medicine,' and he also has περιωδυνεῖν, περιωδυνία and περιωδυνᾶσθαι. [μοῖρα μὴ περιωδυνος μὴδὲ δεμνιοτήρης occurs in Aesch. Ag. 1423. P.]—ἀπορουμένῳ is either passive, 'despaired of,' or more probably middle, 'doubtful of my recovery,' οἷκ εἰδὼς εἰ περιφεύξομαι § 28.—On the quantity of ἔμπυος, see Excursus (B) to this speech.

τοῦτ' ἔσωσε.] The construction is τοῦτο τὸ αἷμα, ἀποχωρήσαν, ἔσωσέ με, 'the passing of this blood saved my life.'

§§ 13—15. Let me now tell you beforehand of the course which Conon will take in his reply: he will divert your attention from the facts and try to throw ridicule on the whole affair; he will tell you it was only the playful pleasantry that is common among young men about town. He will misrepresent us as just like his sons in character, and only different in being hard on other people. But the jury will be inflicting what I may call a fresh outrage upon me, if they are going to believe the defendant's bare assertion about our respective characters and to allow no weight to the evidence of our life and conduct.

13. εἰς πᾶν ἐλθὼν.] While πᾶν ποιεῖν and πάντα ποιεῖν are invariably used in the active sense of 'straining every nerve,' 'leaving no stone unturned,' εἰς πᾶν ἐλθεῖν and similar phrases have often (like εἰς τοσχατὸν ἐλθεῖν of the last section) the passive notion of being reduced to the utmost extremity, as in the present passage.

Thus (i) in active sense we have Xen. Cyr. v. 4. 26 πάντα ἐποιοῦν πείθοντες τὸν βασιλέα, Anab. iii. 1. 18 ἐπὶ πᾶν ἐλθοι, ὡς ἡμᾶς τὰ ἔσχατα αἰκισάμενος πᾶσιν ἀνθρώποις φόβον παράσχοι, Soph. O. T. 265 κατὰ πάντ' ἀφίξομαι ζητῶν τὸν αὐτόχειρα.

(ii.) in passive; Xen. Hell. vi. 1. 12 οἶδα δέ, ὅφ' οἷας δυνάμεις...εἰς πᾶν ἀφίκετο βασιλεὺς. Plato Symp. 194 A, μάλ' ἂν φοβοῖο καὶ ἐν παντὶ εἴης.

τῆς προσηκούσης ἐλάττω δίκην.] 'I have entered on an action much below the merits of the case.' Cf. latter half of § 1.

τίνα ποτ' ἐστὶν ἂν.] The Zurich editors and Westermann prefer τί ποτ' ἐστὶν ἂν, 'what is the import (sing.) of the points (plur.) that Conon will urge in his defence.' τί...ἂν is more idiomatic than τίνα...ἂν.

ἀπὸ τῆς ὕβρεως—ἐρεῖν.] In apposition to λέγειν παρσκευάσθαι, and loosely dependent on πέπυσμαι. A simpler construction might have been brought about by closing the sentence with παρασκευάσσει and then begin-in English translation this would give a clearer sense than any slavishly literal rendering of the more complex construction in the text. 'He will divert your attention from the wanton outrage and the actual facts of the case; and will endeavour to turn the whole affair into mere jest and ridicule.' That εἰς γέλωτα καὶ σκώμματ' ἐμβαλεῖν is the construction (and not καὶ σκώμματ' ἐμβαλεῖν πειράσσεσθαι, καὶ ἐρεῖν,) appears from (Dem.) Phil. 4 §75, τὸ πρᾶγμα εἰς γέλωτα καὶ λοι-δορίαν ἐμβαλόντες. — Hesychius, referring perhaps to the present passage, has σκώμματα· λοιδορή-ματα γέλωτος χάριν.

14. καλῶν κάγαθῶν.] In good Greek always spelt as two words, not καλὸς καὶ ἀγαθός or καλοκάγαθός (see further, on Isocr. Paneg.

§ 78). Trans. 'sons of respectable people, who in their youthful frolics have given themselves nicknames.' σφίσιν αὐτοῖς is not necessarily limited to the reflexive sense, but is sometimes almost equivalent to the reciprocal pronoun ἀλλήλοις (see Isocr. Paneg. § 34).

ἰθυφάλλους.....αὐτοληκῆθους.]
 'Priapi and Sileni.' K (following the French translation of word αὐτοληκῆθος, see Excursus

ἐρώσι κ.τ.λ.] The construction is τινὲς ἐκ τούτων ἐρώσιν ἑταίρων.

εἰληφέναι καὶ δεδωκέναι πληto supply the lack of a perf.

vas...πικρούς.] Not only 'drunken' and 'insolent,' but also 'hard' (or, 'unforgiving') and 'ill-tempered.' The four epithets, separated into pairs by μὲν and δέ, refer, in the case of the first couple, to the actual 'assault and battery;' in the case of the second, to the lawsuit that had since resulted. Conon will in his artful way represent us as really wild sparks like himself, who are yet inconsistent enough to be churlish and ill-tempered, instead of genial and good-humoured as πάρονοι and ὑβρισταί ought to be.

κατασκευάσει.] in bad sense, 'to misrepresent,' 'trump up a story,' 'make out falsely.' Cf. Or. 45 § 82. παρασκευάσειν the reading of the Paris ms depends, like the previous infinitives, on the remote verb πέπνυμαι.

15. χαλεπῶς — ἐννοχῶς.] 'deeply indignant as I am at the wrongs I have suffered.' Or. 58 § 55 πρῶς ἐπὶ τοῖς γιγνομένοις φέρειν.

τοῦτ' ἀγανακτῆσαιμ' ἂν.] Or. 8 § 55, ἀγανακτῶ αὐτὸ τοῦτο, εἰ τὰ μὲν χρήματα λυκεῖ τινὰς ὑμῶν εἰ διαρπασθήσεται (W). ἀγανάκτειν and similar verbs implying mental emotion, though occasionally followed by a dative with or without ἐπὶ, may have an accusative neuter pronoun (Kühner, Gk. Gr. § 410 c. 5). τοῦτο is explained by εἰ ἀληθῆ δόξει οὐτοσί λέγειν, 'deeply indignant as I am at the wrongs I have suffered, I should (if you will pardon the expression) feel no less resentment at this, and should deem myself the victim of a fresh outrage at your hands, if Conon shall be held by you to be speaking the truth about us...' εἰ οἷόν τ' εἶπεῖν must be understood as a parenthetical apology for using the strong word ὑβρισθῆναι to express the outrage that will be done to the feelings of honest men like the plaintiff, if the defendant's bare assertion is believed outright, and if no weight is given to the unimpeachable testimony presented on the other hand by the exemplary lives of himself and his brothers. Cf. esp. § 43 εἰ προσυβρισθὲς ἀπειμι καὶ δίκης μὴ τυχών.

αὐτὸν αἰτιάσθαι] sc. εἶναι, 'that, whatever sort of person each one shall assert that he is, or his neighbour shall accuse him of being, such he shall be considered to be, and respectable citizens shall have no advantage at all from their daily life or conduct.'

§§ 16—17. As to our own character, no one has ever seen us playing drunken pranks on other people, and we cannot see how our opponents can call us 'hard' on others, if we claim redress. Conon's sons are welcome to belong to their disorderly clubs, but I shall be surprised if this or any similar plea will enable them to escape with impunity.

16. οὔτε παροινούντες οὐδ' ὑβρίζοντες... οὐτ' ἀγνωμον κ.τ.λ.] This refers to § 14, παροίνους... καὶ ὑβριστάς... ἀγνώμονας δὲ καὶ πικρούς. The mss have οὐθ' ὑβρίζοντες, which Baiter (followed by Dindorf and Westermann) alters into οὐδ' ὑβρίζοντες. It would be better perhaps to leave οὐθ' ὑβρίζοντες, and to alter οὐτ' into οὐδ' before ἀγνωμον. The break between the second clause and the first is clearly greater than between the two parts of the first (viz. παροινούντες and ὑβρίζοντες).

ἐωράμεθα.] This form of the perf. of ὁρᾶν (for the older Attic ὠμαι, the 2nd and 3rd sing. of which occur in Dem.) is also found in Isocr. de permutatione § 110, μηδ' ὑφ' ἐνὸς ἐωράσθαι, possibly the earliest extant instance (de perm. belongs to B. C. 355; κατὰ Κόνωνος to B. C. 355 or 341).

συγχωροῦμεν κ.τ.λ.] They are welcome, so far as we are concerned, to the attributes of Priapi and Sileni. For the dat. cf. § 44, πονηροτέροις ἡμῶν εἶναι συνέβαινεν.

εἰς Κόνωνα... τρέπεσθαι.] Passive. 'recoil upon the head of Conon.' Ar. Ach. 833, πολυπραγμοσύνη νυν εἰς κεφαλὴν τρέποιτ' ἐμοί. (Dem.) Epist. 4 § 10, οἱ θεοὶ... τὴν ἀδικον βλασφημίαν εἰς κεφαλὴν τῷ λέγοντι τρέπουσι.

§§ 17 cont.—20. Compare the spirit of our laws with the course which Conon proposes to take. The laws, I understand, affix a penalty even to minor offences, to preclude the perpetration of graver crimes, to prevent men for instance being gradually led from wrangling to blows, from blows to wounding, from wounding to murder. Conon, on the contrary, will make light of the whole affair and will raise a laugh to get himself acquitted. Why! none of you would have laughed had you seen me when I was being brutally maltreated, and when I was carried helpless to my home.

17. θαυμάζω γάρ.] The English idiom requires us to leave γάρ untranslated, or else to render it by the exclamation 'why!' — 'What has all this to do with me? Why! for my part, I am surprised if in your court they have discovered a plea or pretext, thanks to which a man, if convicted of outrage and assault, shall escape punishment.'

οἱ μὲν γὰρ νόμοι κ.τ.λ.] The influence of μὲν extends over the whole of the two following sections, it is then caught up and reiterated in the clause εἰτ' ἐν μὲν τοῖς νόμοις οὕτως. Thus the first μὲν has no δέ corresponding to it, until we reach the words ἀν δ' εἴπῃ Κόνων. 'The laws say so and so...' 'Not so Conon.'

τὰς ἀναγκαίας προφάσεις κ.τ.λ.] i. e. προείδοντο ὅπως μὴ δ' αἱ ἀναγκαῖαι προφάσεις μείζους γίγνωνται. Thus, to use the illustration supplied below by Demosthenes himself, abusive language is a πρόφασις for dealing blows; blows again are a πρόφασις for inflicting wounds; lastly wounding, for homicide. The laws, by ordaining a legal remedy at each stage, (1) defamation, (2) assault, (3) unlawful wounding, interpose to prevent defamation, which is a pretext for assault, growing into actual assault; similarly assault developing into unlawful wounding, and ultimately into homicide.

'The laws on their part have, on the very contrary, made provision, even in the case of pleas of necessity, against the development of those pleas into greater proportions.' [The meaning is, that the law, by providing an action for every kind of insult, has made it unnecessary for the aggrieved to resort to extremes in avenging himself. By ἀναγκαῖα πρόφασις he means, for instance, the plea, that a man was insulted and he was obliged to resent it. The law says, 'that obligation must not be pressed too far, so as to justify you in taking very violent revenge.' P.]

ἀνάγκη γάρ... γέγονεν.] The plaintiff, a quiet, common-place soldier, is here on the verge of displaying a familiarity with legal technicalities which would be not only out of keeping with his ordinary character, but would be resented by those of the jury who happened to be less versed in legal learning. The court would be apt to ascribe his acquaintance with the details of the law of defamation, assault, and homicide to that over-litigiousness of character which was as unpopular as it was common, at Athens; or, at the very least, they would put him down as a pedant. Hence Demosthenes introduces a passing apology, explaining that the plaintiff, honest man, owes all his legal lore to the enquiries rendered imperative by the maltreatment he had received from the defendant. Hence, too, the skilful disclaimer of superior knowledge involved in the subsequent phrases: φασί... γίνεσθαι and ἀκούω... εἶναι.

κακῆγορίας δίκαι.] Isocr. κατὰ Λοχίτου (an αἰκίας δίκη like the present case), § 3 (οἱ θέντες ἡμῖν τοὺς νόμους) οὕτω... ἡγήσαντο δεινὸν εἶναι τὸ τύπτειν ἀλλήλους, ὥστε καὶ περὶ κακῆγορίας νόμον ἔθεσαν, ὃς κελεύει τοὺς λέγοντάς τι τῶν ἀπορήτων πεντακοσίας δραχμὰς ὀφείλιν. Cf. Lysias, Or. 10 §§ 6—12, Dem. Or. 23 § 50, Or. 21 § 32.

18. λοιδορούμενοι.] 'reviling one another.' For the reciprocal sense, cf. Or. 54 § 40, ἐχθροὺς ἀλλήλοις ... λοιδορούμενους καὶ πλύνοντας αὐτοὺς τὰ πόρρητα, and Ar. Ranae 857, πρῶτως ἐλεγχ' ἐλέγχου, λοιδορεῖσθαι δ' οὐ θέμις ἀνδρας ποιητὰς ὥσπερ ἀρτοπωλίδας.

As λοιδορεῖσθαι is used in the sense of κακῶς ἀγορεύειν ἀλλήλους, so also λοιδορία sometimes occurs as an equivalent for the precise technical term κακῆγορία. Hence we have in Ar. Vesp. 1207 εἶλον διώκων λοιδορίας (sc. κακῆγορίας) and Athenaeus (xii. 525 B.) quotes from Antiphon ἐν τῷ κατ' Ἀλκιβιάδου λοιδορίας, possibly meaning a speech in a δίκη κακῆγορίας.

αἰκίας] sc. δίκαι, of which the present case is an instance.

For the general sense of the following sentences, cf. Isocr. κατὰ Λοχίτου Or. 20 § 8 πολλάκις ἤδη μικραὶ προφάσεις μεγάλων κακῶν αἰτιαὶ γεγόνασι, καὶ... διὰ τοὺς τύπτειν τολμῶντας εἰς τοῦτ' ἤδη τινὲς ὀργῆς προήχθησαν ὥστ' εἰς τραύματα καὶ θανάτους καὶ φυγὰς καὶ τὰς μεγίστας συμφορὰς ἐλθεῖν.

ἵνα μηδεὶς—μηδενί.] 'to prevent anyone, when he is the weaker party, defending himself with a stone or any similar missile,' e.g. an ὀστρακον, Lysias Or. 4 § 6. See Mahaffy's Society Greece p. 358—360.

τραύματος... γραφαί.] (Lysias) Or. 6 κατ' Ἀνδοκίδου § 15 ἀν τις ἀνδρὸς σῶμα τρώσῃ, κεφαλὴν ἢ πρόσωπον ἢ χεῖρας ἢ πόδας, αὐτὸς κατὰ τοὺς νόμους τοὺς ἐξ Ἀρείου πάγου φεύξεται τὴν ἀδίκηθέντος πόλιν, καὶ ἐὰν κατὴν, ἐνδεχθεὶς θανάτῳ ζημιωθήσεται.

is a very brief defence in a case of 'malicious wounding,' περὶ τραύματος ἐκ προνοίας. The defendant endeavours to prove the absence of πρόνοια ('or malice prepense'), and implores the βουλή (ἡ ἐξ Ἀρείου πάγου) to rescue him from banishment (§§ 6, 12, 20). In Aeschin. Ctesiph. § 51 a τραύματος γραφή instituted by Demosthenes himself is mentioned; and the latter orator (Aristocr. § 24) quotes the law τὴν βουλὴν δικάζειν φόνου καὶ τραύματος ἐκ προνοίας κ.τ.λ.

τοῦ μὴ...φόνους γίγνεσθαι.] One MS (Augustanus primus, cent. XII.) has τῷ μὴ, but the genitive is supported by stronger authority. The genitive of a clause containing an accusative of the subject and an infinitive is often used (especially with μὴ) to denote the object or motive; the dative, the means and instrument or cause (Madvig's Greek Syntax, § 170, and the commentators on Thuc. II. 102; VI. 33; VIII. 87. 3.)

19. τὸ τῆς λοιδορίας κ.τ.λ.] 'the least of these evils, namely, abusive language, has been provided for by the laws, for the avoidance of (πρὸ) &c.'—προεώραται, which may have either a middle or a passive sense, has here almost certainly the latter, especially as we have just had ἐώραμεθα as a passive in § 16. προεώραμαι occurs as passive in Arist. Met. II. 1, and προεωράσθαι as middle in Diod. Sic. XX. 102. Westermann here supplies ὁ νόμος, and thus takes it as a middle; but Dem. in the present passage and its context appears to prefer the plural οἱ νόμοι, though ἐκ τοῦ νόμου occurs four lines back.

20. ἐν μὲν τοῖς νόμοις] reiterates οἱ μὲν γὰρ νόμοι in § 17. ἰθύφαλλοι—ἄγχομεν.] 'we belong to the Priapus-club (§ 34, ἐπειδὴν συλλεγώσι) and in our love-affairs (§ 14) strike and throttle whom we choose.'

εἰλκόμεν—οἴκαδε.] The rhetorician Aristides (Spengel, Rhet. Graeci II. 495) quotes this sentence to exemplify σφοδρότης, or vehemence of style. On ἐξεπεπηδήκει he remarks, οὐκ εἶπεν ἐξεληλύθει, ἀλλὰ ἐμφαντικώτερον τῇ ὀνομασίᾳ, ἐξεπεπηδήκει ἡ μήτηρ· ἐν γὰρ τῷ ὀνόματι ἡ ἐμφασίς.

φοράδην.] ὁ φερόμενος βασταγμῷ (a litter). Hesychius.

τεθνεώτος.] The compound tenses ἀποθνήσκω, ἀποθανοῦμαι, ἀπέθανον (which are frequent in Attic prose and comedy, but are not used in tragedy) have no corresponding perfect, but take instead the simple forms τέθνηκα, τεθνᾶναι, τεθνεώς. ἀποτεθνεώς and the like are never found in Attic verse or prose. (Cobet, nov. lect. 29 and Veitch, Greek verbs.) Cf. Plato, Phaedo 64 A, ἀποθνήσκειν τε καὶ τεθνᾶναι, and 71 C, ἐκ τῶν τεθνεώτων, followed in the very next line by ἐκ τῶν ἀποθανόντων.

§§ 21—23. It is only those who are misled by their youth into acts of outrage that deserve any indulgence, and even in their case, such indulgence ought not to get them off altogether, but should extend simply to mitigation of their penalty. But Conon is more than fifty years of age, and therefore inexcusable; and yet, instead of stopping younger men, and those his sons, from doing wrong, he was the ring-leader of them all.

Even the penalty of death would be too small for his crimes, for the conduct of his sons in their father's presence proves that he himself had no reverence for his own father.

21. δίκαιον μὲν.] The rule of strict justice, stated broadly (ὅλως, 'speaking generally'), as contrasted with the concessions granted in special cases on the principles of equity (or ἐπιείκεια) implied in the next sentence.

τούτοις] repeats the previous dative τοῖς...πράττουσι ('to these, I say'), and is itself emphatically reiterated in the subsequent κακείνοις, referring pointedly to the plaintiff's opponents.

τοῦτον ἐμισεῖτ' ἂν δικαίως.] 'even then you would have abhorred the defendant, and rightly too!' or (with Kennedy) 'even then he would have deserved your execration.'

23. προῆκται.] Perfect passive with middle sense 'has had them brought up' (Liddell and Scott), or simply 'has trained them,' (gezogen hat). This explanation is due to Reiske, and is probably right. But the general sense of προάγω, 'to lead on by little and little'

(§ 18, προάγωνται), may perhaps warrant our understanding it of Conon's permitting his sons to be constantly taking liberties, and going step by step from bad to worse. προῆκται, may in the latter case be rendered 'has spoilt' (verzogen hat, Westermann and G. H. Schaefer), but the two meanings are almost identical, and the general sense the same.

καὶ ταῦτα ἐφ' ὧν — κεῖται.] 'and that too in the case of acts, for some of which the penalty ordained is death' (referring to laws against ὕβρις and περὶ τῶν λωποδυτῶν, cf. § 1 ad fin.). ἐφ' ὧν ἐνίοις stands for ἐπὶ τούτων ὧν ἐνίοις [or, perhaps, καὶ ταῦτα (ἐξαμαρτάνοντας) ἐφ' ὧν ἐνίοις. τὸν περὶ τῶν λωποδυτῶν.] The periphrasis is due to the fact that the crime has no name specially appropriated to it in Attic Greek of the best age (λωποδυσία is found only in a glossary, and λωποδυσιῶν δίκη in the rhetorician Hermogenes, fl. A. D. 170). Cf. § 1, where λωποδυτῶν ἀπαγωγή is parallel to ὕβρεως γράφαί. See Mayor's note on Cicero, Phil. II. § 8.

25. εἰ παθεῖν τί μοι συνέβη.] a common euphemism for death. Or. 23 (Aristocr.) § 59, ἂν ἀρα συμβῇ τι παθεῖν ἐκείνῳ. A frequent formula at the beginning of a Greek will was: ἔσται μὲν εὖ, ἐὰν δέ τι συμβαίῃ, τὰδε διατίθεμαι (Diog. Laert. v. II. 51). Cf. Cicero, Phil. I. § 10, si quid mihi humanitus accideret, and Sheridan's Rivals, v. 3 (just before a duel), Sir Lucius O'Trigger: 'But tell me now, Mr Acres, in case of an accident, is there any little will or commission I could execute for you.' Acres: 'I am much obliged to you, Sir Lucius—but I don't understand.' Sir Lucius: '...If an unlucky bullet should carry a quietus with it, etc.' τῆς Βραυρωνόθεν ἱερείας.] Priestess of Artemis, who was specially worshipped at Brauron, the ancient deme near the western coast of Attica, where Orestes and Iphigenia are said to have landed with the statue of the Taurian goddess. Wordsworth's Athens and Attica c. xxviii. 'The daughter of Agamemnon was brought here, as the legend related [Iph. T. 1461], from the gloomy regions of the Tauric Chersonesus, and placed as a priestess of Diana's temple in this cheerful valley, where she was said to have lived and died; and where her supposed tomb was shown in after ages.' The principal ceremony in the Brauronia, held every five years, was the rite performed by the young girls of Attica, dressed in saffron-coloured attire, who played as bears in honour of the goddess. Ar. Lys. 645 κατ' ἔχουσα τὸν κροκωτὸν ἀρκτος ἡ Βραυρωνίως. Leake's Athens II. 72, and Dict. Ant. s. v. Brauronia.

πατάξαντι τύπτειν.] See Excursus (A) at the end of this speech.

ἐξέβαλεν.] 'banished,' not 'expelled from the Council of the Areopagus.' The latter is Westermann's view, but in this case we should surely have had ἐξέβαλεν ἡ βουλή ἐξ Ἀρείου πάγου. (Cf. A. Schaefer, Dem. u. s. Zeit III. 2, 114 n.)

Ἀρείου πάγου.] The form Ἀρείωπαγος is apparently only found in late inscriptions. (See note on Isocr. Paneg. § 78 καλοῖς κάγαθοῖς).

ἕως ἂν ἀπείπωσιν.] 'till they are tired,' sc. οἱ ἀσελγαίνοντες. Cf. § 27, ἐπειδὴ δ' οὖν ποτ' ἀπέπον. Reiske (index Graec.) is clearly wrong in his rendering deliquerint animis sub verberibus: had the clause referred to the victim, the singular would have been used, to correspond to τῷ περιπίπτοντι.

They then, with an evasive object, put in a challenge, offering to surrender certain slaves to be examined by torture as to the assault, and they will make much of this challenge. But had it been a bona fide offer, it would have been made not at the last moment, but long before.

ἡ δαίτα.] Civil actions at Athens, before being brought into court, were almost invariably referred to arbitration. The Arbitrators (δαιτηταί) were either public and appointed by lot (κληρωτοί), or private and chosen (αἰρετοί) by the parties to the impending suit. In cases brought before a public arbitrator the parties might appeal to a higher Court; whereas the decision of a private arbitrator was final. See esp. Or. 21 (Meid.) § 94 τὸν τῶν δαιτῶν νόμον. The δαίτα here described was of the former kind. (See further Dict. Antiq. s. v. δαίτα and Excursus to Kennedy's Demosth. Leptines &c. p. 395—403.)

λίθον.] The mss have βωμὸν, retained by the Zurich editors (Baiter and Sauppe), but altered into λίθον by Dindorf and Westermann, on the authority of Harpocration, who has the following article: λίθος· Δημοσθένης ἐν τῷ κατὰ Κόνωνος 'τῶν τε παρόντων καθ' ἓνα ἡμῖν οὕτωςι καὶ πρὸς τὸν λίθον ἄγοντες καὶ ἐξορκούντες (sic).' εὐκασί δ' Ἀθηναῖοι πρὸς τινι λίθῳ τοὺς ὄρκους ποιεῖσθαι ὡς Ἀριστοτέλης ἐν τῇ Ἀθηναίων πολιτείᾳ καὶ Φιλόχορος ἐν τῷ γ' ὑπόσμηναίνουσι.

So Hesychius, λίθος· βῶλος, βωμός· καὶ βάσις. Plutarch, Solon 25, ὡμυνεν ὅρκον ἕκαστος τῶν θεσμοθετῶν ἐν ἀγορᾷ πρὸς τῷ λίθῳ.

The word βωμόν was perhaps originally an interlinear or marginal explanation of λίθον, and subsequently thrust the right word from the text.

The διαιτηταὶ might hold their arbitration in any temples, halls or courts available, e.g. in the temple of Hephaestus as in Isocr. Trapez. § 15, ἐλόμενοι δὲ βασανιστὰς ἀπηγγέσαμεν εἰς τὸ Ἡφαιστεῖον. Similarly in Or. 36 § 16 we have seen the temple of Athene on the Acropolis mentioned as the scene of an arbitration. In any case an altar for the administration of oaths would be readily at hand, and it is unnecessary to suppose that in the present passage any special public altar is intended.

ἐξορκίζοντες] Also used in Aeschin. false leg. § 85, ἐξόρκιζον τοὺς συμμάχους, in the same sense as the more common ἐξορκοῦν (for which see Or. 45 § 58).

οὐδὲν πρὸς τὸ πρῶγμα] sc. ὀσσας, 'utterly irrelevant.'—τοῦτο, sc. Ctesias. They brought all sorts of irrelevant depositions, one of which was that Conon's son was illegitimate [and therefore Conon was not legally responsible for his actions; further that he, Ctesias, has undergone certain ill treatment which justified the outrage he committed on Ariston. P.]

δ.] The antecedent is not τὰ καὶ τὰ, but the general sense of the whole of the preceding clauses; 'a course of conduct which, &c.' τελευτῶντες — ἑαυτούς.] sc. ἐπετίμων καὶ ἐμίσουν, 'at last they were indignant at and disgusted with themselves.' The speaker feeling that, by implying that his opponents had had the sense to desist, he has made too much of a concession to them, hurries over his admission, and in the next sentence cuts the matter short by the opening words ἐπειδὴ δ' οὖν i.e. 'whether this was the real reason or no, at any rate when at last they did desist, &c.'

προκαλοῦνται — γράψαντες.] 'with a view to gain time and to prevent the document-cases being sealed up, they put in a challenge, offering to surrender (lit. that they are willing to surrender) certain slaves, whose names they wrote down, to be examined as to the assault.

The πρόκλησις, or challenge, demanding or offering an enquiry into a special 'issue' before an Arbitrator very frequently related to the testimony of slaves presumably cognisant of the matter in dispute. In many cases the challenge would take the form of demanding that the opponent's slaves should be given up to torture (to elicit facts which that opponent was alleged to have concealed or misrepresented) (Dict. Antiq. p. 398 a.) Harpocr. πρόκλησις· ἐλώθεσαν, ὅποτε δικάζοντό τινες, ἐξαιτεῖν ἐνίοτε θεράπαινας ἢ θεράποντας εἰς βάσανον ἢ εἰς μαρτυρίαν τοῦ πράγματος, καὶ τοῦτο ἐκαλεῖτο προκαλεῖσθαι, τὸ δὲ γραμματεῖον τὸ περὶ τούτου γραφόμενον ὠνομάζετο πρόκλησις. (See Or. 45 § 59—62, and Or. 59 § 124—5.)

In the present instance Conon offers to allow certain slaves to be examined. The plaintiff evidently refuses, and this refusal, he says, is sure to be made a strong point against him. He therefore insists that the πρόκλησις in question was a mere ruse to protract the proceedings before the Arbitrator, and that had it been a bona fide offer it would have been made at an earlier date, and with all the proper formalities (§ 27—29).

τοὺς ἐχίνους.] All the legal documents (μαρτυρίαι, προκλήσεις &c.) produced during an arbitration or, indeed, any preliminary examination, e.g. an ἀνάκρισις, were enclosed in one or more caskets, or ἐχίνοι (possibly of a cylindrical shape), which were sealed up and carefully preserved, to be ready in the event of an appeal. See Or. 45 §§ 17 and 57, Or. 39 § 17, and cf. Or. 48 (Olymp.) § 48, τὰς συνθήκας πάλιν σφραγισθαι, τὰ δ' ἀντίγραφα ἐμβαλεῖσθαι εἰς τὸν ἐχίνον.

τῷ δικαίῳ τούτῳ.] 'this plea.' ἤδη διαίτης ἀποφαινομένης.] 'when the award was just being announced.' ἀποφαίνεσθαι, in middle of the διαίτης Dem. Or. 33 (Apat.) § 19, εἰς ὧν (sc. ἀπὸ τῶν συνδιαιτητῶν) ἀποφανέσθαι ἐφη τὴν δαίταν § 20 ἐρήμην κατ' αὐτοῦ ἀπεφάνετο τὴν δαίταν (cf. § 21 τὴν ἀπόφασιν ἐποιήσατο): in passive (as here) of the award itself. Reiske's Index (to which these references are due) is wrong in rendering it as a past tense, sententia iam pronuntiata.

ΜΑΡΤΥΡΙΑ.

30 Περὶ μὲν τοίνυν τῆς βασάνου ταῦτα μέμνησθε,

28. τὸν πρῶτον πατάξαντα.] 'I was pointing out the defendant, to all who came to see me, as the man who struck the first blow.' In a case of assault, the question who struck the first blow would be, of course, important. Or. 47 § 40 βούλομαι τοὺς μάρτυρας παρασχέσθαι οἱ εἰδὼν με πρότερον πληγέντα. ἡ δ' αἰκία τοῦτ' ἔστιν, ὅς ἂν ἀρξῇ χειρῶν ἀδίκων πρότερος. Cf. Or. 23 § 50, Isocr. Or. 20 § 1, Lysias, Or. 4 § 11.

ἔχων μάρτυρας πολλοὺς.] To give full and legal attestation to the πρόκλησις. So also in Or. 45 § 61, and elsewhere, a πρόκλησις is attested by a μαρτυρία.

ἐξ Ἀρείου πάγου τινὰς.] as special witnesses. § 25 εἰ παθεῖν τί μοι συνέβη, φόνον... ἂν ἦν ὑπόδικος. On the jurisdiction of the Areopagus in cases of homicide, see especially §§ 65—70 of the speech against Aristocrates, Or. 23. — By τοῦτο τὸ δίκαιον is meant τὴν πρόκλησιν.

29. προσεκαλεσάμην.] 'I cited, summoned him,' served him with a πρόκλησις, not to be confounded with προεκαλεσάμην, 'I challenged him, put in a πρόκλησις.' One ms (the Augustanus primus) actually has προεκαλεσάμην, — a manifest blunder. — 'If he did not know this serious responsibility, and if having (as he will now tell you) this plea on his side (i. e. the offer of the slave), he took no precautions against such a risk (i. e. of a capital charge for murder), yet at least, when on my recovery I issued a summons against him, in our first meeting before the Arbitrator he would have shewn himself willing to give up the slaves.'

§§ 30—33. He thereupon put in false evidence, alleging that certain witnesses, boon companions of his own, deposed that they found the defendant's son and myself fighting in the market-place and that the defendant did not strike me. On my own part, I produce the evidence of strangers who came up by accident, attesting that they saw me struck by the defendant. What motive could these strangers have had for giving, 'false evidence' on my side?

30. ὧν ἕνεκ' ἐκκρούων ταῦτ' ἐποίει.] As delay and evasion were the object (ὧν ἕνεκα) of the defendant's conduct (§ 27 ἐπὶ διακρούσει and § 29 διακρούσεως ἕνεκα), we may at first sight suspect (with Westermann) that ἐκκρούων is an interpolation; it may, however, be defended on the ground that it enables the speaker to reiterate emphatically the real motive of his opponent, — 'his purpose, his evasive purpose, in so doing.' In this view, we may, if we please, punctuate the passage thus: ὧν ἕνεκα, ἐκκρούων, ταῦτ' ἐποίει. Cf. fals. leg. § 144, ἐκκρούσας εἰς τὴν ὑστεράαν, and see Or. 36 § 2 and Or. 45 § 4.

ἀξιώσας.] sc. τὸ δίκαιον γενέσθαι, 'to have claimed to have this plea allowed him,' i.e. the plea founded on his appeal to the evidence of his slaves.

ἡλέγχετο.] The construction is, οὗτος ἡλέγχετο ταῦτα πάντα πρὸς τῷ διαιτητῇ ἅπερ (accusative) νῦν παρ' ὑμῖν ἐλέγχεται. Thus the nominative to ἡλέγχετο is the same as that of ἐδείκνυτο in the next clause, and no change of construction is requisite.

πᾶσι.] not masc., but to be taken with τοῖς ἐγκεκλημένοις.

31. ἐμβάλλεται.] sc. εἰς τὸν ἔχινον (§ 27), Or. 49 § 65, ἐμβαλομένου ἐμοῦ δοκῶν εἰς τὸν ἔχινον. Trans. 'puts in a false deposition endorsed with names which, I take it, you will recognize, when you hear them.'

ἐπιγράφεται.] Or. 53 § 14, κλητῆρα ἐπιγράφεται. The phrase hardly means 'to give in one's list of witnesses' (L and S), but rather 'to have their names inscribed as witnesses.' ἐπιγράφεται, it will be noticed, is previous in order of time to ἐμβάλλεται. This ὑστερον πρότερον enables the speaker to lead up more easily to the mention of the names of the witnesses.

Westermann draws attention to the following μαρτυρία as indisputably authentic, and therefore serving as a standard by which others purporting to be original depositions may be tested. (See note on Or. 35 (Lacr.) § 10.)

Ἰκαριεύς... Ἀλαιεύς... Πιπθεὺς.] The names of the corresponding demes are (1) Ἰκαρία, belonging to the tribe Aegeis, and placed by Leake ‘in the south part of Diacria, not far from the Marathonian district:’ (2) Ἀλαι, a name common to two sea-coast demes, the first Ἀλαι Αἰξωνίδες of the tribe Cecropis S.W. of Athens and N.W. of Cape Zoster; the second Ἀλαι Ἀραφηνίδες of the tribe Aegeis on the east coast of Attica near Brauron: and (3) Πίθος, of the tribe Cecropis placed by Bursian N.E. of Athens, near the southern spurs of Brilessus. The spelling Πιπθεὺς is found in the Paris ms Σ, instead of Πιπθεὺς of other mss. The latter is recognised by Harpocr. s. v. Πιπθεὺς: δῆμος τῆς Κεκροπίδος ἢ Πιπθός (sic). (Leake’s Athens, and Bursian Geogr. i. 345, quoted by Westermann).—For Ἀρχεβιάδης see note on § 34.

μὴ πατάξαι Κόνωνα Ἀρίστωνα.]

The sense shews that Conon is the subject, Ariston the object. The order of the words is, in itself, inconclusive. In ὥς—πιστεύουσας we have the accusative absolute of the participle, used with ὥς, as often with ὥσπερ (quasi vero).

32. εἰ] is constructed with ἠθέλησαν, five lines distant.

Νικήρατος.] possibly the Niceratus to whom Demosthenes pathetically refers in Or. 21 (Meid.) § 165, Νικήρατος ὁ τοῦ Νικίου ἀγαπητὸς παῖς, ὁ παντάπασιν ἀσθενὴς τῷ σώματι. If so, he would be a great-grandson of the Nicias, who commanded in the Sicilian expedition.

θοιμάτιον ἐκδύμενον.] Lysias Or. 10 § 40 (with reference to the term λωποδύτης) εἰ τις ἀπάγοι τινὰ φάσκων θοιμάτιον ἀποδεύσθαι ἢ τὸν χιτωνίσκον ἐκδεύσθαι, where θοιμάτιον (as here) and χιτωνίσκον are the object and not the subject.

τὰ ψευδῆ.] Cf. Or. 45 § 2

σαν, εἰ μὴ ταύθ' ἑώρων πεπονθότα· ἔπειτ' αὐτὸς ἐγὼ οὐδέποτ' ἂν, μὴ παθὼν ὑπὸ τούτου ταύτ', ἀφείς τοὺς καὶ παρ' αὐτῶν τούτων ὁμολογουμένους τύπτειν ἐμὲ πρὸς τὸν οὐδ' ἀψάμενον πρῶτον εἰσιέναι προειλόμην.

- 33 τί γὰρ ἂν; ἀλλ' ὑφ' οὗ γε πρῶτον ἐπλήγην καὶ μάλισθ' ὑβρίσθην, τούτῳ καὶ δικάζομαι καὶ μισῶ καὶ ἐπεξέρχομαι. καὶ τὰ μὲν παρ' ἐμοῦ πάνθ' οὕτως ἐστὶν ἀληθῆ καὶ φαίνεται· τούτῳ δὲ μὴ παρασχομένῳ τούτους μάρτυρας ἦν δήπου λόγος οὐδεὶς, ἀλλ' ἡλωκέναι παραχρήμα ὑπῆρχε σιωπῇ. συμπόται δ' ὄντες τούτου καὶ πολλῶν τοιούτων ἔργων κοινωνοὶ εἰκότως τὰ ψευδῆ μεμαρτυρήκασιν. εἰ δ' ἔσται τὸ πρᾶγμα τοιούτον, ^α ἐὰν

^α 'Reiskius, (ὦστ') ἐὰν ἀπαξ—οὐδὲν εἶναι τῆς ἀληθ. Hoc quidem specieose, sed illud non puto necesse.' Dobree.

'if they had not actually seen the assault, they would never have consented to give false evidence,' i.e. evidence which, on that supposition, would have been false, τὰ ψευδῆ ἂν ὄντα εἰ μὴ ταύθ' ἑώρων.

ἔπειτ' αὐτὸς ἐγὼ] refers to ὅτι πρῶτον μὲν (οἱ μάρτυρες) and still subordinate to the distant ὅτι.

πρῶτον.] adverb, to be taken with εἰσιέναι, contrasted with ὑφ' οὗ πρῶτον ἐπλήγην. 'I prosecute first the man who struck me first of all the assailants.' This seems better than to take it with ἀψάμενον, 'him who did not even touch me first.'

εἰσιέναι.] eis τὸ δικάσθην. See note on Or. 45 §7. Reiske's index shows that this verb is used in Dem. of either litigant or both, or again of the cause itself, or even with δικήν or γραφὴν as accusative after it.

33. τί γὰρ ἂν;] 'Why should I?' The mss have the interpolation, ἡ διὰ τί; probably a mere explanation of τί; as equivalent to διὰ τί; δικάζομαι ... μισῶ ... ἐπεξέρχομαι.] 'Sue...abhor...prosecute (visit with vengeance)', 'he it is whom I sue and prosecute as my enemy.' The collocation of μισῶ, expressive of inward feeling, between δικάζομαι and ἐπεξέρχομαι, indicating outward acts, is curious. The latter word is probably immediately suggested by μισῶ 'not only do I hate him in my heart, but I carry out that hatred to its practical issue by prosecuting him.'

φαίνεται] sc. ἀληθῆ ὄντα, not 'appears,' but 'is proved to be,' 'is clearly true.'—μὴ παρασχομένος=εἰ μὴ παρέσχετο.

εἰκότως.] to be taken with τὰ ψευδῆ μεμαρτυρήκασιν, not with κοινωνοί.

εἰ δ' ἔσται κ.τ.λ.] 'If it comes to such a pass, if once certain persons are lost to all sense of shame and openly dare to give false evidence, and (consequently) truth has no advantage, it will be an atrocious state of things.' The simple construction would have been ἅπαξ ἀπαναισχυντήσωσί τινες καὶ τὰ ψευδῇ φανερῶς as follows: ἐὰν δὲ ἅπαξ ἀπαναισχυντήσωσί τινες καὶ τὰ ψευδῇ φανερῶς τολμήσωσι μαρτυρεῖν, οὐδὲν ἔσται τῆς ἀληθείας ὄφελος.

εἰ δὲ ἔσται τὸ πρᾶγμα τοιοῦτον, πάνδεινον ἔσται.

As it is, Demosthenes, by writing τοιοῦτον in the early part of the sentence, leads us to expect ὥστε, which however never comes; we have instead, the clause ἐὰν, κ.τ.λ., exegetical of τοιοῦτον; again οὐδὲν τῆς ἀληθείας ὄφελος is in sense the apodosis of ἐὰν...τὰ ψευδῇ τολμήσωσι μαρτυρεῖν, but in construction is made part of the protasis. πάνδεινον ἔσται πρᾶγμα is left to do duty as an apodosis and πρᾶγμα is necessarily repeated owing to the long interval that separates the apodosis from τὸ πρᾶγμα in the protasis.

For εἰ—οὐδὲν, see note on Or. 34 § 48.

ἀπαναισχυντήσωσι] used of unblushing effrontery. Cf. ἀπαυθαδίεσθαι. Or. 29 § 20, τὸ μὲν πρῶτον ἀπηναισχύντει, τοῦ δὲ δαιτητοῦ κελεύοντος μαρτυρεῖν ἢ ἐξομνῆν, ἐμαρτύρησε πάννυ μόλις.

34. ἀλλὰ νῆ Δία] used, as often, like at enim, to introduce emphatically an anticipated rejoinder on the part of the opponents. 'Oh but, good heavens! they are not such characters as I make them out.'
The phrase may be seen in its fullest form in Or. 20 § 3 ἀλλὰ νῆ Δί' ἐκείνο ἀν' ἴσως εἴποι πρὸς ταῦτα.

§§ 34—37. Many of you know the characters of the witnesses for the defence,—men who,
in the daytime, affect an austerity which is very inconsistent with their conduct when they meet together. They will unscrupulously contradict the evidence on our side, but you will remember that I rely on medical witnesses, whereas my opponents have no independent testimony, and, but for themselves, could get no evidence at all against me. People who break into houses, and assault persons in the streets, would surely have no scruple about putting down false evidence on a paltry piece of paper.

34. Ἀρχεβιάδην.] This worthy, who has already been mentioned among the witnesses in §§ 7 and 31, and must not be confounded with the still less known Ἀρχεβιάδης ὁ Λαμπρεὺς (Or. 52 § 3), was evidently quite a 'character,' judging from Plu-tarch's description of him as 'a man of sour countenance who always wore a coarse cloak and had grown a prodigious beard.' Phocion. x init. ἦν δὲ contains several points of coincidence with the passage be-ἐσκυθρωπάκασι] i.e. 'assume τρίβωνας.] Sometimes mentioned as characteristic of Laconians. Plutarch Nicias 19:

speech proper that was reckoned in the allowance of time measured by the water-clock. Or. 36 ends with the words ἐξέρα τὸ ὕδωρ 'pour out the water,' implying that the orator had found it unnecessary to avail himself of the full allowance of time. The Orators frequently use ὕδωρ in the sense of 'time allotted' for a speech, e.g. ἐν τῷ ἐμῷ ὕδατι ἐν μικρῷ μέρει τοῦ παντὸς ὕδατος. So Or. 42 fin. πρὸς ὀλίγον ὕδωρ ἀναγκαζόμενος λέγω. Cf. §§ 38—41. I must warn you that Conon will try to impose upon you by swearing by the lives of his own sons and by other strange imprecations. His recklessness about oaths is proved by what I have heard of the profanity of his youthful days; and surely Conon who would think nothing of perjury is not to be credited in comparison with myself, who, so far from swearing by the lives of my children, would not swear at all except under compulsion, and even then, only in a lawful manner. Such an oath I was willing to take for the truth's sake; and, in self-defence against the perjury of my opponent, I challenged him to accept my offer to take the oath, and I now solemnly swear that Conon whom I now proseκατὰ τούτων ὁμείσθαι] 'to swear by them,—by their lives.' κατὰ implies the basis on which the oath rests [or, rather, hostile action directed against the object sworn by. So in *Ar. We find a curious parallel in a charge made as follows against Demosthenes himself by Deinarchus, Or. 1 § 71, ποῦ τοῦτ' ἐστὶ δίκαιον...τοὺς μὲν νόμους προλέγειν...παιδοποιεῖσθαι κατὰ τοὺς νόμους...σὲ δὲ τοὺς οὐ γεγενημένους νιεῖς σταντῶ προσποιεῖσθαι παρὰ τοὺς νόμους τῶν ἐν ταῖς κρίσεσιν ἕνεκα γιγνομένων ὄρκων.

38. παραστησάμενον τοὺς παῖδας.] The practice of exciting the compassion of the jury by bringing the children into court is often referred to, e.g. Or. 21 § 99, παῖδια γὰρ παραστήσεται καὶ κλαῖσει καὶ τούτοις αὐτὸν ἐξαγῆσεται, and Hyperides Euxenipp. ad fin. ἐγὼ μὲν οὖν σοὶ Εὐξένιππε βεβοήθηκα ὅσα εἶχον. λοιπὸν δ' ἐστὶ δέισθαι τῶν δικαστῶν καὶ τοὺς φίλους παρακαλεῖν καὶ τὰ παῖδια ἀναβιβάζεσθαι, (see especially Aristophanes' ridicule of the custom in Vespae 568—74 and 976—8). But in the present case a still more sensational effect is to be produced by Conon's laying his hands upon his children's heads and praying that the direst curses may come down upon them, if his statements are false.

ἀνυπόστατα] not exactly 'intolerable' but 'irresistible,' 'impossible to withstand.' The most upright of men and those who are least likely to tell a falsehood themselves (the jury for instance) are most likely to be deceived by such asseverations (ὕπὸ τῶν τοιούτων sc. τολμημάτων).

τὰ Ἑκαταῖα.] Once every month, at the time of the new moon, dishes of food were set out for Hecate in the evening at the places where three roads met; and the food thus offered was not unfrequently eaten by poor people. Cf. Arist. Plutus, 594—7, παρὰ τῆς Ἑκάτης ἔξεστιν τοῦτο πυθέσθαι | εἰτε το πλουτεῖν εἰτε τὸ πεινῆν βέλτιον. φησὶ γὰρ αὕτη | τοὺς μὲν ἔχοντας καὶ πλουτοῦντας δεῖ πρὸν κατὰ μὴν' ἀποπέμπειν, τοὺς δὲ πένητας τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἀρπάζειν πρὶν καταθῆναι (with the Scholía). [Juvenal v. 85, 'exigua feralis cena patella,' Psalm cvi. 28, 'they ate the offerings of the dead.' This act, and the eating of the καθάρματα, which had a mystical import, are cited as instances of impious bravado in things sacred, which augured ill for Conon's paying any regard to the obligations of a solemn oath. Hemsterhuis in an exhaustive note on the above passage (Vol. II. p. 397—400 ed. Bipont.) also quotes Plutarch II. p. 290 D, (the dog) χθονία δεῖπνον Ἐκάτῃ πεμπόμενος εἰς τριόδους ἀποτροπαίων καὶ καθαρσίων ἐπέχει μοῖραν, Quæst. Rom. p. 280 B, Symp. VII. p. 708 F. We may add Charicleides cited by Athenæus VII. 325, δέσποινα Ἐκάτῃ, τριοδίτι, τριμορφε, τριπρόσωπε, τρίγλαις (mullet) κηλευμένα.

After the word Ἐκαταῖα some of the mss (including Σ) have κατακαλεῖν, 'to burn up,' which is not likely to be the right reading; others (e. g. Augustanus primus) have κατεσθλεῖν, which makes good sense and is commonly accepted (e. g. by Dindorf). Of Reiske's conjectures (κατ' ἀγνίας and καταπνέειν) neither can be considered probable. Baiter leaves out the verb, thus making συλλέγοντας govern Ἐκαταῖα as well as ὄρνεις. Westermann suggests κλέπτειν but follows Baiter. κατακαλεῖν may perhaps be accounted for by supposing that Ἐκαταῖα or καταῖα was erroneously written twice by an early copyist; a subsequent copyist might alter this into the nearest verb he could think of, κατακαλεῖν; this would be seen to be wrong by a still later writer, who would substitute the intelligible word κατεσθλεῖν.

τοὺς ὄρνεις τοὺς ἐκ τῶν χοίρων.] The mss have τὰς ὄρνεις (or ὄρνις) τὰς ἐκ τῶν χωρῶν (or χορῶν) als. But birds are out of place in an expiatory sacrifice prior to a public assembly, and the use of young pigs for this purpose is distinctly attested by ancient authorities; we must therefore accept the certain emendation given in the text, and originally proposed by Hemsterhuis (in his note on Lucian above referred to).

40. οὐ δὴ...οὐδὲ πολλοῦ δεῖ.] Here, as usual in this phrase, οὐδὲ reiterates the preceding negation (οὐ δὴ) but does not negative πολλοῦ δεῖ although closely pronounced with it. (Cf. fals. leg. § 33 οὐ γὰρ...τὰ πράγματ' ἐστὶ φαῦλα...οὐδὲ πολλοῦ δεῖ, with Shilleto's note.) We have an apparent exception to this rule in Or. 18 § 20 φανήσεται γὰρ οὐδὲ πολλοῦ δεῖ τῆς γενησομένης ἀξίον αἰσχύνῃς, where there is no preceding negative expressed. The exception may however be explained on the supposition that φανήσεται is ironical and therefore implies a negative: οὐ γὰρ φανήσεται τῆς γενησομένης ἀξίον αἰσχύνῃς, οὐδὲ πολλοῦ δεῖ.

οὐ δὴ κ.τ.λ.] A very elegant and idiomatic passage: 'Conon then, as a character such as I have described, is not to be trusted on oath; far from it, indeed. No! the man who would not take even an oath that he intends to observe by any object you do not recognise (i.e. such as Conon swears by) and would not for a moment think of doing so on the lives of his children, but would rather suffer anything than that,—and who, even when constrained, will take none but a customary oath,—I say, such a man is more to be trusted than one who swears by his

ὁ μὴδ'—μελλήσας. The mss have ὁ μὴδ' εὖορκον μὴδὲν ἂν ὁμόσας, κατὰ δὲ δὴ παίδων, ὦν μὴ νομίζετε, μὴδ' ἂν μελλήσας. There are two objections to this, (i) the plaintiff describes himself as one who is 'reluctant to swear even to the truth' whereas in § 41 he publicly swears to having been assaulted by the defendant, (ii) an oath by the lives of one's children is described as 'contrary to usage' ὦν μὴ νομίζετε, whereas this very oath is elsewhere attributed to the mother of Demosthenes. Or. 29 §§ 26, 33, 54, 56 ἡ μήτηρ κατ' ἐμοῦ καὶ τῆς ἀδελφῆς...πιστὶν ἠθέλησεν ἐπιθεῖναι...ἦν μὴδεὶς ὑμῶν νομίζετω καθ' ἡμῶν ποτ' ἂν ὁμνύναι ταῦτ' ἂν ἐθέλειν, εἰ μὴ σαφῶς ἦδει τὰ εὖορκα ὁμονύμην. Or. 19 § 292.

We may therefore accept Sauppe's conjecture ὁ μὴδ' εὖορκον μὴδὲν ἂν ὁμόσας ὦν μὴ νομίζετε, κατὰ δὲ δὴ παίδων μὴδ' ἂν μελλήσας.

If an easier alteration is preferred, we may retain the order as it stands in the mss, simply inserting μὴδὲν after ὦν μὴ νομίζετε, and accounting for its loss by its similarity to the subsequent μὴδ' ἂν. The sentence would then run thus: ὁ μὴδ' εὖορκον μὴδὲν ἂν ὁμόσας, κατὰ δὲ δὴ παίδων, ὦν μὴ νομίζετε μὴδὲν μὴδ' ἂν μελλήσας. Thus ὦν μὴ νομίζετε depends on μὴδὲν παιδων μηδ' ἂν μελλήσας, ἀλλὰ κἂν ὅτιοῦν παθὼν πρότερον, εἰ δ' ἀναγκαῖον, ὁμνύων ὡς νόμιμον, ἀξιοπιστότερος τοῦ κατὰ τῶν παιδων ὁμνύοντος καὶ διὰ τοῦ πυρός. ἐγὼ τοίνυν ὁ δικαιοτέρων σου πιστευθεὶς ἂν κατὰ πάντα, ὦ Κόνων, ἡθέλησα ὁμόσαι ταυτὶ, οὐχ and does not refer to παιδων, the sense of the second clause being that Ariston would never dream of taking any such oath, by his children's lives, as would be contrary to general usage. Below, he describes himself as ὁμνύων ὡς νόμιμον. This conjecture (as well as Sauppe's) has been anticipated by Dobree.

μηδ' εὐορκον.] Isocr. ad Dem. § 23 ἔνεκα δὲ χρημάτων μηδένα θεῶν ὁμόσης, μηδ' ἂν εὐορκεῖν μέλλης.

κἂν ὅτιοῦν παθὼν πρότερον.] 'Would submit to anything sooner than that,' i.e. rather than swear by an oath contrary to the country's use, or by the lives of his children.

The whole sentence is intended to be descriptive of the character of a man who has a solemn regard for the obligations of an oath; hence the use of μή. A person of such a character, says the plaintiff, is more trustworthy than one who is ready to taken any oath you please. The characters contrasted are of course those of the plaintiff and defendant respectively, but this is only implied until we reach the next sentence ἐγὼ...ὁ δικαιοτέρων σου πιστευθεὶς ἂν, when the contrast is brought home to the case at issue.

καὶ διὰ τοῦ πυρός.] It is doubtful whether we can explain this of any ordeal by fire like that referred to in Soph. Antig. 264, (ἦμεν δ' ἔταιμοι καὶ μύδρους αἰρεῖν χερσίν, καὶ πῦρ διέρπειν καὶ θεοὺς ὀρκωμοτεῖν), and possibly implied in Ar. Lysistr. 133, ἀλλ' ἀλλ' ὅ τι βούλει, κἂν με χρῆ, διὰ τοῦ πυρός ἐθέλω βαδίζω, which however may be only a strong metaphor expressive of readiness to endure any amount of torture. Sometimes διὰ πυρός is used of 'braving the extremest perils,' 'going through fire and water' as in Xen. Symp. iv. 16, ἔγωγ' οὖν μετὰ Κλευίου κἂν διὰ πυρός Ιοίην and Oec. xxi. 7, ἀκολουθητέον.. καὶ διὰ πυρός καὶ διὰ παντὸς κινδύνου (L. and S., s. v. πῦρ).

In the present passage διὰ τοῦ πυρός possibly contains an allusion to some strange form of self-devotion, one of the ἀραι δειναὶ καὶ χαλεπαὶ obscurely hinted at in § 38. G. H. Schaefer simply says 'vertam, vel dum ara ardet,' i.e. 'one who swears by his children even while the flame is burning on the altar,' and C. R. Kennedy renders the words 'and before the burning altar.'

This is hardly satisfactory, and it is not improbable that the text is corrupt and that we should read καὶ διὰ τοῦ πυρός ἰόντος, where the participle would easily have been lost by homoeoteleuton with ὁμνόντος.

πιστευθεὶς ἂν.] See on § 1 ad fin. For the passive, formed just as if the active were directly transitive, and took the accusative, cf. § 5 παροινουμένους and § 2 παρανομῆσθαι.

general drift of this oath must have been given by the πρόκλησις which was read to the jury; it is also indicated in the asseverations of § 41.

It is clear that this Challenge was refused by the defendant. The plaintiff would therefore be able to point to this refusal as a fact in his own favour just as the defendant would in the case of the πρόκλησις tendered by him and rejected by the plaintiff (§ 27).—In the next line καὶ emphasizes ἰδιού.

EXCURSUS (A).

On the defective verb τύπτω (§§ 4, 25, 32, 35, &c.).

The verb τύπτω forms a familiar paradigm in almost all the elementary Greek Grammars in ordinary use, where, as every schoolboy knows, it is conjugated at full length with its three perfect tenses, its five futures, and its six aorists; and it must be admitted that for the purposes of a paradigm the verb in question is in several respects admirably adapted. Had the selection fallen on a verb ending in -ω with a vowel for the last letter of its stem, e.g. λύ-ω, or τιμά-ω, our model verb would have had one aorist only in each voice, ἔλυσα, ἔλυσάμην, ἐλίθην; ἐτίμησα, ἐτιμησάμην, ἐτιμήθην; had a verbum primum ending in -μι been taken, e.g. φη-μί, δίδω-μι, ἴσθη-μι, the beginner would have had to face a very complex conjugation at the very outset of his task. τύπτω is unencumbered with the special irregularities of verbs ending in -μι, and has the advantage of two theoretically possible aorists in each voice; indeed, as Veitch has pointed out, it is 'one of the very few verbs that have the second aorist active and passive in actual use,' (though the former is very rare, while in Attic prose neither is ever found). Again, as compared with some other verba impura, with a consonant for their characteristic letter, it has this advantage; that the stem-vowel remains unchanged throughout, and is thus identical in, for instance, the aorist and present participle alike (τυπ-εῖς and τύπ-τ-ων), whereas in λείπω, φαίνω, τήκω as compared with ἔ-λιπ-ον, ἐ-φάν-ην, ἐ-τάκ-ην, the stem-vowels which appear in the aorist have suffered modification in the present; also the consonantal relations between the different tenses are simpler than in the case of some other verbs; thus, while β in ἐ-βλάβ-ην becomes π in βλάπ-τ-ω, no such alteration is necessary in passing from the -τυπ- of the second aorist to the strengthened form τυπτ- of the present.

The verb is not without an interest of its own in the history of grammar; and though it may be rash to conjecture whether it owed its first selection to the grim humour of some plagosus Orbilius of old times, intent on bringing each tense's meaning home to his pupils' memories by the help of his ferule, it may be interesting to note that this particular paradigm is found in the early Greek Grammars which appeared in Italy at the revival of learning, as for instance in the Erotemata of Chrysoloras, a distinguished scholar, who (in the dedication of a copy in my possession, printed at Venice at the Aldine press in 1517) is described as *Manuel Chrysoloras, qui primus Iuniorum reportavit in Italiā literas græcas. The paradigm may also be traced still further back to the Canons of Theodosius, an Alexandrine grammarian of the age of Constantine the Great, who expounds all the parts, regardless of usage, and at considerable length (viz. on pp. 1008—1044 of Θεοδοσίου γραμματικῷ εἰσαγωγικοὶ κανόνες περὶ κλίσεως ῥημάτων in Bekker's Anecdota Græca, vol. III.) The Grammar of Theodosius is in its turn founded on that of a more celebrated Greek scholar, Dionysius the Thracian, who taught at Rome in B.C. 80. The τέχνη γραμματικὴ of the latter is a short work, occupying only pp. 629—643 in Bekker's Anecdota Græca, vol. II.; it was a standard text-book for many centuries and is the original basis of all subsequent grammars. I quote a few words from chap. xv, which bear on our present subject: διαθέσεις δὲ εἰσι τρεῖς, ἐνέργεια, πάθος, μεσότης· ἐνέργεια μὲν οἷον τύπτω, πάθος δὲ οἷον τύπτομαι, μεσότης δὲ ἢ ποτὲ μὲν ἐνέργειαν, ποτὲ δὲ πάθος παριστῶσα, οἷον πέποιθα, διέφθορα, ἐποίησάμην, ἐγραψάμην*. Shortly after, he proceeds: ἀριθμοὶ δὲ τρεῖς, ἐνικός, δυϊκὸς καὶ πληθυντικός· ἐνικός μὲν οἷον τύπτω, δυϊκὸς δὲ οἷον τύπτετον, πληθυντικός δὲ οἷον τύπτομεν· πρόσωπα δὲ τρία, πρῶτον, δεύτερον, τρίτον· πρῶτον μὲν οἷον τύπτω, δεύτερον οἷον τύπτεις, τρίτον οἷον τύπτει.

* On Chrysoloras, see Mullinger's History of the University of Cambridge, pp. 391—396, where the Erotemata is called 'the

But however well this verb may be adapted as a typical form for the beginner, and however interesting it may be as a tradition of the earlier grammarians, it cannot be too clearly understood that very few of the tenses are really used by the best Greek authors. The tenses given in the paradigm are all formed regularly on the principles of analogy alone, regardless of the opposite principles of anomaly which prevail in the usage of the Greek writers themselves. In Attic Prose none of the tenses given in the grammars are found except the present and imperfect, active and passive, τύπτω and ἐτυπτον, τύπτομαι and ἐτυπτόμην. The future active is not τύψω but τυπτήσω, and the aorists in use are borrowed from other verbs, and are really ἐπάταξα and ἐπλήγην. ἐτυψα is never found in Attic Prose, and the reference to Lysias, fragment 10, 2, given in Veitch's Greek Verbs, and repeated, apparently without verification, in Liddell and Scott's Lexicon, supplies us with no real exception. The passage, when examined, proves to be part of an exposition by the late rhetorician Theon (Progymnasmata 2 p. 165) of a possibly genuine speech of Lysias. The words are ἐγκύμονά τις ἐτυψε κατὰ γαστρὸς καὶ κρίνεται φόνου, where Lysias himself would undoubtedly have written ἐπάταξεν, as is proved by a passage in Or. 13 § 71, ὁ Θρασύβουλος τύπτει τὸν Φρύνιχον καὶ καταβάλλει πατάξας. The following passages will further illustrate the prose usage of this defective verb, Lysias, Or. 4 § 15, πότερον ἐπλήγην ἢ ἐπάταξα; id. Or. 1 §§ 25—27, where πάταξας καταβάλλω is followed by the corresponding passive forms πληγὴς κατέπεσεν, Dem. Or. 4 § 40, ὁ πληγὴς κἂν ἐτέρωσε πατάξῃς, Thuc. VIII. 92, ὁ Φρύνιχος πληγὴς followed by ὁ πατάξας διέφυγεν. Again in Plato's Laios, p. 879 D—E, we have τύπτοντα and τύπτειν followed by πατάξαι, and soon after, τύπτει τῇ μάστιγι followed by ὅσας ἂν αὐτὸς πατάξῃ: so in p. 880 B, εἰάν τις τύπτῃ τὸν πρεσβύτερον...τῇ τοῦ πληγέντος ἡλικίᾳ, and in p. 882 the last two forms occur twice over. Cf. Aristot. Eth. v. 4. 4, ὅταν ὁ μὲν πληγῇ ὁ δὲ πατάξῃ.

Greek Grammar of the first century of the Renaissance.' 'It served Reuchlin for a model at Orleans, was used by Linacre at Oxford and Erasmus at Cambridge, and long continued to hold its ground against formidable rivals,' p. 395. The date of his arrival in Italy was 1396. The Aldine edition above referred to is of course a reprint.

* It is quoted ἐνυψάμην in Graefenhan, Geschichte der Classischen Philologie, II. p. 481, q. v.; but Dionysius appears in the rest of the chapter to confine himself to tenses in actual use and is therefore likely to have avoided ἐνυψάμην.

ὁμοία καὶ εἰ ἰσχυρὸς ἀσθενῇ πατάξει ἢ πληγῆναι προκαλέσαιτο, Eth. v. 5. 4, εἰ ἀρχὴν ἔχων ἐπάταξεν, οὐ δεῖ ἀντιπληγῆναι, καὶ εἰ ἄρχοντα ἐπάταξεν, οὐ πληγῆναι μόνον δεῖ ἀλλὰ καὶ κολασθῆναι. Rhet. i. 15, 29, πατάξει ἢ πληγῆναι, de anima B, 8, p. 419 b 15, τὸ τύπτειν καὶ τὸ τυπτόμενον... ἂν πληγῇ, p. 420 a 24, οὐ δὲ πᾶν φοβεῖ τυπτόμενον καὶ τύπτειν, οἷον ἐὰν πατάξῃ βελόνῃ βελόνην, p. 423 b 16, πληγείσα ἐπάταξεν, Soph. Elench. p. 168 a 6 ἂν τις τύπτῃ τοῦτον καὶ τοῦτον, ἄνθρωπον ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀνθρώπους τυπτήσῃ, and Meteorologica, p. 368 a 18, τύπτων...τύπτειν...τύπτεται, p. 371 b 10, ἣ μέλλει πατάξαι, κινεῖται πρὶν πληγῆναι, while three lines below we find ὁ ἐὰν πατάξῃ.—Among other parts similarly borrowed we have πέπληγα, πέπληγμα, πεπλήξομαι and πληγήσομαι.—So in Latin, ferio, percussī, etc.

But one of the best studies on this point of usage is the Speech of Demosthenes κατὰ Κόνωνος, where we find the following forms; in § 81 τύπτειν, in § 17 τύπτων, in § 4 ἐτυπτον, in §§ 32 and 35 τυπτόμενον, with the verbal τυπτητός in § 44. Again in § 31 we have πατάξαι (not τύψαι or πλῆξαι), and in § 33 ἐπλήγην (not ἐπατάχθην, or ἐτύπην, much less ἐτύφθην). Further in § 25 πατάξαντι stands side by side with τύπτειν; and lastly we have the phrases πληγὰς ἐνέτειναν (§ 5) and εἰληφέναι καὶ δεδωκέναι πληγὰς (§ 14), which assist in making up for the defective tenses. It is reserved for the late writer who composed the Argument to use the unclassical form τετυπτήσθαι.

For the usage of this verb in Attic Verse, see Veitch's excellent book on Greek Verbs, where it will be noticed that almost the only part used besides those found in Prose is τυπεῖς; the student should also read the interesting criticisms of Cobet in pp. 330—343 of his Variae lectiones.

EXCURSUS (B).

On the quantity of ἔμπνος (Or. 54 § 12).

In Soph. Phil. 1378, the phrase ἔμπνος βάσις is used with reference to the festering foot of Philoctetes, but the position of the words, at the end of an iambic line, leaves the quantity undetermined. This may however be ascertained (i) by the accent of the word from which it is derived, viz. πύον, which according to the express statement of the grammarian Arcadius should never be written πῦον; (ii) by the fact that Empedocles makes the first syllable of πύον short. We may further notice that the adjective and its derivatives occur (as might be expected) not unfrequently in Hippocrates and the medical writers; and that one of these, Galen (lib. xiii. p. 876), quotes in full an Elegiac poem in which Andromachus the elder, in describing the virtues of his potent antidote, or θηριακή δι' ἐχιδνῶν, has the following couplet, which determines the quantity of the word:

καὶ μογερῶν στέρνων ἀπολύσεται ἔμπνον ἰλύν πινομένη πολλοὺς μέχρις ἐπ' ἡελίους.

Hence we conclude that the lexicons of Liddell and Scott, and of Dr Pape (in their latest editions), are unwarranted in marking the penultimate as long;—an oversight which does not occur in the fourth edition of the former lexicon, and is doubtless due to a confusion between the quantities of τὸ πῦον, the Latin pūs, and ὁ πῦός, the Lat. colostra (or beestings).

EXCURSUS (C).

On the meaning of ἀντολήκυθος (Or. 54 § 14).

The exact meaning of this word is difficult to determine, and the Grammarians content themselves with giving us a wide choice of conflicting explanations. Harpocration, for instance, has the following article.

Αὐτολήκυθοι: Δημοσθένης κατὰ Κόνωνος, (1) ἥτοι ἀντὶ τοῦ εὐζώνους τινὰς καὶ ἐτοίμους πᾶν ὅτιοῦν ποιεῖν καὶ ὑπομένειν, (2) ἢ ἀντὶ τοῦ πένητος καὶ μηδὲν ἄλλο κεκτημένους ἢ ληκύθους, (3) ἢ αὐτουργούς, (4) ἢ ἀντὶ τοῦ εἰς πληγὰς ἐτοίμους καὶ οἷον τύποντας καὶ μαστιγοῦντας καὶ ὑβρίζοντας, (5) ἢ λέγοι ἂν τοὺς ἐκ προχείρου διδόντας ἀργύριον....

He further states that Menander used the word in two of his comedies, and attempts to support the last of the above interpretations by shewing from Diphilus, that money was occasionally carried about in the λήκυθος: and the last but one by appealing to Menander for the fact that the thong or strap (ἱμάς) by which the λήκυθος was suspended about the person might be detached from the flask and used as a whip. None of these five explanations is convincing and the last two are almost certainly wrong. An indication of the true meaning may however be gathered from the second. Any respectable Athenian in going to the public baths would be naturally attended by his slave carrying the master's λήκυθος or oil-flask, &c. Compare, for the Roman custom, Varro R. R. i. 55. 4 (Olea) dominum in balnea sequitur. The fraternity of young men alluded to in the text, may have gone on the principle of discarding the attendance of their slaves and carrying their own λήκυθοι, either to be free from the slight restraint which the company of their servants might put upon their practical jokes and wild escapades, or by way of assuming a lower grade of respectability than their birth would warrant, and availing themselves of that disguise either as a mere freak of youthful pleasantry or as a cloak for acts of outrage and disorder. If this view is tenable, the general sense of the title may be kept up by some such rendering as 'gentleman beggars,' 'amateur tramps.'

This explanation is in part confirmed by one of the guesses recorded in Bekker's Anecdota Graeca 465, 17 where αὐτολήκυθος is explained ὁ πένης ἀπὸ τοῦ ἑαυτῷ τὰς ληκύθους εἰς τὰ βαλανεῖα εἰσφέρειν. Again, Hesychius has αὐτολήκυθοι· οἱ πένητες, οἱ μόνην λήκυθον ἔχοντες· ἢ δι' ἑαυτῶν βαστάζοντες τὴν λήκυθον, οὐ δι' οἰκετῶν. Pollux, x. 62, refers to the passage in Demosthenes, and quotes a parallel from the comic poet Antiphanes, Meineke Com. Graec. fragm. III. 7 καὶ αὐτολήκυθους δέ τινες Δημοσθένης ἐν τῷ κατὰ Κόνωνος ὀνομάζει οὓς σαφέστερον ἂν τις ἐν τῷ Ἀντιφάνους Ἀθάμαντι κεκληῖσθαι λέγοι· χλαμύδα καὶ λόγχην ἔχων ἀξυνακόλουθος ξηρὸς αὐτολήκυθος.

As another nickname attaching to one of these Clubs we have Τριβαλλοὶ in § 39; and in Athenaeus a coterie of Athenian wits is mentioned in the time of Philip of Macedon and therefore nearly coincident in date with the Clubs in the text; these wits or γελωτοποιοί went by the name of 'the sixty,' (Athen. xiv. 614). Cf. also Lysias, fragm. 53, κατὰ Κινησίου: οὐ μετὰ τούτου ποτὲ Ἀπολλοφάνης καὶ Μυσταλίδης καὶ Λυσίθεος συνεισιτῶντο, μίαν ἡμέραν ταξάμενοι τῶν ἀποφράδων, ἀντὶ νομηνιαστῶν κακοδαίμονιστὰς σφίσιν αὐτοῖς τοῦνομα θέμενοι;

EXCURSUS (D).

On the Τριβαλλοὶ of Or. 54 § 39.

The Triballi were a wild Thracian people occupying the region north of the range of Haemus and south of the Danube, now known as Servia. Their character is often described in unfavourable terms: thus Isocrates (de pace § 50) speaks of their δυσγένεια as opposed to the εὐγένεια of Athens, and (Panath. § 227) denounces them as leagued against all their neighbours: πάντες φασιν ὁμονοεῖν μὲν (τοὺς Τριβαλλοὺς) ὡς οὐδένας ἄλλους ἀνθρώπους, ἀπολλύναι δ' οὐ μόνον τοὺς ὁμόρους καὶ τοὺς πλησίον οἰκοῦντας ἀλλὰ καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους ὅσων ἂν ἐφικέσθαι δυνηθῶσιν. Lastly the comic poet Alexis (who flourished in B.C. 356, a date but slightly anterior to the present speech) attacking, apparently, some rude and uncivilised custom, describes it as too barbarous even for the Triballi, οὐδ' ἐν Τριβαλλοῖς ταῦτά γ' ἐστὶν ἔθνος | οὐ φασὶ τὸν θύοντα τοῖς κεκλημένοις | δείξαντ' ἰδεῖν τὸ δεῖπνον, εἰς τὴν αὐρίον | πωλεῖν ἀδείπνοις ἄπερ ἔθγκ' αὐτοῖς ἰδεῖν (ap. Athen. xv. p. 671). Cf. Ar. Aves 1530.

According to the speaker, Conon and his two companions were, as mere striplings (μειράκια), known by a name borrowed from these lawless Triballi. Now if the speech was (as is very probable) delivered in B. C. 341 (see note on § 3 ἔτος τρίτον) when Conon was rather more than 50 years of age (§ 22), he would be a μειράκιον, or about 15 years of age, 35 years previous, viz. B.C. 376. By a coincidence which has apparently remained unnoticed, this brings us to the very year in which the wild Triballi crossed the Haemus with a strong force, ravaged the southern coast of Thrace near Abdera and were forced to retreat by the Athenian commander Chabrias (Diodor. xv. 36). The name of the barbarous tribe would therefore be on the lips of all Athens during the youth of Conon and his friends, and would readily find currency as a slang term of the day.

We may compare with the Τριβαλλοί, the disorderly Clubs to which Conon's son belonged, the ἰθύφαλλοι and αὐτολήκυθοι of § 14; and we may suggest in passing that the special form of the appellation, apart from its general applicability, probably turned on a play of words (e.g. τριβεῖν τοὺς ἄλλους or others more or less obvious). Cf. Photius s.v. (quoting this passage) οἱ ἐν τοῖς βαλανείοις ἀναγώγως διατριβόμενοι...οἱ δὲ τοὺς εἰκαίους καὶ τοὺς βίους κατατρίβοντας. Hesychius (inter alia) οἱ ἐπὶ τὰ δεῖπνα ἑαυτοὺς καλοῦντες. The Scholia on Æschines i. § 52 (τούσδε τοὺς ἀγρίους ἄνδρας) couple together Τριβαλλοὶ (cf. Plin. N. H. vii. 2) and Κένταυροι as infamous appellatives, and lastly the comic poet Eubulus (fl. B. C. 375) has the line Τριβαλλοποπανόθρεπτα μείρακύνλλια.

As an exact parallel to the Triballi in the text and the other clubs already mentioned, we have in English literature the 'nocturnal fraternity of the Mohock-club,—a name borrowed from a sort of cannibals in India' (i. e. North America). The practical jokes of that 'worthy society of brutes,' and 'well-disposed savages,' will be familiar to the readers of the Spectator (Nos. 324, 332 and 347; anno 1712). Cf. also Gay's Trivia iii. 325—328:

Who has not heard the Scowrer's midnight fame?
 Who has not trembled at the Mohock's name?
 Was there a watchman took his hourly rounds,
 Safe from their blows, or new-invented wounds?

As German parallels we have the names Polacken, Tartaren, Husaren, and Kroaten (quoted by Reiske); similarly in French, Cosaques and Pandours (mentioned by M. Dareste).

of the damage done. See §§ 23—26. Dem. Or. 13 § 12 διέσυρε ('depreciated') τὰ παρόντα καὶ τοὺς προγόνους ἐπήνεσε.

§§ 1, 2. There is really no greater nuisance, gentlemen, than a greedy neighbour, as I have found to my cost in the case of the plaintiff Callicles. He has set his heart upon my property, and has therefore by every legal means, direct or indirect, made me the victim of a vexatious persecution.

Though I am no speaker myself, yet, if the court will give me their attention, the facts themselves will prove the baselessness of the present action.

1. οὐκ ἦν ἄρ'—τυχεῖν.] For οὐκ ἦν ἄρα, 'there is not really after all,' cf. Soph. O. C. 1697, πόθος καὶ κακῶν ἄρ' ἦν τις, and for this use of ἦν, especially with ἄρα, to express a fact which is and always has been the same, see the examples given in Liddell and Scott, s.v. εἰμί, F.

For the general sense, cf.

Hesiod's Works and Days 345, πῆμα κακὸς γείτων.

συκοφαντῶν.] 'by his vexatious litigation, his petty persecution.' The word is always difficult to render, and we have generally to be guided by the context for the exact equivalent in English.

κατεσκεύασεν.] 'suborned his cousin to claim it from me.' The verb, here followed by the infinitive, most commonly takes an accusative, e.g. § 34 τὸν ἀνεψιὸν κατεσκεύασε, Or. 54 § 14.

2. σκευωρίας.] 'intrigue, jobbery.' Or. 36 § 33 πλάσμα καὶ σκευώρημα.

διγμένην ἀποφέρει.

ἔρημος in Attic has usually two terminations only: hence ἐρήμους δίκας, which was perhaps preferred to ἐρήμας δίκας on grounds of euphony. In § 6 however we find ἐρήμην κατεδειγθήσασθε, possibly to avoid the ambiguity arising from the ellipsis of δίκην, and in § 31 we have ἐρήμην μου καταδεδιγθήκει τοιαύτην ἑτέραν δίκην.

τὴν μὲν χιλίων.] The same suit is described in § 31 (quoted in last note) as similar to the suit in which this speech is spoken. The damages in the latter are also fixed at 1000 drachmae, § 25.

πέσας] sc. καταδαιτήσασθαι.

Καλλικράτην.] On the part taken in these lawsuits by Callicrates, the brother of the plaintiff Callicles, see A. Schaefer, Dem. und seine Zeit III. 2, p. 254 note.

§§ 3—7. (My opponents bring an action for damages on the ground that the building of a wall enclosing my property has stopped a water-course, and thus diverted the drainage of the surrounding hills on to the property of the plaintiff on the opposite side of the road).

In answer to all their arguments, I have simply to plead that my father built that wall fifteen years before his death, without any objection, formal or informal, on the part of the plaintiff's family, who are now attempting to take advantage of my youth and inexperience.

I also challenge them to prove the existence of the alleged watercourse (§ 6).

3. δίκαιον.] 'a fair and legal plea.' Or. 54 §§ 27, 29,

Καλλιππίδου τοῦ τούτων πατρός.]
The two sons Καλλικλῆς and Καλλικράτης bear names similar to their father's, Καλλιπίδης, all three being compounds of πατὴρ καὶ γειτνιώντος, ὃς ἀκριβέστερον (ἤδει δὴ πονσίφιλος Ναυσινίκου, and Καλ-λιστρατος Καλλικράτους. So also brothers' names sometimes varied but slightly, as Diodotus and Diogeiton' (Becker's Chari-cles p. 220 Eng. ed.).

ἀνδρὸς ἤδη.] Having attained to man's estate and being resident at Athens, Callicles might have brought an action long ago, if he felt himself aggrieved.
 P.]

4. καίτοι—ὕδατα πολλάκις ἐγένετο.] 'and yet of course it often rained then, just as it does now,'—a touch of quiet humour characteristic of this speech. (ὕδωρ γενέσθαι literally refers to rain, though floods are implied as a necessary consequence. Ar. Vesp. 265, δέεται ὕδωρ γενέσθαι κάπιπνεύσαι βόρειον αὐτοῖς.)

εἶπερ ἡδίκηει.] (As he would have done) if my father was wronging any one... (But he did not prevent him; and not only so,) but &c. P.]

ἀπηγόρευσε.] 'forbade.' In Classical Greek, ἀγορεύω and its compounds are seldom found except in the present and imperfect tenses; the remaining tenses and the verbal derivatives being generally borrowed from ἐρῶ, εἶπον, εἰρηκα, εἰρημαί, ἐρρήθην, ῥηθήσομαι, with ῥήσις, ῥητός, ῥητέον. Thus ἀναγορεύω (to proclaim) has for its imperfect ἀνηγόρεον, while the correct forms for the other parts are, ἀνερῶ, ἀνερήκα, ἀνείπον, ἀνερρήθην and ἀνάρρησις &c., instead of ἀναγορεύσω... ἀνηγόρευσις &c. The strict rule, however, as to this verb and its compounds, has its exceptions, in the case of προσαγορεύω and partially also in ἀπαγορεύω.

 Thus instead of the more usual ἀπέειπε, we here find ἀπηγόρευσε, which also occurs in Dem. Or.
 40 § 44 ἀπηγόρευσεν αὐτῷ μὴ διατῶν and Arist. Oecon. ii. 24; Plat. Theæt. p. 200, ἀπαγορεύσης. In Ar. Pax 107 we have καταγορεύση. (See Cobet's variae lectiones p. 35–39 and novae lectiones p. 778; also Veitch, Greek Verbs p. 10, ed. 1871.)

διεμαρτύρατο.] 'formally protested.' Or. 33 § 20, διαμαρτυραμένον τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐναντίον μαρτύρων.

ἐπιβιούτος.] Sense and usage alike shew that this, though at first sight an ambiguous form, is certainly aorist, and not present. Cf. § 32, ἐπεβίω, which

5 πατρὸς Καλλιππίδου. καίτοι, ὦ Καλλίκλεις, ἐξῆν δῆ-που τόθ' ὑμῖν, ὁρῶσιν ἀποικοδομονμένην τὴν χαρά-also occurs in Thuc. ii. 65, (of Pericles) ἐπεβίω δύο ἔτη καὶ μῆνας ἕξ καὶ ἐπειδὴ ἀπέθανεν κ.τ.λ. So also Or. 41 §§ 19 and 18, ἐπιβιούντος μετὰ ταῦτα πλείον ἢ πένθ' ἡμέρας. The first person ἐπεβίων is naturally rare, as the aorist of this verb is mainly applicable to those who are no longer living; but Thuc. v. 26, has, ἐπεβίων διὰ παντός (τοῦ πολέμου). In Attic Greek ἐβίων, like βιώσσομαι, βεβίωκα and βεβιωμένος is used to supplement the defects of ζῆν, which is itself hardly used except in the present and imperfect active. ζῆσθω is very rare. (See Cobet, variae lect. p. 610).

5. ἐξῆν.] As usual, without ἀν. See note on ἐχρῆν Or. 45 § 17, followed, as here, by ἴνα with the indicative.

ὑμῖν.] 'You and yours,' i.e. your father, your brother and (when at home, and not at Athens § 3) yourself. ὑμεῖς never stands for σὺ, and it has been shewn elsewhere that the passages quoted from Isocrates to prove the contrary will not bear examination (Isocr. ad Dem. § 2). So also, in Eur. Bacch. 252, ἀναίνομαι πατέρα | τὸ γῆρας ὑμῶν εἰσορῶν νοῦν οὐκ ἔχον, the plural ὑμῶν refers to Cadmus and Teiresias, not to the former only; and in Homer, Odys. xii. 81, we have ἦ περ ἂν ὑμεῖς νῆα παρὰ γλαφυρὴν ἰδύνετε, φαίδιμ' Ὀδυσσεῦ, where ὑμεῖς refers to Odysseus and his comrades.

In Latin however the rule is perhaps less strictly kept, and vester appears to be used for tuus in Catullus 71, 3, Aemulus iste tuus qui vestrum exercet amorem, probably the only instance of this exceptional use of plural for singular. The rule is only apparently broken in Virg. Aen. ix. 525, Vos, o Calliope, precor, aspirate canenti. Here vos refers to all the Muses, though Calliope alone is mentioned. (Cf. Aen. i. 140, vestras, Eure, domos.) So too Cicero pro Deiot. § 29, vos vestra secunda fortuna, Castor, non potestis sine propinquorum calamitate esse contenti? (The plural vos is at once explained by felix ista domus in the previous sentence.)

τὴν χαράδραν.] The word is not only used of the torrent itself, but also of the channel cut by the torrent's course (der. χαράσσω). Hesychius χαράδρα· χείμαρρος ποταμός. κατάγει δὲ οὗτος παντοῖα ἐν τῷ ρεύματι καὶ κατασύρει. χαράδραι· αἱ χαράξεις τοῦ ἐδάφους. καὶ οἱ κοῖλοι τόποι ἀπὸ τῶν καταφερομένων ὀμβρίων ὑδάτων. The rendering 'water-course' will suit all the passages in which it occurs in the present speech.

τί ταῦτα ποιεῖς;] Not 'why are you doing this?' but 'what is this that you are doing?' 'Are you cutting off, stopping, the water-course?'

ἀποικοδομεῖς.] ἀντὶ τοῦ ἀποφράττεις ἀπολαβόντινα (?) οἰκοδομήματι. Δημοσθένης ἐν τῷ πρὸς Καλλικλέα. The above explanation from Harpocration, with the awkward τινά, does not entirely suit this passage, though he specially refers to this speech. But in Thuc. i. 134, we read of Pausanias, ἔδον ὅντα τηρήσαντες αὐτὸν καὶ ἀπολαβόντες εἰσω ἀποκοδόμησαν, and it seems likely that the lexicographer, or his transcribers, either had that passage itself in view, or carelessly incorporated into an explanation of Demosthenes the note of some previous expositor of Thucydides.

ἵνα...ἦν.] Goodwin's Moods and Tenses § 44, 3, and Or. 36 § 47. As an exact parallel to the whole of this sentence, we have Or. 28 § 5, ἐχρήν (like ἐξήν, supra)...εἰσκαλέσαντας μάρτυρας πολλοὺς παρασημῆσθαι κελεύσαι τὰς διαθήκας, ἢν, εἰ τι ἐγίγνετο ἀμφισβητήσιμον, ἦν εἰς τὰ γράμματα ταῦτ’ ἐπανελθεῖν.—ὑμῶν, the reading of the Zurich editors, as well as Dindorf, refers to the defendant's father Tisias and the family of Callicles the plaintiff. If (with G. H. Schaefer) we accept ἡμῶν which is found in the codex Augustanus primus and apparently in other mss, the sense is: 'in which case you and I would have been having no disputes with one another (as we now have).'

εἰ...συνέβη τι τοιοῦτον.] i. e. εἰ ἐνέπεσεν τὸ ὕδωρ εἰς τὸ χωρίον τὸ ὑμέτερον.—μάρτυσι, referring to διεμαρτύρατο in § 4.

ἵνα—ἀπέφαινες.] Constr. ἵνα μὴ λόγῳ μόνον ἀπέφαινες τὸν πατέρα ἀδικοῦντα, ὥσπερ νῦν (ἀποφαίνεις), ἀλλ’ ἔργῳ (ἀπέφαινες ἀδικοῦντα). λόγῳ and ἔργῳ (on which see Or. 46 § 9) are not to be taken with ἀδικοῦντα.—In the next sentence οὐδεὶς means οὐδεὶς ὑμῶν.

ei ἡνέγκατε—ἐπεμαρτύρασθε, νῦν.] If (with Dindorf and G. H. Schaefer) we retain these words, ἐκείνος will refer to ὁ μάρτυς; if (with the Zurich editors and the higher manuscript authority) we omit them, it can only refer to ὁ πατήρ (Tisias, who was no longer alive). The latter makes quite as good sense as the former; if we lose the antithesis between ὁ μάρτυς and τοὺς ῥαδίως μαρτυροῦντας, we gain the contrast between the father who would certainly have held his own and the son whose youth and inexperience are held fair game by the plaintiff's party (τηλικούτου—καταπεφρονήκατε).

7. ῥαδίως.] 'only too readily,' 'recklessly,' 'at random.' Plat. Apol. p. 24 c, ῥαδίως εἰς ἀγῶνας καθίστατε ἀνθρώπους, Leg. 917 B, θεῶν ὀνόματα μὴ χραίνεω ῥαδίως, Meno 94 E, ῥαδίως κακῶς λέγειν ἀνθρώπους.

τούτους.] The reading ταῦ-ταις, accepted by the Zurich editors, is open to the objection that between κατεδιηγήσασθε in the previous and καταπεφρονήκατε in the subsequent context, we expect, not the third person τούτοις, but the second person ὑμῖν, just as above we have οὐδὲν πλεον ἂν ἦν ὑμῖν.

If we retain the doubtful words at the beginning of § 7, the argument in favour of τούτοις is yet stronger, and τούτοις is then still less defensible. ('melior vulgata lectio, τούτους, μάρτυρας scilicet,' Seager, Classical Journal, 1825, no. 61 p. 63).

τηλικούτου.] more commonly of great age (tantae aetatis), but here of extreme youth (tantulae aetatis). Soph. El. 614, ἦτις τοιαῦτα τὴν τεκοῦσαν ὕβρισην, καὶ ταῦτα τηλικούτος (so οὔσα). §§ 8, 9. I contend that my father had a perfect right to build the enclosure, as even the plaintiff himself admits that the land is our own property. This being admitted, a personal inspection would in itself have sufficed to shew the jury how groundless the present action is. And this was why I wanted (and my opponents refused) to submit the matter to the arbitration of impartial persons who knew the neighbourhood. Failing this, I must ask the jury for their closest attention while I describe the position of the properties in question.

8. οὐθ'...τε] Or. 54 § 26, Madv. Gk. Synt. § 208.

ἡμέτερον ἴδιον] 'our own private property,' stronger than ἡμέτερον. So in § 18.—The grammarian Priscian, who curiously regards ἴδιος as an exact equivalent to the Latin suus has the following remark: *quod mirum est, hoc ipsum [id est τὸ ἴδιον] etiam primae et secundae adiungitur personae apud illos ut Ἰσαῖος ἐν τῷ πρὸς Εὐκλείδην: οὐκ ἂν τὰ ἴδια τὰ ἐμαντοῦ (fragm. 60). Or. 50 §§ 66, 68). ἐν δὲ τῷ πρὸς Καλλικλέα περὶ χωρίου βλάβης: τὸ μὲν γὰρ χωρίον—ἡμέτερον ἴδιον εἶναι. Phroenichus ποασπλάς: ὥσπερ ἐμοῦ αὐτῆς ἴδιον, pro quo nos dicimus 'meum proprium,' et 'tuum proprium.' dicitur tamen etiam 'suum proprium illius,' ut non putetur abundare 'suum,' sed indubitabilem discretionem significare. In the present instance, the consent of the speaker's opponents was essential, and he insists (for all they urge to the contrary) that it was to their refusal that the failure of his attempt to secure an amicable settlement must be ascribed.

οὐχ οὗτοι.] ἐπιτρέπειν ἐβούλοντο.—In the next sentence ὑμῖν and πᾶσι go together, καὶ emphasizing τοῦτο.

προσέχετε—τὸν νοῦν.] 'I implore the jury, in the name of all that's sacred, to give me their best attention.' The earnestness of this appeal (πρὸς Διὸς καὶ τῶν θεῶν) is explained by the fact that unless the jury clearly understood the topographical details which here follow, the remainder of the speech would be almost unintelligible, and what applies to the original hearers holds equally good for the modern reader. The defendant has just informed the court that an actual inspection of the premises would have been decisive in his favour; he therefore naturally endeavours to compensate for that disadvantage by giving his audience a distinct description of the relative situation of the properties of the contending parties. [In modern courts a map or plan made by a surveyor would be produced. P.]

§§ 10, 11. The estate of my opponents is separated from my own by a public road, and both are surrounded by a tract of mountainous country. Thus, the drainage from the hills flows partly into our properties, partly on to the road, and in the latter case, it is either carried down the road itself, or, if anything stops its course, it inundates the properties. On one occasion, the water made an inroad into what was subsequently my father's property, and, owing to neglect, made more and more way. Accordingly my father, on coming into possession, built this wall to protect his land from the encroachments of his neighbours as well as from the inroad of the water.

10. τοῦ γὰρ—ὁδὸς ἔστι.] lit. 'for the space between their property and mine is a road,' i.e. there is a road between their property and my own.' τὸ μέσον, however, seems a less satisfactory reading than μέσον.

ὅρους περιέχοντος κύκλῳ.] Xen. Hellen. iv. 6, 8, διὰ τὰ κύκλῳ περιέχοντα ὄρη. Plat. Critias, A, τὸ περὶ τὴν πόλιν πᾶν πεδίον ἐκείνην μὲν περιέχον αὐτὸ δὲ κύκλῳ περιεχόμενον ὄρεσι.

be taken with περιέχοντος κύκλω which would require an accusative, nor again with καταρρέον as we should then expect τὸ τοῖς χωρίοις καταρρέον ὕδωρ, which indeed is actually printed in Reiske's Index Graecitatis (with the explanation 'id est eis τὰ χωρία'). Reiske's erroneous quotation may account for this passage being cited in Liddell and Scott as an instance of καταρρεῖν 'o. dat. to rush down to a place.'

A better explanation is either to construct it with συμβαίνει, (which however is objectionable on account of the repetition of τὰ χωρία in the same sentence,) or, better still, to understand it as a kind of dativus incommodi: in the latter case we might render as follows: 'between their property and mine there is a road; a hilly district encircles both; and unfortunately for the properties the water that flows down runs (it so happens) partly into the road, partly into the properties.'

[I should regard χωρίοις as the dative in relation to position; 'as these farms have mountains enclosing them on every side.' P.]

καὶ δὴ καί.] 'and in particular.'

After making a general reference to τὸ καταρρέον ὕδωρ, the speaker narrows his description to the water which runs down the road. In the next section again, καὶ δὴ limits the subject still further to the water which on a special occasion made inroad into his own property.

ἥ ἂν εὐδοῇ.] 'wherever it has a free course.' Arist. gen. anim. i. 18, ρεῖ ὅπου ἂν εὐδοῇσθ τοῦ σώματος and (as a passive in intransitive sense) ib. ii. 4, εὐδοεῖται μάλλον. Cf. infra § 11, τὸ ὕδωρ...μᾶλλον ὠδοποεῖ.

ἥ ἂν ἐστῇ τι.] 'wherever anything stands in the way'—'any obstacle intervenes.' Plat. Phaedo, 77 B., ἐτι ἐτέστηκεν (instat, obstat) τὸ τῶν πολλῶν (of an objection in argument, ἐνστάσις).

τηνικαῦτα κ.τ.λ.] 'why! thereupon it must of course overflow the properties.' τηνικαῦτα, though almost always used of time, occasionally (as here after ἥ, which indicates place) bears a more general meaning, 'in that case,' 'under these circumstances.'

11. ἀμεληθέν] It seems best to regard this as an accusative neuter absolute ('neglect having ensued'), and not to take it αὐτὸ, ἀλλ' ἀνθρώπου δυσχεραίνοντος ὅλως τοῖς τόποις καὶ μᾶλλον ἀστικού, δις καὶ τρεῖς ἐμβαλὼν τὸ ὕδωρ τὰ τε χωρία ἐλυμήνατο καὶ μᾶλλον ὠδοποίη. διὸ δὴ ταῦθ' ὁ πατήρ ὁρῶν, ὡς ἐγὼ τῶν εἰδόντων ἀκούω, καὶ τῶν γειτόνων ἐπινεμόντων ἅμα καὶ βαδιζόντων with τὸ ὕδωρ, much less with αὐτὸ, i.e. τὸ χωρίον. So in Plat. Phaedr. 265 D, ὁρισθέν 'it having been defined.' Or. 50 (Polycl.) § 12, προσταχθέν. (Kühner § 487, 3, and Goodwin's Moods and Tenses § 110. 2).

In translating, we can best bring out the sense by reserving ἀμεληθέν to a later point in the English sentence, and rendering the clause οὐπω... ἔχοντος as though it contained the principal verb. Thus: 'now my father was not yet in possession of the property, but a man who disliked the neighbourhood and preferred town life; accordingly neglect ensued, and the water...made more and more way.'—For ὠδοποίη, cf. supra § 10, εὐδοή.

[By μᾶλλον ὠδοποίη, the speaker wishes to shew how the rain had made a way for itself almost amounting to a χαράδρα, though he denies the existence of any recognised χαράδρα by the road-side in § 16. P.]

ὁρῶν...ἐπινεμόντων.] For the nominative participle combined with the genitive absolute, cf. Thuc. viii. 45, 'Ἀλκιβιάδης τοῖς Πελοποννησίοις ὑποπτος ὢν καὶ ἀπ' αὐτῶν ἀφικόμενης ἐπιστολῆς...ὑποχωρεῖ (Goodwin's Moods and Tenses § 111).

τῶν γειτόνων—χωρίου] 'as the neighbours also (ἅμα) encroached and trespassed on the property.' ἐπινέμειν and ἐπινομία are specially used of turning cattle on to a neighbour's land, for pasture. Hence the metaphorical use of the word in Aesch. Ag. 485, πιθανὸς ἄγαν ὁ θῆλος ὁρος ἐπινέμεται ταχύπορος. Among other words compounded with ἐπι and used of encroachments on the debateable borderland of two countries, or on the boundaries of adjacent properties, we have ἐπεργάζεσθαι and ἐπεργασία.

In Plato's Laws (pp. 843—4) there is a long and interesting passage, in which the annoyances caused by neighbours are dwelt upon, and suggestions made for legal remedies. We transcribe these portions only which illustrate the clause before us, and indeed the speech in general. p. 844 B. βλάβαι πολλαὶ καὶ συμκραι γειτόνων γιγνόμεναι, διὰ τὸ θαμίζειν ἔχθρας ὄγκον μέγαν ἐντίκτουςαι, χαλεπήν καὶ σφόδρα πικρὰν γειτονίαν ἀπεργάζονται. διὸ χρὴ πάντως εὐλαβεῖσθαι γείτονα γείτοινι μηδὲν ποιεῖν διάφορον, τῶν τε ἄλλων πέρι καὶ δὴ καὶ ἐπεργασίας ἐνυμπίδσης σφόδρα διευλαβούμενον... ὃς δ' ἂν ἐπεργάζηται τὰ τοῦ γείτονος ὑπερβαίνων τοὺς ὄρους, τὸ μὲν βλάβος ἀποτινέτω, τῆς δὲ ἀναιδείας ἅμα καὶ ἀνελευθερίας ἕνεκα λατρεύμενος διπλάσιον τοῦ βλάβους ἄλλο ἐκτισάτω τῷ βλαφθέντι...καὶ ἐάν τις βοσκήματα ἐπινέμῃ, τὰς βλάβας (ἀγρονόμοι) ὀρώντες κρινόντων καὶ τιμάντων.

See esp. Donaldson's New Cratylus § 174, where this class of words is discussed. He apparently understands ἐπιμέμειν in this passage to refer to a 'common trespass;' but this is sufficiently expressed by βαδίζοντων διὰ τοῦ χωρίου, and it is therefore better to give ἐπιμεμόντων that special application to the 'encroachment of cattle' which it constantly bears.

αἵμασιαν.] Never used in the sense of a 'hedge,' but always of a 'wall of dry stones.' In Odys. xviii. 359 and xxiv. 224—230, αἵμασιαν λέγειν is explained in a scholium, οἰκοδομῶν ἐκ συλλεκτῶν λίθων, and Hesychius paraphrases the word τὸ ἐκ πολλῶν λίθων λογάδων ἀθροισμα. Thus in Theocr. i. 45, a boy watching a vineyard is described as sitting ἐφ' αἵμασιαισι, and in v. 93 we have roses growing in beds beside the garden-wall, ῥόδα τῶν ἀνδρηρα παρ' αἵμασιαισι πεφύκει. Cf. Plat. legg. 881 A, περιβόλους αἵμασιώδεις τῶς, τειχῶν ἐρύματα.

In Bekker's Anecdota Graeca p. 356, we have the definition, τὸ ἐκ χαλίκων ψικοδομημένον τεῖχος, where the next few words, κυρίως δὲ τοῖς ἡκανθωμένοις λέγεται φραγμοῖς, shew that such walls were sometimes topped with thorns (Odys. xiv. 10, αὐλήν...δεῖματο...ρυτοῖσιν λάεσσιν καὶ ἐθρίγκωσεν ἀχέρῳ, cf.

xxiv. 230), just as in England rough stone-walls are frequently finished off with furze and other prickly shrubs.

§§ 12—15. The plaintiff contends I have damaged his estate by obstructing 'the water-course.' In reply, I shall prove that what he calls a water-course is no such thing, but really part of our own ground, for it has fruit-trees growing in it which were planted before my father built the enclosure, and it contains a burial-place made before we acquired the property.

All this is in evidence, gentlemen, as also the fact that the wall was built while the plaintiff's father was still alive, and without any protest on the part of my opponents or the rest of my neighbours.

12. τὴν χαράδραν.] emphatic, as is shewn by its prominent position and by the next sentence.

βλάπτειν ἐμὲ αὐτόν·] The order of words, (1) the infinitive, (2) the subject, (3) the object, is exactly parallel to that in Or. 54 § 31 μὴ παρῆαι Κόνηνα Ἀρίστωνα.

13. εἰ μὴ συνεχωρεῖτο ἴδιον εἶναι, τάχ' ἂν ἡδικοῦμεν, εἴ τι τῶν δημοσίων ᾠκοδομοῦμεν.] In this conditional sentence, we have one apodosis ἡδικοῦμεν ἂν, corresponding to a double protasis. The second protasis εἰ—ᾠκοδομοῦμεν reiterates the first with a slight change of idea. The supposition stated at the beginning of the sentence is thus re-stated with some slight redundancy at the end, and reaches the hearer in two parts, which enter his mind separately and there unite. So in Plat. Phaedo 67 E, εἰ φοβοῖντο καὶ ἀγανακτοῖεν, οὐ πολλὴ ἂν ἀλογία εἴη, ... εἰ μὴ ἄσμενοι ἐκείσε ἴοιεν. The idiom may be illustrated by the effect upon the brain of the double images of external objects entering the eyes separately and subsequently uniting. Numerous varieties of construction, of which the present is a single instance, are grouped

τίς...θάπτειν.] The telling question, 'who would think of burying his ancestors in a water-course?' (a question seriously put, unless perhaps we ought to take it as one of the touches of humour characteristic of this speech), is of course not meant to apply to all the tombs subsequently mentioned (§ 14), as some of them were there even before the land came into the speaker's possession.

14. καὶ γὰρ...καί.] 'for not only ...but.' A frequent idiom, though one but little observed. P.]

15. ἀρ'.] We should expect ἀρ' οὐχ, which, like nonne, distinctly implies an affirmative answer. But ἀρα is not unfrequently used alone, to denote a simple interrogation, the context shewing whether a negative or, as here, an affirmative reply is expected. Xen. Cyr. iv. 6. 4, ἀρα βέβληκα δις ἐφεξῆς; (L. and S.).

μνήματα...τινὰ.] Not μνήματα παλαιὰ as before. The description is made as general as possible to shew that the piece of ground in question had all the essential characteristics of private property.—τὰλλ' ἅπερ. The speaker does not specify what is included in this et cetera, but the depositions probably went into further detail.

§§ 16—18. The plaintiff speaks of the stoppage of a water-course. Now, firstly, I don't suppose that in the whole of Attica there is such a thing as a watercourse by the side of a public road. The water would naturally flow down the road and a water-course would be quite unnecessary. Next, no one surely would think of allowing water passing down the highway to flow into his own land; on the contrary, he would of course dam it off, if it ever made in-road.

Now the plaintiff wants me to let the water flow into my own land, and to turn it off into the road again after it has passed his property. Why then, the owner next below my neighbour opposite will complain. In short, if I take the water from off the road, I cannot let it out again either into the road or into my neighbour's properties. And no other course is open to me, for I presume the plaintiff won't compel me to drink it up.

16. σκέψασθε.] The other reading σκέψασθαι (closely connected by καὶ with ἀκοῦσαι) is perhaps less preferable, but is accepted by the Zurich editors, partly on the authority of the Paris ms Σ.

οἶμαι — ἐποίησέ τις;] The speaker, after asking whether any of his audience has ever seen or even heard of a water-course running by the side of a public way, takes upon himself to declare that he does not believe there is anything of the kind in the whole of Attica. The startling character of this assertion, which could hardly have been untrue, is only equalled by the delightful frankness with which he assigns the reason; 'what could induce any one,' he asks, 'to make a channel through his private grounds for water, which, if let alone, would be sure to flow down along the public road?' The passage is singularly suggestive on the state of the mountain roads of Attica; the public road, so called, would in numbers of cases be little better than the path of a mountain-torrent, which might be used in dry weather for purposes of transit, but in very wet seasons would revert to the possession of the waters. In the days of Demosthenes many of the mountain roads were, we presume, not much better than those of modern Attica, as described in Edmond About's lively book on Greek brigandage, Le Roi des Montagnes:

"I crossed at a leap the Eleusinian Cephissus . . . One hundred paces further on, the road was lost in a wide and deep ravine, hollowed by the rains of two or three thousand winters. I supposed with some show of justice that the ravine must be the road, for I had noticed in my previous excursions that the Greeks dispense with making a road wherever the water has been kind enough to take that duty on itself. In this country, where man but slightly thwarts the laws of nature, the torrents are royal roads; the rivers turnpike-roads; the rivulets cross-country roads. Storms do the office of highway engineers and the rain is an inspector who keeps up without any control the means of communication, great and small." (p. 45 = p. 42 Eng. transl. 1862.)

[We must remember that road-making, as we have it, is a modern art, and that the want of roads is still the cause of backward civilisation and commerce in many countries. The hollow or sunken lanes, common in many parts of England, are caused by the excavating power of water running along tracks. The Romans raised their roads (viam munire) apparently to avoid this. As an illustrative passage, we may quote Iliad xxiii. 420, ῥωχμὸς ἔην γαίης, ἢ χειμέριον ἄλ᾽ ἐν ὕδρῳ ἐξέρρηξεν ὁδοῖο, βάθυνε δὲ χώρον ἀπαντα. P.] βαδιεῖσθαι.] The Classic fu-

αὐτὸ τοῦναντίον.] 'on the very contrary,' so also in Or. 22 (Androt.) § 7.—ἂν τοῦναντίον was the vulgar text until corrected by Reiske, on the authority of two mss and the margin of Σ; but the correction is so certain that authority is hardly wanted.

ἀποφράττειν καὶ παροικοδομεῖν] 'dam and wall it off.' The former implies an abrupt cutting off of the water by a transverse dam athwart the stream; the latter probably expresses a wall built parallel to the stream to narrow its course.

οὗτος τοίνυν—ἐγκαλεῖ.] 'This man, Callicles, expects me, to take the water from the road (where it has no χαράδρα) into my farm, and when it has passed his, again to carry it out of my farm into the road. But, in that case, the farmer who occupies next to him would complain;' i.e. he would say that I ought to carry it beyond his farm also, lest it should come in from the road. It is clear that the defendant's farm, on one side of the road (§ 10), extended considerably beyond that of the plaintiff Callicles on the other. For he says that, if bound to carry it beyond one farm, he was bound to carry it beyond a second or a third, before he allowed it to re-enter the public road. P.]

ἐξαγαγεῖν.] 'draw off,' 'let out.' Xen. Oec. 20 § 12, τὸ ὕδωρ ἐξάγεται τὰ φρούρια.

ἐγκαλεῖ.] Not present, but future. The context is decisive and the margin of the Paris ms has ἐγκαλέσει, pointing to the same conclusion, though the note seems due to a copyist who did not recognise in ἐγκαλεῖ the regular Attic future. In Or. 23 (Aristocr.) § 123, we have ἐγκαλέσουσιν; so also in Or. 19 § 133. The simple verb καλῶ hardly ever (Cobet says, never) has any other future than καλῶ (var. lect. 28, 29).

18. ἢ πού.] 'Surely, I should scarcely be bold enough to turn it on to my neighbour's land;' —'I should be a very bold man

δίκας ἀτιμήτους φεύγω.] 'am sued for a fixed penalty,' 'am put on my trial in law-suits where the damages are already assessed by law.' The plural refers to the fact that the speaker has been sued by Callicrates as well as by Callicles (§ 2).

δίκη τιμητὸς means 'a suit to be assessed,' i.e. 'a suit in which the penalty or damages have not been determined by law.' δίκη ἀτιμητος means the opposite; 'a suit not to be assessed,' i.e. a suit in which the penalty has already been fixed by law.

So Harpocration: ἀτιμητος ἀγὼν καὶ τιμητὸς. ὁ μὲν τιμητὸς ἐφ' ᾧ τίμημα ὠρισμένον ἐκ τῶν νόμων οὐ κεῖται, ἀλλὰ τοὺς δικαστὰς ἔδει τιμᾶσθαι ὃ τι χρή παθεῖν ἡ ἀποτίσαι· ὁ δὲ ἀτιμητος τοῦναντίον ᾧ πρόσεστιν ἐκ τῶν νόμων ὠρισμένον τίμημα, ὥς μηδὲν δεῖν τοὺς δικαστὰς διατιμῆσαι. Αλοχίνης κατὰ Κτησιφώντος (p. 84. 7), Δημοσθένης κατὰ Μειδίου (§ 115).

Again Pollux (8. 63) has: ἀτιμητος δὲ δίκη, ἣν οὐκ ἔστιν ὑποτιμῆσθαι ἀλλὰ τοσούτου τετιμῆται ὅσον ἐπιγέγραπται.

The above explanation is wrongly reversed by Suidas (ap. 74 of Telfy's Corpus iuris Attici), by the Lexica Segueriana (on p. 202 and 469 of Bekker's Anecdota Graeca) and even in a scholium on § 25 infra, χιλίων δραχμῶν δίκην ἀτιμητος φεύγω, a passage which is decisive in favour of Harpocration's distinction.

ὅπου δὲ μήτε.] There would seem to have been a law prohibiting the draining of farms on to a public way. Hence he says εἰ εἰς τὴν ὁδὸν ὑκτῆσω τὸ ὕδωρ ἐξάγειν. It was equally illegal, of course, to drain on to another's land. Hence he asks what he was to do with the water, if once he admitted it on his farm? And the inference is, that he was right in not admitting it, but in damming it back as far as he could, and letting it run as it might along the road. P.]

οὐ γὰρ ἐκπιεῖν—αὐτὸ προσαναγκάσει.] This passage is § 19. Now had there been a water-course below my property, to take off the drainage, I might have been doing wrong in refusing to let the water into my land; but, as it is, the water-course alleged is neither passed down to me by any neighbour immediately above me, nor passed down by me to any one else below.

19. μὴ ὅτι—ἀλλὰ μὴ...ἀγαπήσαι μ' ἂν.] 'I must be content, I do not say, with obtaining a verdict, but with escaping conviction.' The sense is: 'victimised as I have been, instead of gaining legal satisfaction from my opponents, I must think myself fortunate if I am not convicted to pay them an additional penalty.'

εἰ μὲν γὰρ—παραλαμβάνουσιν ὡσαύτως.] In Plato's Laws provisions are suggested to prevent damage being incurred in times of heavy rain owing to neglect on the part of neighbours in providing an outlet for streams that pass down to them from the higher ground immediately adjacent, or again owing to careless transmission of the streams on the part of the neighbours higher up the hill.

puted water-courses.' A curious expression. The nearest approach to it that I can find is (Andoc.) Or. 4 § 17 οὐδὲν ἦττον τῶν ὁμολογουμένων δούλων.

τοὺς χειμάρρους.] here 'water-drains,' 'gutters,' like ὑδρορροά Ar. Ach. 922. The word has lost all trace of its primary meaning 'a winter-torrent.'

§ 20. The fact is, that simply owing to the plaintiff's own carelessness, he has suffered from a flood, as others have before him; and the strangest inconsistency of all is, that the plaintiff, while he himself brings to the spot large stones to dam off the water when it makes inroad, has actually brought against me a suit for damages, just because my father built a wall round his property with the very same object.

20. μὴ φυλαξαμένους.] 'for not being on their guard,' 'owing to their neglect.' μὴ here implies the reason, as distinguished from οὐ which would only denote the fact. The vulgar text before Wolf's ed. had φυλαξαμένους, Wolf proposed and Reiske accepted οὐ φ. but μὴ φ. is clearly better, and is found in several mss. (Augustanus 1 and 5, and Bavaricus).

δ καὶ...δεινότατον, εἰ.] Isocr. Archidamus § 56 δ δὲ πάντων σχετιώτατον, εἰ φιλοπονώτατοι δοκούντες εἶναι...ῥαθυμότερον βουλευσόμεθα. Paneg. § 128 δ δὲ πάντων δεινότατον, ὅταν... (Dem.) Aristog. (25) § 31 δ καὶ θαυμαστόν ἐστιν, εἰ κ.τ.λ. In such sentences δ δὲ implies a less close connection with the previous context than δ καὶ, and ἐστὶ is frequently omitted (Kühner § 406, 9. Madvig, Gr. Synt. § 197).

οὐδὲ πολλαπλάσια.] So in § 35 the defendant speaks of his μικρὰ οὐσία.

§ 21. If all my neighbours were to treat me as the plaintiff has done, I should soon be a ruined man; but while the rest, who have had great losses, are content to bear their misfortune, my present opponents alone, who have lost nothing to speak of, are bringing against me a groundless action for damage entirely due to their own neglect.

21. πεπονθότες...βεβλαμμένων cf. § 11 ὁρῶν...ἐκινεμόντων n.

τετολμήκασιν.] τολμᾶν and its tenses are regularly used in Greek prose, while τλῆναι is almost entirely confined to Greek verse (note on Isocr. Paneg. § 96 ἐτλησαν).—τοῦτο πρᾶττειν=δικάζεσθαι.—πᾶσι sc. τοῖς ἄλλοις.

εἰ καὶ.] Notwithstanding—even if—they have had some trifling losses. εἰ καὶ, without disputing the condition (here εἰ πεπόνθασιν), represents it as of little consequence; καὶ εἰ or καὶ 'even supposing' introduces a condition which is utterly improbable. Kühner § 378.

αὐτοὶ—βεβλαμμένοι.] 'they have incurred damage owing to their own fault alone (by not damming off the water as I did), though they vexatiously throw the blame upon me.' The participle here is quite as emphatic as a principal verb.

ἐκεῖνοι αἰτίαν ἔχουσιν.] 'whereas the rest of my neighbours, not to mention any other point, at any rate incur no such imputation as this.' With μηδὲν ἄλλο I understand διαφέρουσι, and I refer αἰτίαν ἔχουσι to αὐτοὶ δι' αὐτοὺς βεβλαμμένοι συκοφαντοῦσι. The imputation is συκοφαντία, bringing a vexatious charge when they are themselves to blame for want of precaution. Cf. next § τοῦτους μὲν μηδὲν ἐγκαλεῖν...τουτοὶ δὲ συκοφαντεῖν.

['while the rest, however negligent they may have been, are at all events chargeable with nothing of this kind,' Kennedy. This seems to give the sense; but the precise ellipse with εἰ καὶ μηδὲν ἄλλο is obscure. P.]

G. H. Schaefer explains τοιαύτην αἰτίαν by the words τοῦ αὐτοῦς (qu. αὐτοὶ) δι' αὐτοὺς βεβλάσθαι, and with εἰ καὶ μηδὲν ἄλλο he understands πεποιήκασιν τοῦ φυλάττεσθαι τὴν ἐκ τοῦ ὕδατος ἐσομένην βλάβην.

αἰτίαν ἔχειν (except in Pl. Phaedo 101 c, where it means 'have you, i.e. do you know, any cause?) is nearly equivalent to δόξαν ἔχειν 'to have the reputation (i. e. either the credit or the imputation) of...' It occurs in the better sense 'to have the credit of' in Isocr. de pace § 138 τούτων τῶν ἀγαθῶν τὴν αἰτίαν ἔχομεν. The worse sense 'to incur an imputation' (as here) is far more common (e.g. Lysias Or. 22 § 18, 10 § 28, 13 § 62). Both meanings are combined in Thuc. i. 83, 3 τῶν ἀποβαινόντων τὸ πλέον ἐπ' ἀμφοτέρω αἰτίας ἔχομεν (note on Isocr. Paneg. § 109).

§ 22. The plaintiff has himself done wrong by advancing his wall and thus narrowing the road, and by shooting his rubbish on to the road and thus raising its level.

22. δεινόν, τούτους μὲν μηδὲν ἐγκαλεῖν... τουτοῦ δὲ συκοφαντεῖν.] The clause containing μὲν is coordinate with that containing δέ, but in English must be subordinate to it. 'Is it not atrocious, that, while my neighbours make no complaint..., the plaintiff brings a vexatious action against me?' The influence of δεινόν affects the second clause in its contrast with the first. Dem. Lept. § 9 πῶς γὰρ οὐκ αἰσχρὸν κατὰ μὲν τὴν ἀγορὰν ἀψευδεῖν νόμον γεγράφθαι... ἐν δὲ τῷ κοινῷ μὴ χρῆσθαι τῷ νόμῳ τούτῳ (Isocr. ad Dem. § 11 n. Madvig Gr. Synt. § 189 a, Cicero ii. Phil. § 110 l. 6 ed. Mayor, n.).

τὴν τύχην στέργειν.] στέργειν, in the sense of contented submission, usually has the dative with or without ἐπὶ, e.g. Isocr. de pace § 6 στέργειν τοῖς παροῦσι. The acc. however occurs again in § 30 infra, also in Hdt. ix. 17 ἔστερξαν τὰ παρεόντα, Eur. Phoen. 1685 τὰμ' ἐγὼ στέρξω κακά, Soph. Ant. 292, and Isocr. ad Dem. § 29 στέργε μὲν τὰ παρόντα ζῆρει δὲ τὰ βέλτιστα.

δν.] δν εἰσεσθε σαφέστερον... ὅτι αὐτὸς ἐξημάρτηκε. The subject of the subordinate here becomes the accusative of the principal sentence, and all the words down to συμβέβηκεν inclusive form an object-sentence to the principal verb εἰσεσθε. Lysias, Or. 20 § 34 οὐς οὐπω ὅτε εἰτε ἀγαθοὶ εἰτε κακοὶ... γενήσονται (Madvig, Gr. Synt. § 191. Kühner § 600 p. 1088).

στενωτέραν. The old Greek grammarians (e.g. Choeroboscus) state that στενός (Ionic στενός) and κενός have ο, not ω, in the comparative and superlative (cf. Ionic στενωότερος).

χλῆδον] 'rubbish'; the word is only found in § 27 and in a fragment of Aeschylus quoted below. Harpocrations.v. χλῆδος. Δημοσθένης ἐν τῷ πρὸς Καλλικλέα περὶ χωρίου βλάβης. ἔπειτα δὲ τὸν χλῆδον ἐκβαλὼν ἐξ ὧν ὑψηλοτέραν καὶ στενωτέραν τὴν αὐτὴν ὁδὸν πεποιήσθαι συμβέβηκεν. πᾶν πλῆθος χλῆδος λέγεται καὶ ἐστὶν οἷον σωρός τις, μάλιστα δὲ τῶν ἀποκαθαρμάτων τε καὶ ἀποψημάτων, καὶ ἡ τῶν ποταμῶν πρόσχωσις, καὶ πολλὸν μᾶλλον τῶν χειμάρρων δ καὶ χέραδος καλεῖται (Iliad xxi. 319). νῦν δὲ ἔοικεν ὁ ρήτωρ λέγειν ὅτι χοῦν καὶ φρυγανώδη τινα ἐκ τοῦ χωρίου σωρὸν ὁ Καλλικλῆς εἰς τὴν ὁδὸν ἐξ ὧν.] The pl. refers to ἐξαγαγὼν... αἵμασιαν and χλῆδον ἐκβαλὼν. The first adjective ὑψηλοτέραν is explained by the latter, the second στενωτέραν by the former:—one of the many forms of χιασμὸς or 'introverted parallelism.' This enables the speaker to put his main point in the most emphatic positions (first and last) and the subordinate point between them (note on Isocr. ad Dem. § 7, Paneg. § 54).—αὐτίκα, sc. at the end of § 27.—τηλικαύτην δίκην. Cf. § 25 χιλίων δραχμῶν δίκην.

If the plaintiff may enclose his land, we may enclose ours. If my father wronged you, by enclosing, you are just as much wronging me, for if you dam off the water, it will be swept back on my own property and will throw down my wall. But I am not going to complain; I shall simply do my best to protect my land from such an incursion. The plaintiff shews his prudence in protecting his own property; but in prosecuting me, he only shews his villany and his infatuation.

spite me (§ 34), he has brought the same charge against my servant, Callarus, as against myself, though the servant could not have enclosed the land on his own responsibility.

Their interested motive is proved by the fact that, if I let them have my property, by purchase or exchange, then Callarus is at once held to be doing them no wrong; if I refuse, they make themselves out to be grievously wronged by him, and try to get an award or a compromise which will secure them my estate.

SELECT PRIVATE ORATIONS OF DEMOSTHENES. PART I. containing Contra Phormionem, Lacritum, Pantaenetum, Boeotum de Nomine, Boeotum de Dote, Dionysodorum. With Introductions and English Notes, by F. A. PALEY, M.A., Editor of Aeschylus, etc., and Supplementary Notes by J. E. SANDYS, M.A. Fellow and Tutor of St John's College, Cambridge. Crown Octavo, cloth. 6s.

"The fame of Mr Paley as one of the best practical Grecians of this age would alone be sufficient to secure attention for this book among the Head Masters of our Public Schools and the Tutors of our Colleges. . . . It contains, in the small compass of 240 pages, six of the speeches of the great Athenian orator, which are less commonly read than his 'Philippics' and the 'De Corona,' because they rank among his 'private orations.' And yet, equally with the greater speeches of the same orator, they will be found to illustrate not only the details of finance, loans, interest, banking, and other mercantile transactions in Greece in the time of Philip, but also the laws and general polity of that Athenian State, which was the model of the ancient world... We gather from the Preface that the task of illustrating these speeches from external sources, such as Boeckh's work on 'The Public Economy of Athens' and from other German books, has fallen upon Mr Sandys. We may add that the introductions prefixed to the Speeches, and also the English foot-notes, leave very little to be desired by the student in the interpretation of the author's meaning."

The Times, October 17, 1874.

"Mr Paley's scholarship is sound and accurate, his experience of editing wide, and if he is content to devote his learning and abilities to the production of such manuals as these, they will be received with gratitude throughout the higher schools of the country. Mr Sandys is deeply read in the German literature which bears upon his author, and the elucidation of matters of daily life, in the delineation of which Demosthenes is so rich, obtains full justice at his hands. . . . We hope that this edition may lead the way to a more general study of these speeches in schools than has hitherto been possible. . . . The index is extremely complete, and of great service to learners."

The Academy, Feb. 20, 1875.

"As might be expected, these speeches abound in difficulties. There are the technical phrases of Athenian law, and there is the difficulty arising out of the circumstance that we have only one side of the case. This naturally makes some of the speeches obscure. It is a good test, both of a man's scholarship and also of his acuteness, to put before him a passage taken from any one of them. Every Cambridge man who aspires to classical honours takes care to make their partial acquaintance. A really good scholar who had omitted to do this, would come to as much grief when confronted with such a passage, as he would were he to be plunged into an ode of Pindar which he had never seen. If he thinks of the classical tripes, he will be sure to be told that he must master at least a few of these Private Speeches. . . . For the study of these Private Speeches, even a good scholar wants the help of explanations and notes. It seems strange, that with the exception of a little volume, now out of print, by the late Mr Penrose, nothing of the sort has been hitherto attempted, even in Germany. We wonder that no Cambridge scholar thought of supplying a want which must have been much felt by candidates for classical honours. All the more will such men feel grateful to Messrs Paley and Sandys for the present volume. We can assure them that these two distinguished scholars have done much to enable them to dispense with the help of a private tutor. Before one attempts to read one of these speeches, he should get a clear idea of the subject-matter and of the general argument, or, unless we are much mistaken, he will make but little way with them. Evidently, this is the opinion of the present editors, and so they have prefixed to each speech a short introduction, explaining the nature of the case and the question at issue. And they give further help. To the foot-notes are added little summaries of each paragraph. We strongly recommend the student to read these summaries successively, at one time, before he begins the speech. If he does this, after having clearly got the introduction into his head, he will be well equipped for his work.....Messrs Paley and Sandys have put together a book which should be in the hands of all candidates for classical honours at Cambridge. A painstaking student will hardly require more help than he will find here supplied."

"Mr Paley and Mr Sandys..... come forward opportunely to meet the want of schoolmasters and schoolboys or University students, and offer them in the volume before us a selection of six private speeches which are intended to illustrate the questions and practices of Attic Law and Law Courts, together with the details of 'finance, mercantile transactions, loans, securities, interest on money, banking and mining operations, the laws of citizenship, &c.'—in fact, all those things which make up Boeckh's famous work on the Public Economy of Athens. If, as we learn from the preface, no similar work has yet been issued from the graves officina of Germany, there is the more reason why this work should receive encouragement. The text adopted is that of W. Dindorf in the Teubner Series (third edition), with a careful collation by Mr Sandys of the text of Baier and Sauppe, in the Zurich Oratores Attici; and in the volume before us the greater part of the notes are due to Mr Paley, while his colleague interpolates occasional notes for the sake of fulness or clearness, as well as renderings of particular passages borrowed from Professor Kennedy, all of which are distinguished by his own initial. It is not a little remarkable that the introduction as well as the text of each of the six orations making up this volume should owe so much directly and indirectly to the independent, illustrative, and elucidatory labours of two distinguished brothers of the Kennedy family."

ISOCRATIS ORATIONES. Ad Demonicum et Panegyricus (published in 1868). Second Thousand, 1872. pp. xlv + 169. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

"Isocrates has not received the attention to which the simplicity of his style and the purity of his Attic language entitled him as a means of education. Now that we have so admirable an edition of two of his works best adapted for such a purpose, there will no longer be any excuse for this neglect. For carefulness and thoroughness of editing, it will bear comparison with the best, whether English or foreign. Besides an ample supply of exhaustive notes of rare excellence, we find in it valuable remarks on the style of Isocrates and the state of the text, a table of various readings, a list of editions, and a special introduction to each piece.....Short summaries of the argument are inserted in suitable places, and will be found of great service to the student. The commentary embraces explanations of difficult passages, with instructive remarks on grammatical usages, and the derivation and meanings of words illustrated by quotations and references. With all this abundance of annotation, founded on a diligent study of the best and latest authorities, there is no excess of matter and no waste of words."—Athenæum.

"The style of Isocrates is discussed in a separate essay, remarkable for sense, clearness of expression, and aptness of illustration. In the introductions to the two orations, and in the notes, abundant attention is given to questions of authenticity and historical allusions."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"By editing Isocrates Mr. Sandys does good service to students and teachers of Greek Prose. He places in our hands, in a convenient form, an author who will be found of great use in public schools, where he has been hitherto almost unknown."—Cambridge University Gazette.

"This work deserves the warmest welcome, for several reasons. In the first place, it is an attempt to introduce Isocrates into our schools, and this attempt deserves encouragement. Then the editor has done everything that an editor should do. We have a series of short introductory essays; on the style of Isocrates, on the text, on the Ad Demonicum and on the Panegyricus. These are characterized by sound sense, wide and thorough learning, and the capability of presenting thoughts clearly and well."—Museum.

"It is in vain to attempt to detail the many beauties of this brilliant oration (the Panegyricus), or to give a just idea of the many-sided knowledge and research which Mr Sandys has brought to bear upon his edition of it."—Contemporary Review.

"The feeling uppermost in our minds, after a careful and interesting study of this edition, is one of satisfaction and admiration; satisfaction that a somewhat unfamiliar author has been made so thoroughly readable, and admiration of the comparatively young scholar who has brought about this result by combining in the task such industry, research, and acumen, as are not always found united in editors who have had decades upon decades of mature experience."—Saturday Review [12 Dec. 1868].
